100,000 WATCH TROJAN ELEVEN BEAT IRISH, 13-0

Southern California Is Aggressor for First Three Periods.

PASS AND PLUNGE NET TOUCHDOWNS

Warburton and Griffith Are Heroes; Only One Threat by Notre Dame.

Memorial Coliseum, Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Southern California outplayed Notre Dame for three periods and outsmarted the visitors all the way today to win the annual football battle between the Trojans and Ramblers, 13 to 0. A record crowd of 100,000 saw the home team win its nineteenth straight game and move a step closer to a second national championship in two years.

The crowd set a new attendance mark for football games this season in the Nation and was the biggest assembly ever to witness a game in Los Angeles. The record crowd saw a record performance. The Trojans made history for their seven-year football war with Notre Dame for this was the first time the Howard Jones team has won twice in successive seasons from its rival. Notre Dame, however, continued to hold a one-game margin for the series, four to three.

Warburton Hero of Game.

Southern California rode to victory on the flying feet of Irvine ("Cotton") Warburton, a pint-sized quarter back, a sensational catch of a forward pass by Bob McNeish and a series of well-placed, quick kicks.

Warburton, little but fast, started his team on the road to the first score in the second period by returning a Notre Dame punt 39 yards to the visitors' 44-yard line. The little fellow dashed to the 30-yard line on the next play. Notre Dame called a halt through the line then, but Homer Griffith on fourth down, with the ball on the 31-yard line, tossed a pass to McNeish, who made a sensational catch over his head 2 yards from the goal line and stepped over.

Jaskwhich Fumbles.

A quick kick in the third period was fumbled by Chuck Jaskwhich, Bob Erskine recovering for the Trojans on Notre Dame's 26-yard line. Southern California moved on to a second touchdown by successive running plays.

The home team used the quick kick to advantage throughout the game, booting the ball over the head of the Notre Dame safety men and three times grounding the ball inside the visitors' 5-yard line. Once the ball came to rest less than a yard from the goal.

Notre Dame's offense failed to function during the first three periods but came to life with a bang in the closing quarter, when it was too late.

House Move Seeks Cotton for Needy

Plan of Jones Would Turn Over 329,000 Bales to Red Cross.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Jones, of the House agriculture committee, yesterday introduced legislation to turn over to the Red Cross for relief distribution the remaining 329,000 bales of Farm Board stabilization cotton.

Jones said John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, had advised him that commitments had been made or are being made covering the entire 500,000 bales of Government cotton made available last session. Jones said he would press for early action on the legislation.

Of the 85,000,000 bushels of stabilization wheat allotted to the Red Cross last session, Payne advised Jones that on December 3, commitments had been made for 56,000,000 bushels. "There is no more stabilization wheat to turn over to the Red Cross," Jones said.

ZaSu Pitts Is Better, But Crisis Still Ahead

Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A "slight improvement" was noted today in the condition of ZaSu Pitts, motion picture comedienne, who underwent an intestinal operation last Wednesday at the office of her physician, Dr. Edwin Larson.

It was stated Miss Pitts was in no immediate danger, but the crisis of her admittedly serious illness would not be reached for two days.

FIVE RESCUERS LOST AFTER HUNTER DIES

Keeper of Light and Coast Guardsmen Are Missing, Along With Body.

Sandusky, Ohio, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Five men of a rescue expedition were believed lost in Lake Erie tonight after they had gone out in response to appeals for aid from a party of hunters, one of whom had been accidentally shot and killed.

Four men of the hunting party, all of Akron, managed to reach shore from Three Sisters Islands, near Camp Perry, but the body of their dead companion, also of Akron, was missing, along with George Ganther, lighthouse keeper at the West Sister Light, who had gone in a boat to their aid.

Four Coast Guardsmen who attempted to aid Ganther also were feared lost.

Capt. Ray Morton, of the Marblehead Coast Guard Station, said the hunters first appealed to Ganther after their own boat had been disabled as they rowed toward Ganther's lighthouse. They were bearing the body of their companion, killed when his dog pawed the trigger of his gun.

Ganther set out in a large boat, towing a smaller one. He reached the men and took aboard the body, but his own boat became disabled and he gave the smaller to the four hunters, who later landed safely.

Four Coast Guardsmen then tried to aid Ganther. After reports came that Ganther and the four guardsmen were lost, ten more Coast Guardsmen in five boats joined the rescue attempt. They were hampered by wind and high waves.

Poland Names Patek Ambassador to U. S.

Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Stanislas Patek, Polish Minister at Moscow, has been appointed Ambassador to the United States, it was announced today.

He will be succeeded at Moscow by Julius Lukasiewicz, at present Minister to Austria. It was rumored that Tytus Filipowicz, Ambassador to the United States, would become Ambassador to Japan.

HERRIOT IS SEEN URGING FRENCH MAKE PAYMENT

Due to Ask Parliament to Forward Sum, With Reservations.

ARMS ARE DISCUSSED AT CABINET SESSION

Premier Tomorrow Will Go Before Chamber and Tell of Debt Stand.

Paris, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Although Premier Herriot has yet to announce the fact, it was asserted in official circles tonight that he undoubtedly will recommend to Parliament that next Thursday's payment of interest on the French war debt to the United States be made with reservations.

These reservations, it was said, will follow those Great Britain is understood to be formulating. It was asserted the cabinet had arrived at this decision, but the reservations it will recommend have not been fully decided upon. One of them is likely to be that this payment shall be the last one until a general and final revision is made.

The cabinet held a five-hour session today, most of which was devoted to discussion of disarmament because of the imminence of decisions to be made at Geneva. The cabinet will meet again tomorrow morning, but the government's decision as to its recommendations to Parliament likely will not be made before the important session in the Chamber of Deputies on Monday, when France's final attitude will be settled.

Hunting for Formula.

Premier Herriot and two important committees of the Chamber of Deputies worked separately today in an effort to find a formula under which the chamber would be willing to vote for payment due the United States next Thursday. They were not wholly successful.

The foreign affairs and finance committees of the chamber worked out a resolution providing for payment—but only on the condition that the United States agree before Thursday to a debt conference which would liquidate the entire problem.

The resolution declared that the debt agreement with the United States was founded upon payments expectable from Germany through declarations of French representatives in Parliament, and also within the structure of the Young plan. It quoted a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon to President Harding on June 21, 1921, to the effect that "it is necessary to consider in a comprehensive fashion the total debt of the different countries, their

Hitler Calls Himself Sole Leader of Nazis

Berlin, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Adolph Hitler, deserted by two of his political lieutenants, issued a communique today emphasizing he is the sole leader of the Nazis henceforth.

He appointed Reichstag Deputy Robert Ley his representative in the party's propaganda department, and announced he would outline the party's new policies next week. Ley is one of the Nazis who, in 1931, participated in an attack on Ootto Wels, Socialist leader, in a Cologne restaurant.

Wine Backers Get Hearing; Antisaloonists Map Fight

Parley of Dry Groups Here Is Planned at Convention.

A conference of dry groups to mobilize their forces to defeat repeal and modification proposals will be called by the Antisaloon League of America, it was announced yesterday.

The board of directors of the league decided to hold the conference in Washington February 14-16. To it will be invited to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and church and social temperance groups.

The reawakening of the drys was evident at a "patriotic rally" held last night at the Calvary Baptist Church under auspices of the league.

There, three speakers called upon a large audience to carry forward again the cause against poisonous alcohol. They were Whiting Williams, social investigator; Ernest H. Cherrington, director of education of the league,

The wine men, to whom the beer men bow politely because of their votes, but with whom, the beer men want it understood, they don't care to associate closely under present conditions, yesterday brought up the end of the wet parade before the House ways and means committee, which is laboring to produce a measure modifying the drastic Volstead law.

Everything gracious that was said about beer on preceding days was said by the representatives of the wine makers yesterday with the extra adjuration that the natural alcoholic content of light wines was the result of the workings of God and nature.

Dynamite Hit by Train, But It Fails to Explode

New Castle, Pa., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—One little word—"if"—tonight stands between five men and death.

"If" the dynamite had exploded.

A Pennsylvania Railroad engine, pulling two cars containing 20,000 gallons of oil, crashed into a trailer loaded with dynamite. The trailer was demolished and the explosive was scattered in every direction. Miraculously, it didn't explode.

CAPITAL WITHIN GRIP OF SNOW AND SLEET

More Is Forecast for Today; Few Serious Accidents, However, Noted.

Snow turned to a steady, driving sleet last night, making automobiling hazardous and crusting firmly the winter overcoat of Washington and suburbs.

Icy streets and ice-covered windshields were responsible for numerous automobile accidents during the night, but because of caution used by drivers few of them were of a serious nature.

Washington awoke today to view real wintry surroundings, with ice and snow glistening everywhere, and with no immediate relief in sight. The forecast is for rain or snow today and tomorrow.

As if decorated for Christmas, the public parks and grounds lay beneath a sleet-topped carpet, with the shrubs providing crystal clusters.

Nearby Virginia and Maryland were nearer snowbound than Washington. From Culpeper and other points came reports of snow-choked roads, necessitating detours and work for the State policemen in retrieving cars floundered in the drifts.

Snow in varying quantities also spread over a large part of the Nation. The white crystals fell in all sections except Oregon and the southern tier of States. The fall was particularly heavy on the western side of the Appalachian Mountains, drifting in some places to 5 feet in West Virginia.

Travel and communications everywhere were crippled. Colorado sent a low barometric area slowly eastward. Another moved north from Tennessee and Kentucky, where a heavy sleet storm glazed the countryside. These disturbances promised to make travel uncomfortable over the week-end.

It was reported that some California points were colder than Point Barrow, Alaska, the northernmost town of the continent, where the temperature was 30 degrees above zero.

New York City was covered with a snow blanket said to be theaviest in six years. At Chicago the severe cold, snow and sleet threatened intense suffering and relief forces were organized to reduce distress.

The most serious accident caused by

3 Bodies Are Found In Wrecked Plane

One Is Identified as Iowa Pilot After Discovery on Texas Ranch.

Raymondville, Tex., Dec. 10 (A.P.). Three bodies, one of which was identified as that of Lawrence B. Schmitt, 26, Dewar, Iowa, pilot, were found tonight by hunters in a pasture on the million-acre King ranch, 20 miles east of Raymondville, amid the charred wreckage of a cabin plane.

Officers identified Schmitt through partially burned papers on his body. The plane was a Waco model, license No. 9435, plane No. NC-12452. The two other victims were not identified immediately.

Darkness hampered the investigation and Justice of the Peace Huffer decided to continue the inquest hearing until tomorrow. It was believed the plane crashed and burned either Thursday or yesterday. Wreckage was strewn for about 100 yards.

Insurance Man Kills Cashier and Himself

Bridgeport, Ill., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Lawrence Osborn, 38, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Bridgeport, was shot to death in his office today by a man identified as Sam Selby, an insurance agent, who then turned the weapon on himself and died a few minutes later from a wound in the head.

Authorities said a letter found in Selby's pocket said: "This is a matter of personal difference between us and could only be settled in this way."

U. S. WOULD AID IN STEPS TO END MANCHURIA ROW

Participation in Efforts for Peace Depends on Two Conditions.

FORMAL INVITATION DUE MOMENTARILY

Davis Believed Likely Choice of America to Sit In on Discussions.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The United States will participate in the efforts of the League of Nations to bring about peaceable settlement of the Manchurian difficulty between China and Japan on the following two conditions, it became known here yesterday:

First—That the problem be considered utterly apart from the terms of the league covenant which enjoins sanctions; and,

Second—That the committee and its functions in the dispute be acceptable to both parties.

Formal Bid Not Received.

The formal invitation to the United States has not yet been received here although cabled dispatches announced that the Committee of Nineteen was drafting the bid. Norman H. Davis is now in Geneva, nominally occupied with the proceedings of the disarmament conference. However, it is generally understood that Prentiss Bailey Gilbert, the American consul general charged with the liaison work between this Government and the league, is ceding to Mr. Davis the more complex details of the Manchurian dispute.

It is believed highly probable that in the event the United States be invited to sit with the commission of conciliation or any other body so designated by the league, it is Mr. Davis who will represent the United States.

Studied Reluctance.

The general tendency of the latest meetings of the League Assembly has been to divert to the Committee of Nineteen or some such group whose personnel may be announced later, the job of indicting or acquitting in the Manchurian dispute. A studied reluctance to do anything definite has been observed throughout the league's handling of the Manchurian dispute. Thus, the League Council referred the matter to the Assembly, the Assembly created a Committee of Nineteen and still no decision has been given on the occupation of Manchukuo and the shelling of Shanghai. Still another committee probably will be created, with American and Russian membership to make the final decision. This is the plan which was evolved by the British foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, with the idea of saving Japan's "face" and the league's prestige.

A resolution of condemnation proposed by Spain, Czechoslovakia, the Irish Free State and Sweden threatened to upset Sir John Simon's plan on Friday, but the danger was finally passed over by drawing a parliamentary veil over the resolution of the "little four" and referring everything to the special committee.

Some measure of gratification was current in the Department of State yesterday at the inclusion of the Lytton report in the instructions

Police Say Boy Admits Sending Theat Letters

Coldwater, Mich., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Richard Odren, 17, high school boy, was held for questioning here today in connection with a number of threatening letters county authorities say he admitted having sent to prominent persons, among them Gov. Wilber M. Brucker.

Officers who arrested the youth at his home today said he admitted he had written a leter to Sheriff Leon R. Italian Parade Attacks France and Jugoslavia

Milan, Italy, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Several hundred students paraded the streets tonight carrying signs which read "Down with France and Jugoslavia," and "Italians—Remember that Dalmatia is Italian." The demonstration followed alleged anti-Italian acts in Jugoslavia.

The parade broke up peacefully after an hour during which participants sang patriotic songs and shouted hostile phrases against Jugoslavia. A similar outburst was reported in Padova.

Treasury-Postal Appropriation Cut Sharply.

Public Building Fund Is Hardest Hit in Saving Drive.

(Associated Press.)

A sharply cut money bill, for the first time in many years carrying less than $1,000,000,000 for the Treasury and Postoffice Departments, was recommended to the House yesterday by its appropriations committee. The total in the bill is $32,912,904 less than was asked by the Budget Bureau.

Decreases that brought the total for these two big departments down to $961,416,000 for the next fiscal year extended even to the Coast Guard, although Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, the commandant, told the committee he expected greater rum-running activities in the next two years.

Hamlet said legalizing beer of low alcoholic content, which the House ways and means committee is now considering, "will have no effect whatever on the smuggling of distilled spirits into the United States from the sea."

Treasury Cut Larger.

But despite that testimony, the appropriations committee recommended that his branch's allotment for 1934 be reduced from the $28,172,000 for this year to $25,772,000.

The Treasury took by far the bigger cut of the two departments. When the House debates the bill tomorrow it will be considering allowing the Treasury $244,383,000 in 1934, against $270,200,000 asked by the budget and $350,000,000 appropriated this year.

The largest item in this decrease was taken from the public building allowance. Because relief and emergency expenditures on public buildings this year were not repeated, the committee could recommend $81,919,000 for 1934, which is $149,865,000 less than appropriated for 1953 and $10,940,000 less than the amount asked by the budget.

Postoffice Reductions.

The Postoffice, with its huge expenditures on domestic air mail and ocean mail, under the committee recommendation would get $717,033,000, a reduction of $88,906,000 un-

Hoover's Pennsylvania Plurality Is 157,592

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—President Hoover received a plurality of 157,592 over Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in Pennsylvania. Tabulation of the official vote of the November election, completed today, showed Hoover received 1,453,540; Roosevelt, 1,295,948. Norman Thomas, Socialist, polled 91,119 votes, as against his 1928 total of 18,647.

The vote for other presidential candidates was: William D. Upshaw, Prohibition, 7,319; Sterne L. Reynolds, Industrialist, 659; William Z. Foster, Communist, 5,658, and the Rev. James R. Cox, Jobless, 725.

CIVIL SERVICE BODY HITS MARRIAGE ROLE

Ouster Is Declared Unwise; Sweeping Changes Asked in Annual Report.

(Associated Press.)

Sweeping changes in appointment procedure for Federal jobs would be made if Congress carries out recommendations made yesterday in the annual report of the Civil Service Commission.

It recommended that postmasterships at first, second and third class offices be placed in the competitive classified servie.

This plan also was prescribed for collectors and deputy collectors of internal revenue, collectors of customs, marshals and deputy marshals, attorneys, United States Employment Service positions and posts under the District of Columbia government.

The marital staus provisions of the economy law, under which one of a married couple working for the Government is placed first on the list of those to be discharged, in case of reductions, and last on the list of those to be hired in case of expansions, was termed unwise.

"Merit alone should be the yardstick of measurement for employment in the Federal service," said the report.

Consolidation of Federal personnel agencies was asked. Flexibility for movihg employes from placse where work has temporarily decreased to those where it has temporarily increased was suggested.

11 Per Cent Cut Is Ignored in House Group's Report.

STAND MEETS SENATE FAVOR

Delay of Hoover In Offering Plan Is Explanation.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Further cuts in Federal salaries yesterday appeared to have been effectively blocked, temporarily at least, by action of the House appropriations committee in reporting the Treasury-Postoffice bill with the furlough plan, but minus the 11 per cent pay slash proposed by the President.

Appropriations Chairman Joseph W. Byrns said it would take a special rule for any member to offer a pay-cut amendment from the floor after the bill is thrown open for debate tomorrow. He discounted the possibility of such action. He regards the report as setting a pay policy for every appropriations bill.

Representative Byrns thinks the House will do nothing about a pay cut until the Senate has had a chance to pass on the Treasury-Postoffice measure and draft its own plan for economy, he said last night.

Not Likely in Senate.

Senate appropriations committee spokesmen, however, see little prospect of pay-cut action from that side of the Capitol. Senate Economy Chairman Hiram Bingham said the Senate's hands would be tied by House failure to write a pay slash into the bill. The Senate has no power to initiate legislation on an appropriations bill unless the House "opens the door," said Chairman Bingham.

Both Senator Bingham and Chairman Tasker L. Oddie, of the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations subcommittee of the Senate, said they were "delighted" with the House committee's report. Senator Oddie said he was sure his committee would take no action toward a further pay cut.

From Representative Byrns came the first explanation of why the President's pay-cut proposals were ignored in the House committee report.

"In the first place," said the House appropriations chairman, "the Treasury-Postoffice subcommittee had concluded its hearings before it received any word the White House was making any such recommendation.

"Our first information came in the President's budget message. Having

Honolulu Harbor Work Is Proposed

Improvements Would Cost $792,000 and Call for Channel.

(Associated Press.)

Improvements to the harbor at Honolulu to cost $792,000 were recommended to Congress yesterday by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army Engineers.

Brown said the Board of Engineers had deemed it advisable "to provide for an entrance channel 40 feet deep at mean low water and 500 feet wide."

The project also calls for the widening of the harbor basin by cutting off a strip of Sand Island about 320 feet wide. It would be necessary to replace existing depot facilities of the Bureau of Lighthouses to make way for the improvements. The report also recommended an annual allotment of $3,000 for maintenance of the project after its completion.

Cash and Playthings Continue to Arrive at Santa Claus' Headquarters for Needy Children of Washington; Appeals for Help Also Pour in.

William (Billy) A. Blanchett, of 422 Butterworth street, 6 years old, arose bright and early yesterday morning with a look of determination in his blue eyes.

He had arrived at a great decision. In his shining toy bank reposed sundry pennies and nickels Billy had been saving for his own Christmas shopping. Many were the gifts he had planned, choice bits of merchandise, with the love of the little lad wrapped securely into each of them.

But, when he heard that The Washington Post had established a Post Toy and Doll Fund to bring Yule-tide joys to needy children of Washington, Billy determined on an act of real sacrifice. He would give his savings to the Toy Fund. Out of the bank came the copper treasure—bright pennies each with the head of another unselfish spirit—Abraham Lincoln—upon it. It totaled the amazing sum of $1.84, a real fortune in Billy's young eyes.

He was no "skimmed milk" giver. The Fund should have it all, every precious penny.

Down he trudged to The Post Building where, in the library under the care of the Santa Claus Lady, Billy thought he had stumbled into the good old saint's workshop by mistake.

A soft nose was thrust into his hand, he looked down and saw a lovely white Christmas dog—Sandy Orkney Terrier Gordon, guest host for Ding-How. Sandy's tail was wagging the most friendly welcome. They became chums at once, had their pictures taken together and Billy in-

CONSUL IS ASSAILED IN GRILL OF EINSTEIN

A communication asking for the immediate dismissal of the American consul general in Berlin for the "utterly stupid and insulting treatment accorded Prof. Einstein" was received yesterday by Secretary of State Stimson from the Freethinkers of America.

Secretary Stimson declared, after receiving a report of the incident from Berlin, that he believed Prof. Einstein's questioning at the consulate had been "conducted civilly." He said American officials had acted properly, but that their purpose had been misunderstood by Einstein.

Text of Communication.

The Freethinkers' missive read:

"We wish to protest against the utterly stupid and insulting treatment accorded Prof. Einstein by the American consul general in Berlin.

"Prof Einstein is not a political agitator, but a great scientist. His intellectual achievements make him a citizen of the world. The United States should be proud that he honors us with a visit.

"It is quite probable that the American consul general in Berlin doesn't know the difference between a political agitator and a great scientist, and for that reason we ask his dismissal."

Send Cable to Scientist.

At the same time the Freethinkers addressed a cable to the German scientist. It stated:

"Please do not judge the people of this country by the stupidity of some of its subordinate officeholders or the narrow-mindedness of some of its officials.

"Your intellectual achievements make you a citizen of the world. You are above racial ties and national boundaries. Your name alone is your passport for any country in the world. Be assured that the intelligent people of the United States will not only welcome you, but feel honored by your presence. The Freethinkers of America send their greetings."

Both communications were signed by Joseph Lewis, president of the Freethinkers.

Einstein Sails, Hoping Quiz Incident Is Closed

Bremerhaven, Germany, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Before sailing today on the steamer Oakland for the United States, Prof. Albert Einstein said he hoped no summary action would be taken against the American consular official who subjected him to questioning about his political beliefs when he applied for a visa early this week.

The professor is going to California, where he will resume his research work at Mount Wilson Observatory, and later to Princeton, N. J., where he will become head of the school of mathematics of the Institute for Advanced Study.

Before catching the Bremen train from Berlin the professor said that so far as he was concerned the questioning at the consulate was a closed incident. The questioning resulted apparently from a protest by the Woman Patriot Corporation, which asked that the eminent scientist be barred from the United States, asserting that he was a Communist.

"The trouble with hearings of that kind," the professor said, "is that you don't realize until some time has passed just where the inquisitor is trying to get under your skin. I suggest in the future consuls put pins in their victims' chair so they will feel stuck from the beginning."

As the train pulled out the professor raised his finger with mock sternness and said to his daughters: "Now, be sure to behave while papa is away."

American Berlin Groups Defend Consul General

Berlin, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The American Chamber of Commerce, the American Women's Club and the American Club jointly cabled the State Department in Washington tonight protesting against criticisms of Consul General George Messersmith over the Einstein visa incident.

Mr. Messersmith was absent from the consulate when the famous scientist was questioned about his political beliefs, the cable said, adding a tribute to Mr. Messersmith's efficiency and courtesy.

Russian Reds to Start Another Party Cleansing

Moscow, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—A cleansing of the ranks of the Communist party to drive out doubters and lukewarm Bolshevists will begin on January 1 and continue through 1933 in all parts of the Soviet Union, it was announced today by the central committee of the Communist party, under direction of Josef V. Stalin.

Meanwhile, acceptance of new members will be halted immediately. The "chistka," or cleansing, already has been started in portions of the northern Caucasus and Ukraine. In accordance with the results of previous "cleansings," it is probable that between 25 and 30 per cent of the membership of 2,000,000 will be expelled.

Rum Flood Seen If Canada Ends Fight on Smuggling

Expected Repeal of Law on Ship Clearance Would Increase Importation Into Great Lakes Ports, Treasury Report to Congress Declares.

(Associated Press.)

Recent indications that Canada might withdraw its cooperation with the United States in the suppression of liquor smuggling has had its echo in a report of the Treasury Department to Congress.

The Treasury Department, in the course of making routine requests on the House subcommittee for appropriations, stated it had received "reliable reports" that Canada's 1930 law prohibiting the clearance of ships with liquor cargoes was expected to be repealed.

Commander J. M. Gorman, Treasury Department intelligence officer, appearing recently before the appropriation committee, predicted that a "flood of liquor from Canada into United States ports on the Great Lakes" would result from abolition of the Canadian law.

"The passage by Canada of legislation prohibiting the clearances of vessels for the United States with liquor cargoes, which became effective in June, 1930, has practically eliminated organized smuggling of distilled spirits on the Great Lakes. There is considerable activity in connection with the smuggling of beer and ale and the vast majority of seizures made on the Great Lakes are cargoes of beer and ale.

"Recent reports from Canada indicate that strong pressure is being brought to repeal this legislation * * * and this movement has been greatly accentuated by developments in the national election in the United States.

"Reliable reports have been received which State that the repeal of this legislation is expected. In the event that the ban on the clearances of liquor cargoes to the United States from Canada is lifted, such action will result in a flood of liquor from Canada into United States ports on the Great Lakes and the situation which existed in this area prior to June, 1930, will again be brought about."

The first public word of Canada's threat to withdraw its cooperation came when Secretary of State Stimson sent a note to the United States Supreme Court which represented a protest by Canada at the seizure of the Mazel Tov, Canadian registered vessel, off the coast of Massachusetts. The Mazel Tov case was under consideration of the Supreme Court at the time Secretary Stimson referred the Canadian note to the tribunal.

PLEAS FOR WINE ARE MADE BEFORE HOUSE COMMITTEE

motherly style, smiled into the committee room and occupied a front-row seat to hear the presentation of the representatives of the wine grape growers of her home State, and at the end disclosed, in a pleased whisper, to friends about her that "we've made a very fine showing." Mrs. Kahn, incidentally, voted for the straight-out prohibition repeal resolution put up to the House last Monday by Speaker John Garner.

The hearing yesterday was notable for the absence of representatives of the brewing industry, to whom Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia (Republican), New York, gave a verbal lashing the day before, but the departing brewers, who had said their pieces and cited an amazing array of figures showing the extraordinary ramifications of the beer industry, were given a parting flick by Representative Wilbur M. White (Republican), Ohio, for the apparent reappearance of the beer lobby.

This time it was Representative Carl Chindblom (Republican), Wilbur M. White (Republican), Ohio, who voted in favor of the Garner repeal resolution. This time it was Representative Carl Chindblom (Republican), Illinois, who was defeated in the last elections, who said the brewers were there by invitation of the committee. Representative Heartsill Ragon (Democrat), Arkansas, one of the few Democrats who refused to follow Speaker Garner on the repeal resolution, interjected that he had no knowledge of any invitation having been sent them.

Fear Ruling of Courts.

The wine men are afraid that their product will be left out of the modification measure approved by the committee. The beer men and others among the antiprohibitionists, would like to see wines left out. They are afraid that the courts will declare the modification measure unconstitutional if wines of 12 to 14 per cent are declared legal while the eighteenth amendment remains in the Constitution. But the wine people have threatened that unless the beer bill carries light wines along with it then the beer advocates can't expect support of those members of Congress from the wine growing sections. All of which is being done very politely but none the less in a manner sufficiently definite to make clear just what is meant.

Despite the overwhelming revulsion of sentiment about prohibition, which the wets say was clearly exemplified in the recent election and the drys say was not, it has become increasingly evident before the ways and means committee that the producers of wet goods, however united they may have been once, are treading lightly and speaking softly, each interest trying to do its own stuff.

Rufus Lusk, of Washington, representing the Crusaders, a prohibition reform organization, jumped into the ruckus and what he said wasn't entirely palatable to any one. His organization stood for outright, complete and unequivocal repeal of the prohibition amendment and its attendant evils of Federal usurpation of State prerogatives, he said.

But, and he made his qualification a big one, his and other wet organizations would rather see the whole question of modification of the Volstead law postponed for ten years rather than to see enacted a measure which would result in delaying or defeating the efforts to repeal "the entire mess."

A model bill for the District is to be drafted by Mr. Lusk with the aid of a committee of men and women which he will form this week. This bill is to be prepared before Christmas and given to Representative Loring Black (Democrat), of New York, who will introduce it in the House and seek to have it favorably reported before Christmas by the District committee, of which Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, is chairman.

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, who once was a bartender, added a touch of fighting spirit to the soft presentation which has been made by the wets. He said 4 per cent beer wasn't intoxicating, that a tax of $5 a barrel would prohibit legal beer to the workingman and that the old-time saloon was infinitely better than the present-day saloon, born of prohibition.

"There are no limitations today," Mr. Palmisano said. "In the old days I wouldn't sell anything to an intoxicated man. Today they buy liquor whether they are drunk or sober, whether they are under age or not, and this includes young women and girls who never would have been permitted in a decent saloon in the past."

Ready to Make Reduction.

The Maryland Legislature, he said, was ready to reduce the beer emporium tax from $1,100 to one-third of that. A tax of $2 a barrel was all that should be imposed on 4 per cent beer. It was all the traffic would bear and keep beer within reach of the poor man. The Volstead law should be amended to permit all malt liquors and these should be taxed according to alcoholic strength.

Former Representative John Philip Hill, of Maryland, who said he appeared as an individual citizen, unpaid and unimprisoned, urged liberalization of the Volstead law and approval of manufactured light wines. He said that the court decisions in his famous test case, in which he was acquitted, left no doubt that wines of 11.68 per cent were not in violation of the law. But homemade wines were not as good as wines produced by experts under best conditions and the proof of that was that he had most of his homemade wines in his closets, although he made some more each year and they weren't bad, at that.

Representative Clarence F. Lea (Democrat), of California, estimated that a tax of 20 cents a gallon on light wines, which properly should be included in the bill, would yield $20,000,000 in revenue. Marion De Vries, attorney for the Grape Growers League of California, scouted the opposition of the beer makers to inclusion of the light wines. The two had always been hooked together in court decisions and otherwise, he said.

Representative Emanuel Seller (Democrat), of New York, was given a rebuke by Mr. Lusk, who said that Mr. Seller's proposal to legalize bottled highballs was an attempt on the part of the distillers to open up the sale of hard liquor before the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

E. M. Sheehan, of San Francisco, director of the Grape Growers League of California, said prohibition had paralyzed the grape growing industry. Rene Fourault, of Bordeaux, France, representing W. A. Gants Co., Inc., of New York, said imported light wines should be permitted. Representative Hill later agreed with him that imported wines should be permittted, implying the virtues of imported clarets and other light wines. There were several other witnesses heard by the committee, which will resume its sessions, with prohibition supporters before it, at 10 a. m. tomorrow, in the committee room on the third floor of the House Office Building.

Distribution Brought Up.

Representative Ragon again brought up the question of what should be done about distribution of the beer it was proposed to make legal, suggesting development of undesirable things unless adequate safeguards were put in the bill. Mr. Ragon cited Washington, for which Congress acts as town council, to make his questions specific.

"If you are going to treat beer as nonintoxicating, but surround its production and distribution with extraordinary restrictions, then you are confessedly writing a legislative untruth," Mr. Lusk said. "You will not get the expected revenue from beer if you surround its distribution with too many restrictions.

"We are opposed to the old-time saloon. That does not mean that we are opposed to what might be called beer taverns."

"But you can't repeal the eighteenth amendment if you permit return of the saloon, can you?" Mr. Ragon asked.

"I doubt it," replied Mr. Lusk.

"Then don't you think we should handle all of these questions, hard liquor, wine and beers, on which you agree there should be varying restrictions, at one and the same time?"

"I don't say it wouldn't be better, but the House stopped that last Monday when it voted against the Garner repeal resolution."

"Oh, we've had twelve years' discussion of this subject," Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, interjected in response to a reference to "orderly" procedure by Mr. Ragon.

CUMMING REPORTS DISEASE DECLINING

Surgeon General Says High Standards Maintained During Depression.

(Associated Press.)

A declining disease rate was reported yesterday by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming in the annual report of the Public Health Service.

Research experiments which furnish effective weapons in the never-ending war on disease were described: Freezing of plague bacilli for nine years at a stretch, taking mosquitoes for fact-finding airplane rides, and taking notes on the whole life of a typhus-carrying flea.

A new low record for the death rate for tuberculosis was reported, 66.3 per 1,000 in 1931 as against 68.8 in 1930, the previous low.

Smallpox incidence was but 24.4 cases per 100,000 population, the lowest since 1916.

A slightly higher diphtheria rate was recorded in 1931 than in 1930. Typhoid fever showed a slight increase in prevalence in the first half of 1932. A serious epidemic of poliomyelitis in the summer and fall of 1931, heaviest in the Northeastern States, was noted.

Health Level Good.

Health conditions as a whole, as shown by mortality rates, were said to have been "maintained at a very high level during the past 2½ years of unfavorable economic conditions."

However, the surgeon general pointed out that "extensive data on any incipient untoward health conditions caused by hard times are not available."

So complete was the quarantine administration during the year there was no instance of the importation from abroad of any quarantinable disease into the United States. Inspection was made of 18,048 vessels, 2,407,154 persons on ships, 88,152 travelers at border stations, 8,798,598 persons in local interurban traffic and 17,387 persons arriving at airports of entry.

Twenty per cent of all planes arriving from tropical countries brought mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes Like Plane Ride.

To seek means for guarding against yellow fever importation, the service took mosquito carriers on flights, and proved that 20 to 50 per cent of those liberated in Panama and Central America liked the plane ride well enough to remain aboard to Texas.

"Altitudes of 15,000 and 16,000 feet seemed to have no deleterious effect on the yellow fever mosquito," said the report.

Another experiment on 4,000 children in ten States resulted in the announcement that "contrary to the assertions of many persons opposed to pasteurization for one reason or another, there is no difference in the growth-promoting efficacy between heated milk and raw milk."

ANTISALOON LEAGUE MAPPING STRATEGY

and Sergt. Alvin York, World War hero.

Financial support was also sought. While religious music was being sung by a quartet of Tennessee Mountaineers, the audience was asked to contribute to the league.

Envelopes, each with an attached pencil and containing a blank check were passed out. The contributions, it was stated on the envelopes, would be used in a "two-year educational campaign fund for national and world prohibition."

In his address Mr. Williams declared that the absence of the saloon has saved America from riots and bloodshed. He declared that "it has been one of the chief factors in the inability of agitators to break up our form of government."

Mr. Williams based his assertions on studies of unemployed conditions which he has made by mingling directly with the Nation's "men out of work."

Representative C. Ellis Moore, of Ohio, and Bishop James Cannon, jr., will speak at a rally to be held by the league this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the First Congregational Church.

Independent Candidates To Fight Wets Planned

The national women's committee for education against alcohol yesterday invited prohibition leaders to meet in Washington tomorrow and discuss the offering of independent candidates for offices, "when neither of the majority parties offer drys."

Included in the leaders asked are Dr. F. Scott McBride, Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Bishop James Cannon, jr., Mrs. Henry Peabody and Mrs. Ella A. Boole.

In commenting on the proposal, Mrs. William Tilton, chairman of the group, declared that drys need a new strategy to enfranchise the millions of drys, by running independent candidates of their own.

Woman Gets $25,000 Damages in Utility Suit

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A verdict awarding Mrs. Mary Silver, of Dayton, Tenn., $25,000 damages was returned today by a jury in United States District Court here against the Virginia Public Service Co.

Mrs. Silver sued for $50,000, claiming that in June, 1931, she was thrown against a brake handle of a street car in Newport News and received permanent injuries. J. Martin Perry, of Staunton, associate attorney for the utilities company, immediately made a motion to set aside the verdict. Judge John Paul, of Harrisonburg, said he would take the motion under advisement and announce his decision later.

U. S. Dry Agent Shoots Virginia Man 5 Times

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Dec. 10.—Shot five times by a Federal prohibition agent last night, Joseph Diggs, colored, of Stuartsdraft, lies in local hospital, his condition undetermined.

Federal Agent H. B. Hook states that the man opened fire on him when he attempted to arrest him at scene of operation of a still near Stuartsdraft. His first shot shattered a pistol in the hands of the suspect and four other shots took effect in chest, neck, back and arm.

FISH FAVORS REVIVAL OF WAR DEBT BOARD

New Yorker Against Default But Says U. S. Should Grant New Hearing.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., tonight declared he is opposed to cancellation of war debts, "but agrees with President Hoover that the Debt Refunding Commission should be re-created, in order to provide an adequate agency to consider the pleas of Great Britain and the other nations, for a modification of the debts on the basis of capacity to pay."

In addressing a Republican club meeting, he said he spoke as senior Republican member of the House committee on foreign affairs in the next Congress.

"It would be not only unfair and discourteous not to grant at least a hearing to these nations with which we are on friendly terms," he said, "but it would be the height of folly to force them into a position which would lead to repudiation.

"I do believe that the British war debt settlement on an 80 per cent basis was fairly harsh ten years ago, and today, in view of the financial economical condition in England (it), tends to break down their financial credit and hope for eonomic recovery.

"The United States must, in this emergency, show a conciliatory and cooperative spirit toward the other nations of the world and pursue a policy that is fair to ourselves and our foreign debtors.

"But under no circumstances should we place ourselves in a position of forcing repudiation and the economic, commerial and financial collapse of Great Britain, thereby not only losing our greatest foreign market, but bringing about a world collapse of credit and trade.

"The Congress of the United States can not afford to continue to be deaf, dumb and blind to the economic facts known the world over and refuse to grant a hearing on war debts to the great nations of the world."

He called for support of a general sales tax and a tax on beer.

Mrs. Eva Mushbach Dies in Alexandria

Appendicitis Operation Is Fatal to Pioneer Resident.

Mrs. Eva Gwynn Mushbach, widow of the late Capt. George A. Mushbach, died at an early hour yesterday morning in the Alexandria Hospital, from a complication following an operation for appendicitis on December 2. She was a daughter of the late Capt. Bennett F. Gwynn, and Eleanor Parker Gwynn, of Prince Georges County, Md.

Mrs. Mushbach, who was one of the best known residents of Alexandria, is survived by several nieces and nephews, among them Mrs. Johnson Hellen, Gwynn Dent and Dr. William C. Gwynn, of Washington, and S. Magruder Dent, of Greenwich, Conn.

The funeral will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow from her late residence, 307 South St. Asaph street, conducted by the Rev. Hugh J. McFadden, assistant pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial, which will be private, will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Takoma Park Put In Postal Guide

Community League Drive Successful; Better Mail Service Expected.

After many years of endeavor, the Community League of Takoma Park, Md., has succeeded in getting the name of the village in the United States Postal Guide, it was learned last night.

Residents of the area expect prompt delivery on mail, because of this accomplishment.

As the postoffice which serves the area is in the District, mail which was addressed to Takoma Park, Md., formerly often met with delay, due to the fact that the town was not listed in the postal guide.

FARM PARLEY ASKS SOVIET RECOGNITION

Some of Visitors Begin Trip to Homes in Snow After Forming Program.

The hardy band of sons of the soil who trekked here to formulate farm relief demands of Congress, early last night completed their conclave in Typographical Temple and laid plans for the return trip home in the face of a whirling, wet snowstorm.

Recognition of Soviet Russia and immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus were demands favored in resolutions adopted by the farmer delegates yesterday afternoon.

Even as falling temperatures began to glaze the sloppy highways leading over the mountains west of the Capital, some of the "covered wagon" trucks of the farmers began the journey back home.

The corporal's guard committee was left behind to appear before congressional committees considering agricultural relief legislation. This group will begin tomorrow to testify before the Senate agriculture committee.

Most of the 250 farmer delegates to the conference had sojourned at the tourist camp in Potomac Park. The nucleus decided not to face the sleety path over the roads out of the Capital and slept here, hoping for fairer weather today.

All forms of sales taxes were opposed by the farmers and resolutions embodying this stand received prolonged handclapping and vocal demonstrations from the delegates.

The recognition of Russia was urged in a measure which said "the damming up of foreign trade, especially exports, has greatly contributed toward the inability of farmers to market their products."

Russia, the resolution said, can be given "equal recognition and facilities for trade enjoyed by other foreign countries."

At the Capitol yesterday, House members from eight Northwestern and Middle Western States agreed to support legislation giving the Secretary of Agriculture a free hand in dealing with Federal seed, feed and crop production loans to farmers unable to meet payments this year.

New Mexico Broker Willing to Return

Emerson Watts Denies He Profited in Failure of His Concern.

San Francisco, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Talking freely today for the first time since his arrest here Thursday night, Emerson Watts, 34, former New Mexico State treasurer, said he is perfectly willing to return voluntarily to Roswell. He is charged with misappropriating funds invested by customers with his brokerage firm.

In his cell at the city prison the man, who, in 1929 and 1930, held the purse strings of New Mexico's treasury, said he was willing to return to New Mexico to stand trial at his own expense, but he doesn't want to return in the custody of officers.

As for the charges Watts declared: "I did not steal anyone's money. What losses occurred resulted from circumstances which caused an untimely liquidation of my business. I did not profit in any way from the transactions which brought losses to my customers, but, on the contrary, I suffered heavy losses personally."

Herbert E. Everett, 69, Dies in Massachusetts

Newburyport, Mass., Dec. 10 (A.P.). Herbert Edward Everett, for 37 years professor of fine arts at the University of Pennsylvania, died today. He was 69. He had retired from teaching more than a year ago and had been living with his daughter here, Mrs. Richard A. Noyes. He was born in Worcester and studied at the Boston Art Museum and the Beaux Arts in Paris. He was a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in Rome, Italy, and had given courses at Cornell University and Smith College.

Surviving are his widow, the former Catherine Childs, of Chicago, and two daughters, Mrs. Noyes and Mrs. Mortimer Graves, of Washington, D. C.

Mother and 3 Children Found Dead by Father

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Paul Guteres went to his Brooklyn home from work today and had to break the outside door down to get in. He also found the kitchen bolted. Bursting in, he found his wife lying on the floor, a 4-month-old baby clasped in her arms, and her other two children lying beside her. All were dead. Six jets of the gas range had been turned on.

Relatives said Mrs. Guteres had acted strangely since the birth of her last child.

SOUTHLAND IN GRIP OF COLD AND SNOW

One Death Is Reported in Arkansas as Storms Add to Suffering.

New Orleans, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Snow, sleet and hard cold rains brought damage and discomfort to widespread sections of the South today.

A few scattered spots had mild weather, but the cold wave which swept in from the Northwest earlier in the week continued to hang on stubbornly in a half dozen Dixie States. No immediate general relief was in prospect, the Weather Bureau here predicting continued rains and below-normal temperatures in the Gulf region until toward the end of next week.

The sleet storm in the mid-South disrupted power and communication facilities, blocked highways and halted traffic in a few cities.

Hitch-Hiker Found Dead.

In Arkansas a hitch-hiker, tentatively identified as W. E. Rogers, of Tupelo, Miss., was found on the highway near Osceola, dead from exposure. At Jonesboro sleet and ice prevented selection of a successor to Gov.-elect J. M. Futrell as chancellor for the Twelfth Arkansas District when a bar association meeting had to be canceled because of blocked highways.

The State Game and Fish Commission asked farmers to scatter grain on the frozen ground for birds, expressing fears of large bird losses if the State remains ice-covered more than 36 hours. The thermometer dropped to 28 at both Little Rock and Fort Smith. More snow was predicted.

In Memphis and vicinity, where temperatures dropped below freezing, power lines were down, street car service was crippled and train schedules disrupted as sleet and ice damage was counted at several thousand dollars. A 1-inch rain was general over Tennessee.

Snow in Southwest.

Snow fell in Texas and Oklahoma and a sleet storm swept over north Louisiana and into Mississippi, leaving a sheet of ice that accounted for several injuries. Many north Mississippi roads were closed and trees broke in many sections under their weight of ice. Communication lines were torn down and the Clarksdale municipal power plant estimated damage to its properties at $2,000, with the street-lighting system disrupted. Similar conditions existed at Greenville, Miss., where a truck driver was slightly hurt by a falling electric light wire.

In contrast, New Orleans had a freak spell of summer weather today. With freezing or below reported in nearby localities, the city basked under a thermometer reading of around 72 when a disturbance in the gulf sent warm winds up the river. Florida also had clear, warm weather generally.

TROOPS SENT TO END VERA CRUZ UPRISING

Agrarian Rebels in Control of State; New Reform Laws Blamed.

Mexico City, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The nation's eyes were turned toward the State of Vera Cruz tonight, where the federal government is rushing from 6,000 to 10,000 troops, to quell threats of an agrarian rebellion.

A report to the home office of a large business concern operating in the State of Vera Cruz said the situation, as a result of the conflict between certain classes of farmers and the government, made business very difficult.

The report estimated that "80 per cent of the renters are not paying their rent, some because of the critical situation brought about by lack of work or business and others because they are taking advantage of state laws. Meanwhile the municipal and state authorities are demanding prompt and full payment of taxes.

"The new expropriation laws have halted progress. Abuses and assaults are the order of the day and there are practically no guarantees for any one. In the rural sections, which are in the complete power of agrarians, the situation is still worse. Individuals are hunted and shot down daily like deer. The tendencies of the government are openly Communistic, so much so that spokesmen do not even trouble to deny it."

Trouble in the province arose chiefly from new reform laws. The government is attempting to place the land in the hands of individuals and break up the power of large landowners.

Seal Sale Totals $482.

The first week of the Christmas tuberculosis seal sale in Fairfax County yielded $482.44, with replies received from only one-third of the appeal letters sent out. Mrs. Warren N. Watson, county chairman of the tuberculosis committee, states that the returns are most encouraging for this year, as the total last year was only $1,275 for the entire campaign. She states that more funds are needed this year than last.

IN MEMORIAM

GOODMAN—In sad and loving memory of my precious and wonderful mother, MRS. T. C. GOODMAN, who passed away December 11, 1930, at Shanghai, China, following an automobile accident. EDITH GOODMAN WALKER.

D. C. UNDER SEASON'S FIRST SNOW; MOST OF NATION COLD

the snowfall in Washington occurred early last night at Georgetown road and Delray avenue in Bethesda, in which the car of Charles L. Glover, 29, of 221 Delray avenue, was struck by a street car. Glover was traveling north on Georgetown road and turning into Delray avenue, police said. The street car, in charge of Motorman C. A. Wade, of 3224 Wisconsin avenue northwest, crashed into the automobile head-on, dragging it nearly 40 feet, and finally pinning it against a telephone pole.

Lacerations of Legs.

Glover, who is keeper of the greens at the National Women's Country Club, was taken to Georgetown Hospital by Bethesda Rescue Squad. Physicians said he suffered lacerations of the legs, a possible fracture of skull, and possible fracture of the pelvis. His condition was said to be undetermined.

Betty McGregor, 12, of Edmonston, Md., suffered serious injuries last night when struck by the car of Nelson Elgin, of 1803 Connecticut avenue, in front of her home. She was treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts, bruises and possible internal injuries. Elgin was arrested on a charge of reckles driving.

Slipping from a second story roof from which he was sweeping snow John Small, 22, colored, of 1637 Kramer street northeast, late yesterday fell on an iron spiked fence and a spike pierced his shoulder. He was treated as Casualty Hospital.

Arthur Busby, 26, of 1737 H street northwest, suffered a fracture of the left leg when he was knocked from a street car loading platform at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, by the car of Warren H. Eaton, 31, of 1010 C street southwest.

Nine-year-old Thomas Fogarty, of 313 First street southeast, suffered a badly cut finger when his hand was caught under the runner of his sled while coasting near his home yesterday afternoon. He was taken to Providence Hospital where his finger was treated and bandaged.

Maryland Forbids Mayer Stock Sale

Attorney General Acts to Halt Operations of Bridge Film Firm.

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Mayer Pictures, Inc., an organization said to be headed by Rudolph W. Mayer, today was ordered by the attorney general of Maryland to cease stock sale operations in this State, pending the outcome of an investigation which will be made.

The attorney general's order said it appears that Mayer Pictures, Inc., "has been employing and is about to employ a scheme or artifice to defraud, in the sale of stock to residents of Maryland."

Mayer, who identified himself as the brother of Louis W. Mayer, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, told the deputy attorney general of Maryland at a hearing recently that his company planned to make series of 26 short films, in which bridge was the focus of comedy and social elements. He said he planned to release the pictures in theaters as a new medium of advertising.

Snow Is General Through Virginia

One Inch at Roanoke and More Than 2 Reported in Charlottesville.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Piedmont Virginia and the Valley was under a blanket of snow at noon today, and weather officials predicted that the rain and sleet, general in other parts of the State since early morning, would turn to snow by nightfall.

The morning snow extended as far West as Roanoke, where a blanket an inch deep covered the ground at 10 a. m., and mail planes arriving in Richmond reported snow in the air almost all the way from Washington.

The deepest blanket was reported from Charlottesville, where the fall since before 3 a. m. had amounted to 2½ inches.

New Member Wins Lion Cubs.

Aberdeen, Wash., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—What to do with two lions for Christmas! Representative-elect Martin Smith is doing the wondering. The cubs have arrived from Africa and will be presented Christmas Eve by Julius Goldberg, of Kelso, who vowed he'd make the offering in the event of Smith's election.

RESIGNED OFFICIAL OF R. F. C. ENDS LIFE

Philip W. White Found Shot to Death in Denver Hotel Room.

Denver, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Missing since Thursday, Philip W. White, 31, a former official of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was found shot to death in a room in a downtown hotel tonight.

Authorities said the Denver and Washington attorney apparently had killed himself some time Friday night. A note explaining his identity and asking that H. N. Cring, of Denver, be notified was found on a table near the body.

A fountain pen, penknife, glasses, business cards and $32.25 were arranged neatly on the table.

White had been missing since 2 p. m. Thursday. Investigating officers were told he carried no luggage to the hotel, but paid two days' rent in advance. He left shortly after registering and did not spend Thursday night at the hotel. He was not seen there again until Friday.

White, here from Washington to visit his mother, Mrs. Elvira B. White, dropped from sight Thursday afternoon after telling her he planned to visit a friend's office. Mrs. White told police he had recently recovered from a nervous breakdown.

White was appointed counsel for the self-liquidation loan department of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation last June. Prior to that he was associated with a New York law firm. He was graduated from the University of Colorado School of Law in 1924.

Officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation reported last night that Philip W. White resigned as a member of the legal staff of the corporation about a month ago.

Chitwood Is Candidate For U. S. Attorney Job

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Joseph H. Chitwood, of Roanoke, said today that he was an applicant for appointment as United States district attorney for the Western District of Virginia. His was the first public announcement of candidacy for any of the major patronage jobs that will fall to Democrats in the Western District with the change in administration.

Mr. Chitwood served in the district attorney's office for seven years under the Wilson administration. For six of those years he was the sole assistant of the late Richard Evelyn Byrd, and for one year was the district attorney.

SUSPECT CONFESSES HE KILLED DETECTIVE

Philadelphia Mystery Solved as Iceman Describes Altercation.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Six hours after his capture, George (Sugarfoot) Green, Negro former convict, confessed late today, police said, that he killed Michael G. Croskey, a city detective, with a screw driver sharpened like an ice pick.

Croskey was stabbed to death last Wednesday night as he was putting his automobile away in a garage at the rear of his home.

Detectives said the confession came after questioning by Robert Forgy, a Negro policeman.

"I might as well tell the truth," Assistant Superintendent of Police Joseph Le Strange quoted Green as saying. "It won't take me long to tell you the whole story. I killed Croskey."

Le Strange said Green added:

"I was driving my ice wagon along the street when the hub of one of my wheels accidentally brushed the fender of a motor car which was standing at right angles to the street, in front of the garage.

"The man in the car jumped out, ran after me and pulled me from the ice wagon. A fight followed, in which I stabbed him with the screw driver."

Green, a fugitive for three days, was trapped in the cellar of a West Philadelphia restaurant today, following a hunt that extended through Philadelphia and Chester, Pa.

Croskey was stabbed to death a few days after he started a new and secret investigation into the unsolved killing last January of Norman R. Bechtel, Mennonite Church worker.

Bechtel was knifed in much the same fashion as Croskey, and because the slain churchman's stolen automobile was found abandoned in the neighborhood where the latest tragedy took place, police at first tried to link the crimes.

Green is a native of Richmond, Va.

NATION'S GREAT HIT BY GRIDIRON SATIRE

Leaders Bear Brunt of Wit at Annual December Dinner of Club.

Again summoning characters from the pages of literature to point a finger at politicians' foibles, the Gridiron Club last night at its annual December dinner, spared no one in its shafts of satire.

The promises of the incoming Roosevelt administration bore the brunt of the fun-making, although there was a share for President Hoover and his departing associates.

The President was guest of honor and chief speaker of the evening. The veteran Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, was the only other speaker.

Gifts for President.

Under the invariable rule of the club that reporters are never present, their remarks are not of record. To the President were presented a large bronze copy of the Gridiron pin and a permanent invitation to all Gridiron dinners.

Ears of dignitaries waxed scarlet as they gazed into the mirror of journalistic observation held up to their characters and public acts.

Burlesque, drama and musical comedy all contributed their part in the performance of newspapermen stationed in Washington that enlivened the courses of the dinner.

Besides the President and Senator Watson, who were introduced by the president of the club, Walker S. Buell, correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, official guests at the speakers' table included Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, every member of the Cabinet, the Ambassadors of France, Germany, Great Britain, Belgium and Cuba and the Minister from Bulgaria.

Democratic Promises Hit.

Democratic promises in the campaign were depicted in an act with music, entitled "The New Deal in New Amsterdam." This showed the bargaining of the intrepid explorer, Franklin van Roosevelt, with the Indians under Chief Curry, of Tammany, for Manhattan and anything else he could get.

For Manhattan Explorer van Roosevelt offered to trade "the finest line of campaign promises you ever saw—glass beads, little mirrors, brass checks and spangles"—and, by way of emphasis, to the accompaniment of "O Promise Me," a soloist among the explorers sang:

"We promise you the best of everything:
Prosperity and happy days we'll bring.
Forgotten men will be remembered now,
And that new deal will come to pass, somehow—
We'll bring the rainbow down for all to share
The pot of gold we think—perhaps—is there.
Oh, anything on earth you want to do
We promise you, we promise you."

Van Roosevelt exhibited a handful of glass-bead necklaces and other ornaments to the Indians as so many campaign promises—"a farm without a mortgage, a man without a note, a bank without a frozen asset and a home without a worry."

Repeal and Firewater.

The Indians were visibly impressed, but still not satisfied until Van Roosevelt offered a promise of "repeal" and exhibited a bottle of "firewater."

"The country is yours," Curry finally agreed.

An auction of the effects of "the late Republican party" represented Charles D. Hilles, of New York, as auctioneer and Postmaster General Brown as his assistant. Ring a huge dinner bell and wave a red flag as they would, no bidders appeared. Whereupon Brown, inspired, said to Hilles: "Let's buy in the assets ourselves."

"That's the idea," said Hilles. "What are the assets?"

"We'll look in this box and see," was Brown's reply.

To the discomfiture of both, the box was empty

Brown was first to recover.

"Anyhow, we've got the bell and the flag," he said, by way of encouragement, and, ringing and waving, they left the stage together.

The famous mellow-drama, "Away Down South," showed a group of deserving men and women Democrats back at the Old Homestead, which turned out to be the Nation's Capital on March 4, 1933. "Hooey" Long finds a mortgage on the Old Homestead of "twenty billion."

"Why that's almost what it was when we were here before with Cousin Woodrow," remarked Col. Julep, who said, mortgage or no mortgage, "it's great to be home."

Problems Before Congress.

Two of the most urgent problems before Congress, namely prohibition and international debts, were found not to be without their humorous facets, as interpreted by members of the club, who, for exmaple, presented "'The Merchant of Venice.' one of the first plays on debt cancellation ever written by an Englishman." The European interpretation of Uncle Sam as Shylock was travestied before the faces of the Ambassadors of Great Britain, France and Belgium, whose nations were depicted as the three suitors in the famous casket scene.

Said Portia:

"Behold, there stands the caskets, noble creditors.
If you choose that wherein's contained my likeness on a dollar
Shall straight your war debts be absolved.
But if you fail, without one more speech, fair Europeans,
You must come across immediately.
Who shall choose first?"

Britain opens the silver casket.

"What's this?
An autographed picture of Ogden Mills
Presented me is a schedule of December 15 payments."

California Champagne for France.

France chooses gold and gets a champagne bottle marker made in California. To Belgium goes the leaden casket. Within she finds a tariff speech of Charles Curtis asking an embargo against Texas jackrabbits.

Uncle Shylock entered exclaiming:

"To have my debts I've sworn an oath to every Hearst editor."

Bidding Uncle Shylock be merciful, the gentle Portia made this plea:

"The quality of mercy is not strained,
It only seems so in presidential campaign years.
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon platform pledges.
It is twice blest; it blesseth both party candidates.
Therefore, Shylock, though collection be thy plea consider this:
That in the course of collection, none of us
Shall see full payment.
We do pray against repudiation
And that same prayer doth teach us all to realize
We probably won't get ten cents on the dollar."

Shylock remonstrated it was not written in the bond nor in the platforms. Convinced at last, he asserted he was" only chasing rainbows," doffed his shabby brown cowl and revealed himself in his true guise as Santa Claus.

"Come, let's all go to Geneva," he bubbled, and the cast left the stage to the tune of "Jingle Bells."

The departure for Kansas of the present Vice President was succinctly epitomized by two bell-boys in his hotel. One said he was going back to his Indian tribe because they were his most loyal friends. "How come?" inquired the other. "Indians don't vote," was the tolerant reply.

"Retreat From Moscow."

One of the most elaborate musical numbers of the evening was entitled "The Retreat From Moscow." About Gens. Smoot and Fess were gathered a disconsolate group, attired as survivors of Napoleon's famous retreat in tattered uniforms and with torn flags and broken guns.

A scene in the "beer clinic," the setting for which very much resembled the Supreme Court, showed the possible complications resultant to the amendment of the Volstead act so as to permit three per cent beer. The nine pathologists in the dignity of their black robes, sat on the case while leaders prominent on both sides of the wet and dry question presented musical testimony as to the innocuous or intoxicating qualities of the about-to-be-legalized beverage.

Dr. Copeland sent in his Guinea pig to be tried with an injection of the beer to determine whether its alcoholic content was too high for the citizenry. After the pig got his shot of beer, Dr. Hiram Bingham sang:

"That beer is beer, is plain as plain can be,
Take foam from beer, you might as well drink tea,
Take gin from ginger ale and you will find,
The courts will hold that you have lost your mind.
Take foam from beer, take foam from beer,
Take foam from beer, take gin from ginger ale and you will find,
The courts will hold that you have lost your mind.

"That Fess is Fess, arithmetic explains,
Take Smoot from Fess, and Capper still remains,
Take Dill from Dale, and we have been taught,
Remainder none, that is remainder nought.
Take Smoot from Fess, take Smoot from Fess, take Smoot from Fess, and as we have been taught, Remainder none, remainder none, that is remainder naught."

Custodian of Beer Keg.

The custodian of the beer keg represented Dr. William E. Borah as believing "that alcohol is a narcotic poison, leading to maddening delusions, general weakness, depression, profound sleep, coma and utter loss of a sense of the proprieties. I think it was the Lord Chancellor, performing a slight operation on a bad case of Magna Charta, who said that dipsomania and habeas corpus were the same thing."

Members representing Senators Norris, of Nebraska; Johnson, of California; La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Cutting, of New Mexico, all garbed as little boys appeared in a brief travesty entitled "The Four Horsemen of the Avalanche."

A club announcer expressed the desire to introduce two distinguished guests. John N. Garner, Speaker of the House of Representatives, arose when his name was called and took a bow. A moment later the announcer called upon the Vice President-elect of the United States, and Mr. Garner took another bow.

Then upon the stage ensued a topical duet between Garner the Speaker and Garner soon to be Vice President, in which the Speaker counseled the Vice President-elect as to his conduct after March 4. The latter, boasting his fame as a two-gun man, admitted he did not fire a shot in the campaign. Unlike "Charlie Curtis," he said, he would "take my meals at home" when Vice President. He hoped he would be permitted to sleep and not be aroused, as presiding officer of the Senate, if there happened to be a vote on the sales tax.

Others in the list of distinguished guests among the more than 400 diners included Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, whose band and orchestra furnished the accompaniments; Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee of New York City, Govs. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, Gov.-elect Walter V. McNutt of Indiana, Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Owen D. Young, Atlee Pomerene, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Pierre duPont, a host of outstanding senators and representatives and many men prominent in the official, literary, business and scientific life of the country.

The President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of State, the Ambassador of France, the Ambassador of Germany, the Ambassador of Great Britain, the Ambassador of Belgium, the Ambassador of Cuba, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Labor, and Minister from Bulgaria.

ROOSEVELT CONFERS WITH 3 RAIL CHIEFS

Also Studies City Petitions for Power to Effect Economies.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Mixing national affairs with State problems, Gov. Roosevelt today discussed railroad conditions with three executives of important rail systems. The executives were F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central; John J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Carl Gray, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific.

The President-elect motored from Albany to his Hyde Park home, driving through a swirling snow. The railroad heads, accompanied by William H. Woodin, president of the American Car & Foundry Co., an old friend of Mr. Roosevelt, were at the Krum Elbow estate when Mr. Roosevelt arrived.

"We discussed the railroad situation in general, and from the executives I obtained current information," remarked Mr. Roosevelt. No specific information as to the trend of the conversation was given out by either the President-elect or his visitors.

Petitions Are Considered.

Before leaving Albany and after the conference with the railroad men, Mr. Roosevelt devoted his time to consideration of petitions from New York communities which have asked the special session of the Legislature for legislation to enable them to curtail expenses.

In his message to the special meeting of the Legislature, which convened yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt called for a study of the New York City charter to effect changes which have been advocated by a number of leading New Yorkers, including Alfred E. Smith, former governor.

The Legislature will resume its deliberations Monday night. The governor is hopeful that the Legislature will complete its work next week.

Will Work Today.

Today's meeting with the railroad executives was the latest of a series of conferences Mr. Roosevelt has had with rail heads. During the campaign, he twice met with executives of transportation systems. He devoted one of his major speeches, at Salt Lake City, to the railroads.

Mr. Roosevelt intended to devote all of Sunday, after attending church in the morning, to the State situation. In addition to calling for a study of the New York City government to simplify its mechanicism, the governor asked the law-makers to repeal mandatory salary statutes, to enable the city administration to reduce salaries of municipal employes.

The governor will return to Albany tomorrow night, or Monday morning.

Woodring Blocks State Appointment

Court Halts Filling Office by Lieut.-Governor During Absence.

Topeka, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—An attorney acting in behalf of Gov. Harry H. Woodring, who is absent from the State, obtained a court order today restraining Lieut. Gov. J. W. Graybill and E. A. Cornell, secretary of state, from attempting to fill the vacancy in the office of State superintendent of public instruction.

Questioning the authority of Gov. Woodring to act in his official capacity while outside of Kansas, the secretary of state declined to issue a commission to W. T. Markham, of Yates Center, named by the chief executive as successor to the late Superintendent George A. Allen, jr.

Gov. Woodring said last night he had instructed an attorney to secure an order restraining Lieut. Gov. J. W. Graybill and E. A. Cornell from filling the vacancy caused by the death of George A. Allen, jr., State superintendent of education. Immediately after the Gridiron Club dinner last night, at which he was a guest, Woodring planned to leave in order to arrive in Wichita tomorrow.

Reynolds Will Held Up Pending Birth of Child

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Probate of the will of Smith Reynolds will be held in abeyance pending the birth of a child to his widow, Libby Holman Reynolds, as a result of action taken today by Surrogate James A. Foley. Surrogate Foley appointed the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, as temporary administrator of the late tobacco heir's estate.

Reynold's will, executed shortly before his marriage, left the bulk of his estate to blood relatives and contained no provision for Miss Holman. Following upon birth of the child, a guardian will be appointed to protect its interest in the probate proceedings.

MISSISSIPPI'S SALE TAX MEETS BUDGET

People Clamor for Higher Levy Rate as Cash Exceeds Estimate.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Mississippi's sale tax is replacing tax sales and balancing the budget of a State that a year ago was in severe financial straits, officials said today.

The first State to adopt the sales tax now has but one worry, they claim—so popular has the sales tax been that some citizens want to raise the prevailing rate of 2 per cent to 5.

The sales tax has extended the base of the burden of taxes so that for the first time in the history of Mississippi, the Negro, who comprises 51 per cent of the population, contributes money to the government.

The tax applies to almost any purchase a citizen makes, and to the incomes of professional men, excepting clergymen.

In theory, the State does not collect from the consumer, but from the retailer or professional man. The retailer is allowed $100 a month exemption on his gross sales, and it is up to him either to pay the tax out of his own pocket, or collect it from the customer.

The State's revenues for the first 11 months of the year were $50,000 more than the Legislature estimated would be collected all year. It has been estimated the excess over the legislative estimate may reach $300,000.

The State's revenues, collected to December 1, totaled $9,820,175. Of this amount, approximately $1,200,000 was collected from the 2 per cent gross income tax, which has been effective since May 1.

A tax system that exacted 75 per cent of the State revenue from property previously had threatened sale of 45,000 Mississippi farms and approximately 11 per cent of city and town property, officials said.

"We who found it difficult to launch this experiment, now are finding it even more difficult to secure for it ample time within which to prove itself before it is extended," Gov. Conner complained.

Churchill Scores U. S. Constitution

American Liberty Charter Blamed for War Debt Problem by Briton.

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The American Constitution is blamed for the war debts problem by Randolph Churchill, son of Winston Churchill, a political writer in the Sunday Dispatch, in an article appearing in that newspaper tomorrow. "This much-vaunted institution is now exposed as one of the most impotent instruments of government which has ever been devised," young Churchill wrote.

The Sunday Observer in a weekly survey of the world says relative to the debt situation: "One capital truth has emerged. So much depends upon American public opinion that if the world economic conference is to have any chance of success it must meet in Washington and not in London."

The Sunday Times makes a suggestion that the British government attempt to convene the world economic conference at the earliest possible moment, for consideration of debts and trade problems.

Engineer Gets 2 Years In Counterfeiting Plot

San Francisco, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Jose Mayola, mining engineer of Buenaventura, Colombia, was sentenced to two years in jail and fined $2,500 by Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure today after a jury had convicted him on charges of conspiring to manufacture and distribute counterfeit Federal Reserve gold notes.

Edward A. Campbell, Vancouver, B. C., a contractor, was convicted on two counts of the indictment charging him with possession of the counterfeit money and forging the notes. Judge St. Sure took under advisement a plea for a new trial and postponed sentence until December 19, when Albert A. Armstrong, San Francisco lithographer, who pleaded guilty and testified for the Government, also will be sentenced.

Dr. Schurman to Talk On Philippine Freedom

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former president of Cornell University and head of the first Philippine Commission, will address a public meeting in McMahon Hall of the Catholic University on "Philippine Independence" at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow.

The speaker was appointed as president of the civil commission in 1899 by President McKinley, and the report of the group presented to Congress in four volumes was the first exhaustive study of the islands.

Mrs. Roosevelt, on Opera Stage, Asks Jobless Relief

When Facing People in Need, Something Must be Done, She Tells Metropolitan Patrons; Gets Numerous Appeals for Assistance.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who these days is perhaps getting as many appeals for help as any other individual in the United States, believes that "when you come face to face with people in need, you simply have to try to do something about it."

"It doesn't impress you so strongly, perhaps, unless you actually see it," she told a matinee audience at the Metropolitan Opera House in an appeal on behalf of the emergency unemployment relief committee, which is trying to raise $15,000,000 for New York City's jobless.

"But when you come face to face with people in need, you simply have to try to do something about it.

"A man came into my office not long ago and told me he couldn't go home until he had a job. There was no heat at home, no food, and even the gas had been turned off. He had not worked for months. And there were five children.

"'Don't you see,' he said, 'I can't go home again without a job.'"

Observing that the committee was still one-third short of its total, Mrs. Roosevelt added:

"After all, this is still the richest country in the world. We can not allow any one to want for the bare necessities of life."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her appeal between the first and second acts of "Simon Boccanegra," today's matinee.

BOAT DEATH CHARGE WEIGHED AT PARLEY

Question of Accusing Guy in Wanderwell Case Is Near Decision.

Long Beach, Calif., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Police and district attorney's deputies tonight began a "final conference" on the question of issuing a formal murder complaint against William James Guy, 24-year-old adventurer held in the mysterious shooting last Monday night of Capt. Walter Wanderwell.

The Times said it had learned a complaint will be issued on the basis of a grudge by Guy against Wanderwell, arising in their travels together, and conflicts in testimony of witnesses as to Guy's whereabouts at the time of the shooting.

Among those requestioned were Edward De Larm, aviator, and his wife, at whose Glendale home Guy was living. They said he was there at 8 p. m. Monday, but they were uncertain as to whether he had departed later. The De Larm home is about 30 miles from the pier to which was moored the yacht Carma, where Wanderwell was slain. The shooting took place about 9:15 p. m.

The carcass of a cat owned by A. P. Hart, neighbor of the De Larms, was exhumed today when it was learned the animal was killed early Tuesday by a shot from the direction of the De Larm home.

Officers recovered the bullet, of larger caliber than that of the .22 rifle which was the only weapon found when the De Larm home was searched.

Mrs. Aloha Wanderwell, the widow, explaining that she was unable to undergo the ordeal, today postponed until tomorrow the burial at sea planned for her husband's body.

Besides a new search of the yacht for clews, detectives brought two members of the crew, James Farris, navigator, and Eric W. Owen, to headquarters for questioning and instructed the Coast Guard to prevent any attempt to move the craft. They declined to disclose what they sought to learn from Farris and Owen.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The first detachment of marines to come out of Nicaragua since the general evacuation order issued some time ago, landed in Norfolk today aboard the transport Henderson. The Henderson, after discharging her passengers here, will soon return to Corinto, Nicaragua, to complete the evacuation of marines.

Tampa, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The University of Miami was placed in receivership today by Federal Judge Akerman. The court named Raymond Pawley, Miami business man and a member of the board of regents, as receiver. The university was founded in 1925 and had an enrollment last year of 566 students and 58 faculty members, headed by B. F. Ashe, president.

Seattle, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The liner President Madison sailed from Seattle for the Philippines today with Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of President Roosevelt, who will spend the Christmas holidays with her eldest son, Theodore Roosevelt, jr., governor-general of the islands. A reception committee of Republican women met her at the Union Station when the train bearing her from the East arrived.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Constructed for the purpose of capturing rumrunners, the U. S. S. Galatea first of seven new Coast Guard boats, was launched today at the yards of the John H. Mathis Shipbuilding Co. The boat is 165 feet long and is powered with two Deisel engines. It will be manned by 38 men and 4 officers. Mrs. Aline Chaulker, wife of Commander L. T. Chaulker, christened the ship with a bottle of water.

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Ward T. Van Orman, 38, wife of the many times national and international balloon racing champion, died here today of pneumonia after an illness of a week.

Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The Bachelors Club, a group of socially prominent young men who still cling to single blessedness, has a new member. He is Allan Hoover, son of President Hoover. His election to the club was announced today.

TREASURY-POSTAL BILL CUT SHARPLY

der the current year and $7,094,000 less than the budget estimates.

There was a reduction of $5,000,000 under budget estimates, to $100,000,000, in the allowance for mail transportation by railroads and messengers; of $1,000,000 under budget estimates, to $19,000,000, for air mail service. On this subject, the committee said:

"In the case of this class of transportation as in ocean mail the committee is of the opinion that subsidy service should be conducted at the lowest possible cost and, in consonance with the reductions which are being made in other directions, there should be curtailment in this as in other appropriations."

3-Cent Stamp Defended By Brown at Hearing

(Associated Press.)

The Postoffice Department still believes the 3-cent stamp is a money maker.

Appearing before the House appropriations subcommittee considering the annual supply bill for the Treasury and Postoffice Departments, Postmaster General Brown said, however, the experts were a little off in their estimates on what the 3-cent rate on first-class mail would yield.

The Postoffice figured it would yield an additional $130,000,000 during the present fiscal year. The year won't be over until next June, but Mr. Brown told Chairman Byrns:

"If we had the 2-cent rate, we would be $94,000,000 short."

He explained that this estimate was on the basis of returns already in and that he meant the 2-cent rate would yield about $94,000,000 more, all things considered, than would have been returned if the 2-cent stamp were still the motive power for the average letter.

The Postmaster General told the committee that the gross deficit this year would probbaly be about $136,000,000, with a net deficit of about $80,000,000 for "purely postal operations."

ADDITIONAL PAY CUT BLOCKED BY HOUSE SUPPLY BILL REPORT

taken on testimony at all on the cut, and having given the matter no study, we thought it would be highly improper to incorporate it in the bill.

"Furthermore, we knew the House had voted down last session an 11 per cent salary reduction identical with the President's proposal. The furlough was substituted at that time, we saw no reason to run counter to the wishes of the House."

Byrns added that he thought the Senate economy committee, having held extensive hearings on the economy act, was the logical place for further cuts, if needed, to originate. The Senate plan, attached to the Treasury-Postoffice bill, could come back to the House for a vote, he said. But so far as the House appropriations subcommittees are concerned, no testimony will be taken on the 11 per cent slash, he made clear.

On two other major points the House appropriations committee yesterday overrode the President's budget recommendations affecting Federal employes. First, language covering "administrative" furloughs was broadened to allow bureau officials to order additional furloughs whenever their offices become overmanned. Second, the committee wrote into the bill over the President's objection a stipulation that the rate of pay of any furloughed employe can not be reduced by action of any wage board. This already is a proviso of the economy act.

In broadening the "administrative" furlough provision, the committee explained this action gave officials power some thought they did not now possess, to furlough surplus workers even though funds are available to pay them.

The committee said this provision would "distribute the available work among the whole number and thus avoid the dismissal entirely from the service of some of them."

Economy act changes written into the bill on recommendation of the President include the following:

Written authority of the President for filling of vacancies will no longer be necessary.

"Enlistment allowances" to Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard enlisted men for reenlistment within three months of discharge will be discontinued for 1934.

Stationery Limit Kept.

The committee refused to accept Budget Bureau recommendations that the limit placed last year on individual stationery allowances for senators and representatives be removed. The general economy act restriction on printing and binding expenditures and blank paper purchases was lifted, on suggestion of the Budget Bureau.

Although the committee's report may not abate the pay cut fervor of some of the members of the House who have been agitating the question, it considerably restricts their field of action.

In the face of growing sentiment against a slash, only one member has threatened to bring out a bill—Representative Harold McGugin (Republican), Kansas. He would go the President one better by proposing a cut that, when combined with the furlough's 8 1-3 per cent reduction, would average 25 per cent of all salaries.

It is pointed out, however, that McGugin's bill and any other that might be introduced would be referred to the House expenditures committee, which has never been favorable to pay cuts, and last session tabled four such proposals.

Much of the criticism leveled at the President's 11 per cent proposal is directed at its failure to provide the same cut for military and naval personnel it imposes on civilian workers. Representative Byrns listed this as one of his committee's objections to the President's recommendations.

Chairman Byrns estimated savings under revised economy act provisions included in the bill at $105,781,228. This sum includes $5,000,000 he said would be saved by suspension of reenlistment allowances.

"Many proposals have been made for the modification of the economy act," his committee reported to the House.

"In its interpretation and in the application of its various provisions during the current fiscal year several hundred decisions have been rendered by the General Accounting Office. The committee felt that if it undertook to enter upon even a limited modification of the act or the sections proposed to be extended, it would embark upon an endless task that would seriously delay the appropriation bills.

"Even though there may be injustices or inequalities in some of the provisions of the present act and in the sections proposed to be extended, their application and administration is now fairly well settled by the administrative and accounting officers, and further revision would perhaps result in adding other complications and difficulties of administration."

Senator Bingham, whose Senate economy committe has been hearing testimony on economy act revision, yesterday called another session for tomorrow, when the King bill for consolidation of disbursing activities of government will be called up.

Later his committe will summon heads of the 58 bureaus scheduled for regrouping under the President's reorganization plan.

Federal employes are planning a number of meetings in opposition to further pay inroads. The Federal Bar Association will hold a meeting of its executive council and committee chairmen at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night at the University Club. A mass meeting will be held Friday night in the Raleigh Hotel ballroom, under auspices of the District Federation of Federal Employes Unions.

Cuts Attacked by Shaw.

At a meeting last night of Interdepartmental Lodge, No. 20, President John Arthur Shaw, of the American Federation of Government Employes, told members a further pay cut "is equal to saying there will be no end of the depression before July, 1934."

Mr. Shaw delivered to the lodge a charter from the national organization.

"There has been a cycle of cutting salaries," he told the group. "It has to end sometime. Some one must stop it. Business had its chance. Banking interests had their chance, but they did not take it. I believe it's up to the Federal Government to bring it to an end. Congress must state here and now there shall be no reductions in Federal wages."

FILIPINO'S REQUEST STIRS RESENTMENT

Mission here and brought immediate reaction at the Capitol that freedom without a transition period to allow the islands gradually to become economically as well as politically independent was out of the question.

Chairman Bingham, of the Senate Territories committee, which favorably reported the pending Hawes-Cutting bill, granting full independence in atbout eighteen years, said he would "fight to the last ditch in the interest of the Filipinos themselves" any measure providing immediate freedom.

He added that independence had been the "battle cry" of Filipino leaders for years and "now that they were about to get it they don't want it because they know it means their economic ruin."

Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, who, with Senator Hawes (Democrat), Missouri, wrote the bill now before the Senate, said congressional sentiment for gradual independence had progressed to a point where it would be useless now to try to get through one granting immediate freedom, regardless of what the mission here thought about it.

However, Cutting said he would prefer immediate independence if the Senate retained amendments adopted Friday such as that by Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, cutting down the bill's limitation on free-duty sugar imports from the islands from 850,000 tons to 615,000.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, will move reconsideration of the Long amendment when the Senate resumes debate on the bill tomorrow. But there is strong sentiment for strict limitation, especially among the sugar State members and those coming from States producing cordage and products competing with the islands' coconut oil. It was thought likely yesterday that all of these senators would combine to work for the strongest kind of restrictions on free-duty imports pending complete freedom.

Meanwhile, speculation was indulged in over President Hoover's attitude, since the general impression is that some kind of independence measure will pass the Senate this week and be sent to conference with the House. The latter passed a bill last session granting independence in eight years.

Republican leaders felt Mr. Hoover's action would depend on the form in which the measure is approved. They withheld definite views as to the President's attitude on the pending measure, as it is still in a formulative stage.

London Shopping Brisk.

London, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—London tonight was in the midst of a mad Christmas shopping rush not equaled since the predepression days of 1928. Low prices appeared to be one of the main causes of the brisk business.

RIVERS AND HARBOR TRANSFER OPPOSED

Garner Finds House Hostile to Hoover Shift of Flood Control.

(Associated Press.)

If Speaker Garner knows his Congress, one of President Hoover's recommended regroupings of Federal agencies, that involving rivers and harbors work, is not likely to become law.

The Speaker said yesterday as numerous House members were seeking support for resolutions they intend to introduce to prevent the shifts, that "the sentiment of Congress is against" transferring rivers and harbors and flood control work from the War to the Interior Department, as Mr. Hoover proposes.

Garner added that opponents of some of the things the President suggested "probably will get through some action" to forestall the changes. Adoption of a resolution by either House or Senate would be sufficient.

The Speaker recalled that Congress for ten years had repulsed every effort to take the rivers and harbors work away from the War Department.

"Of course," he said, "it's a slightly different problem now. Heretofore, Congress would have had to act to make the change. Now Congress will have to act to keep the change from being made."

Meanwhile, chairmen of three committees in the House prepared to study Mr. Hoover's recommendations. Representative Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, who said he would introduce a resolution to prevent the rivers and harbors transfer, unless some one else did it first, predicted the expenditures committee, of which he is a member, would oppose the transfer when it meets early this week.

Chairman Cochran, of the committee, said he would "see what the committee wants to do about these belated recommendations."

Chairman Mansfield, of the rivers and harbors committee, predicted his group would "do something about rivers and harbors" and Representative Wilson (Democrat), Louisiana, also was ready to ask the flood control committee he heads to meet.

HERRIOT EXPECTED TO URGE PAYMENT

situation and financial resources, in order to formulate a project of payment of which the interested countries can reasonably assure execution."

Cites Hoover's Action.

The resolution adds that "a modification of circumstances was provikod by the generous initiative of President Hoover on June 2 131, and this was the work of the American Government itself." It dcelared that international transfers without counterpart in goods is one essential cause of the world economic crisis, and said that an international debt conference is necessary in conjunction with the projected world economic conference.

In conclusion, the resolution said that the Chamber of Deputies "can authorize payment of sums coming due December 15 only if previously the United States accepts assembling of an international conference before any new payment is due.

Members of the delegation which presented this resolution to the premier quoted him as saying it tended toward the government's intentions, although he made reservations because negotiations still are continuing with England over a policy acceptable to both nations.

Doubt Is Expressed.

Doubt was expressed in French circles about whether the premier would approve the project of obtaining acceptance in advance from the United States for the conference proposal. No official statement on this point was forthcoming, however.

On Monday the premier will hold a cabinet session, after which he will go before the chamber to explain the position of the government toward the Thursday payment. For several days he has been attempting to arrive at a method of payment which would overcome objections on the part of certain groups of deputies.

After the chamber has heard the premier's exposition, the session will be suspended to permit the various groups to determine the attitude they will adopt.

The debate by the deputies probably will last into Monday night and may go over until Tuesday morning.

Du Pont Urges Payments.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Lammot du Pont, president of the Du Pont Co., advocated payment of foreign debts to the United States today in a talk before members of the Chemist Club here. His talk was the first of a series of winter symposia before this club.

"I can not see the difference," he said, "between an individual and a national debt. If national debts are not paid, creditor nations will be hurt, but the debtor nations will be hurt worse.

"The debtors who do not pay can not expect to borrow again from the same nation, and they can not expect to borrow from anybody who hears that they failed to pay."

SOVIET-JAPANESE NOTES REVEAL ROW

Moscow, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The foreign office published tonight a sharp exchange of notes between the Soviet and Japanese governments, in which Moscow categorically refused to surrender the Manchurian insurgent general, Su Ping-Wen and his army or to prevent their departure from the Soviet Union.

Gen. Su recently fled before Japanese forces in the Manchuli region in northwest Manchuria and crossed the Russian border.

H. M. Kharakhan, assistant people's commissar for foreign affairs, said in the exchange that Russia not only was unable to comply with the Japanese request, but it could not entertain the question of extradition inasmuch as Russia has always maintained strict neutrality in Manchurian affairs.

Asked Surrender December 8.

Discussions between the two governments began on December 8, when Japanese Charge d'Affaires Amau requested the foreign office to hand over Gen. Su and his army in the interests of order in Manchukuo. He said the Japanese government is responsible for the peace and safety of the newly created state and that if Gen. Su were freed from the Soviet Union he could threaten its safety, especially if he made his way back to China.

Mr. Amau argued in the exchange of notes that Gen. Su should not be regarded as a representative of an independent faction at war with Manchukuo, but as a mutineer against that state. To this M. Kharakhan rejoined that such an argument was not understandable in view of the official Japanese mission sent to Machevskaya, in Soviet territory, to negotiate peace with Gen. Su.

M. Kharakhan reminded the Japanese charge d'affaires that the U. S. S. R. had intervened with Gen. Su on behalf of Japanese citizens he had captured and had obtained their release.

Demand Correct Way.

"The correct and gentlemanly way in which Gen. Su acted in this matter should be sufficient answer to the request for his extradition after his defeat and the question of his internment should not even arise," the Soviet foreign office said.

The Soviet assistant commissar for foreign affairs stated there were "tens of thousands" of mutinous white Russians in Manchukuo and Japan who are carrying on an armed struggle against the Soviet Union and notwithstanding that the Soviet government has never demanded their extradition and the Japanese government has never offered to hand them over.

Mr. Amau visited M. Kharakhan twice on December 8 and the second time he withdrew the original request for surrender of the general, but sought to have him interned in the U. S. S. R. and to settle the fate of his army by a Soviet-Japanese agreement.

Mr. Amau called again at the foreign office today and reiterated his government's request for internment.

Florida Student Writes Threat Notes for Thrill

Gainesville, Fla., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Gerald Smith, 25, University of Florida student and track athlete, admitted in a signed confession to police today that "just for a thrill" he had written 20 or 25 blackmail notes to freshmen at the university and to residents of Gainesville within the past two weeks.

Smith, who was vice president of the senior class last year and president of four honorary fraternities at one time, was arrested as he came from a theater after police had been to his fraternity house during the day checking typewriters.

Thompson Ousted As Cafe Magnate

Son of Restaurant Pioneer Loses Control to Wrigley Group.

Chicago, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The restaurant chain with which the late John R. Thompson made the one-armed chair famous passed from his family's control today. John R. Thompson, jr., retired as president and was succeeded by William N. Collins, who recently became chairman of the board. It was announced that Thompson would cease active participation, although retaining ownership of a large block of stock.

The change followed differences which developed when control of the chain was gained by prominent Chicagoans, including William Wrigley, jr., chewing-gum multimillionaire, and John D. Hertz, who made his fortune with taxicabs and spends some of it on a stable of race horses.

Under the junior Thompson, the chain substituted tables for the one-armed chairs in many units and opened new ones, with futuristic lighting and decorating and pretty girl attendants.

handed the central committee. The energetic protest made by Secretary Stimson against the action of Japan in Manchuria resulted in creation of the Lytton Commission.

To have overlooked the report of this commission in any analysis of the Manchurian dispute would have indirectly impunged the attitude of this Government. The protests of the Hoover doctrine would have been maintained by the present State Department in any event, but the United States would have washed its hands entirely of any further participation in league mediation between Japan and China.

Text of Resolution.

The text of the resolution as cabled to the Department of State yesterday follows:

"The committee will study the report of the commission of inquiry (this is the Lytton commission, of which Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy is the unofficial American member), and the opinions and suggestions expressed in the assembly in whatever form they were submitted." (This refers to the little four's resolution of condemnation.)

The attitude of Congress to such American participation in the Manchurian settlement remained obscure. The general attitude of many members of the Senate foreign relations committee was one of "watchful waiting." Naturally, among those Democrats who rank high in the committe it is believed that American participation in the league on this informal basis involved no great danger. The chairman of the committee, Senator William E. Borah, likewise declined to reveal his attitude, but on account of the probable participation of Soviet Russia on the same basis and in the same committee with the American delegate, the approval of the senator may be expected.

58,248 Reported Slain In Manchuria Since 1931

(United Press.)

The Chinese Legation announced last night it had received information from its foreign office reporting that 58,248 persons had been killed in Manchuria since September 18, 1931.

The reports, according to the legation, were submitted by Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, who said the deaths occurred as a result of bombings, encounters, executions, burials alive, burnings, bayonetting, drowning, mutilation, and "other cruel ways."

THE REORGANIZATION.

A few Democrats in Congress are scrutinizing the Federal reorganization orders in the hope of finding something that could be turned to partisan advantage. But the wiser heads among them are disposed to approve of the entire series of executive orders. They would like to see the new system put into operation before March 4.

The natural inertia of long-established Federal agencies, the fears of independent bureaus in regard to supervision by heads of departments, the habits of thousands of employes, and other influences tend to arouse opposition to any plan of Federal reorganization. If any plan should be attempted by an administration just coming into office it might find itself embroiled in feuds and collisions. But the administration now reaching its end need not fear the opposition or resentment of agencies that are disturbed. President Hoover has issued the orders, and his retirement from office will make him immune to political reprisals.

All the benefits resulting from the consolidation will accrue to the new administration. Disadvantages, if they should develop, can be cured by executive order. President Roosevelt will have an opportunity to make further changes, if desirable, without running the risk attending such a wholesale shakeup as that which has been ordered.

No partisan advantage can be gained by opposing the Hoover changes, as the Hoover administration is no longer on trial.

PROF. EINSTEIN'S CASE.

Much unnecessary indignation has been wasted over the fact that Prof. Albert Einstein was required to appear in person before an American consul to answer questions intended to clarify his status under the laws relating to the admission of aliens. It now appears that neither favoritism nor prejudice entered into the proceeding. Prof. Einstein was asked the usual questions propounded to an alien, and upon his satisfactory answers a visa was granted to him. Allegations that he was inadmissible under certain sections of the immigration law were shown to be unfounded.

The law exempts government officials from the rule requiring personal appearance before consuls to determine the admissibility of aliens. On Prof. Einstein's previous visit to the United States he enjoyed an official status and was granted a visa without personal examination. Apparently he was greatly annoyed when it became necessary on this occasion to visit the consulate and answer the questions which are propounded to all aliens who are not government officials. Some of his admirers in this country jumped to the conclusion that he was subjected to an unusual and discriminatory inquisition, and they accordingly denounce the consul as a boor for insulting a man who commands the world's highest respect. Their own ignorance of the law leads them to attack the officers who are faithfully attending to the interests of the United States.

The immigration law, like all other laws, is intended to apply to all persons without regard to their eminence or obscurity. If it could be manipulated to grant special favors to an individual because of his great distinction it could be used to inflict injustice upon the friendless. Consul General Messersmith, stationed at Berlin, is an experienced and highly capable official, whose examination of Prof. Einstein was conducted with courtesy and justice. Prof. Einstein enters the United States because he is admissible and acceptable, and not because of any special favor resulting from twisting of the law.

CONGRESS GOES TO WORK.

Few sessions of Congress have started out with more dispatch and energy than that which is now grinding out legislation on Capitol Hill. Speaker Garner got the House off to a flying start by forcing a vote on repeal of the eighteenth amendment on the first day of the session. This burst of energy seems to have accelerated the legislative mills in both wings of the Capitol. For once Congress seems to be impressed with the fact that a tremendous amount of work should be done in the brief period before March 4.

Since the vote on repeal the House itself has done little, but the committees are working with feverish haste. The ways and means committee is giving its attention to the legalization of beer and the raising of additional revenue. One of the major supply bills has already been reported by the appropriations committee. Various other measures are advancing toward early consideration. Next week four unofficial committees will begin consideration of farm relief measures so that they may be laid before the House at the earliest possible moment. Another committee is studying possible economies in veterans' relief.

The Senate is always handicapped because it must wait for important fiscal measures to be passed by the House. In the meantime it has given consideration to the Philippine independence bill, and is getting ready to discuss the Glass banking measure. Senate Democrats have outlined a definite program of action in the hope that an extra session after March 4 may be avoided.

Congress always has difficulty in enacting all necessary legislation at a short session. The supply bills occupy most of the two and a half months devoted to actual legislative work. It is gratifying to note that an early start is being made on some of the major problems that should be acted upon at this session. In spite of the short time available, Congress can accomplish a great deal if its energies are well directed.

Extreme difficulties will be encountered in many fields. Agricultural relief is a dilemma of the first magnitude. Modification of the Volstead act is fraught with confusion. Revenue legislation is especially baffling because of the revolt against the sales tax last spring and the fear that such a debacle might be repeated if the measure were actively sponsored in the House. Yet there seems to be no other source of revenue to which Congress might turn to achieve a balanced budget in the fiscal year 1934. Reorganization of the Government departments will loose the tongues of many orators. Attempts to reduce expenditures will be fought by special groups at every step. The war debts issue may flare up at any moment. Another storm may be precipitated by the Manchurian question.

It is apparent that astute leadership must be exercised at both ends of the Capitol if anything more than the enactment of the appropriation bills is to be accomplished at this session. There is no possibility that Congress will shirk when so many urgent matters are pressing for solution. But there is danger that it may be diverted from the most important issues by factional rows and political maneuvers. The most hopeful sign is that men of both parties sense the urgency of settling down to work on the major problems.

A HANDMAIDEN TO GOLD.

A study of silver in the monetary systems of the world by the Department of Commerce reveals that the white metal is coming into more extensive use in some countries because of the depression. Shortage of gold reserves has induced some governments to rely more heavily upon silver as a monetary base.

In July, 1931, Germany raised the legal maximum for silver coinage from 20 to 30 reichmarks per capita. Heavy purchases of silver by the German government was the result. Germany now has 1,672,000,000 reichmarks' worth of silver in use as currency. No gold reserve is held behind these silver coins. Pressure on that country's meager gold stock has been materially relieved by the auxiliary use of silver.

The study made by the Department of Commerce also shows that silver has been assigned a more important role in the monetary systems of France, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru and Roumania.

This report contains an important hint to silver producers. Silver can be used as a handmaiden to gold without disrupting the monetary systems of the world, and there are many indications that its use as such would have a stabilizing influence upon world finance. When India dumped silver on the market in large quantities a few years ago there was a rush throughout the Oriental countries to convert the white metal into gold, or some form of gold commitments. The result was, of course, to cheapen silver and to accentuate the "gold hunger" which has been an outstanding characteristic of the world-wide depression. Economists agree that this sudden demand for gold in the Far East had a tendency to depress commodity prices throughout the world, which is a direct result of increasing the prices of gold.

It follows, therefore, that if the inordinate demand for gold could be relaxed to some extent through the use of silver as an auxiliary metal, it would have a stimulating effect upon commodity prices. That seems to be President Hoover's objective in promising to send a silver expert to the international monetary conference.

SOUNDER BANKS.

From three authoritative sources have come, within the last week, pleas for revision of Federal banking law. President Hoover in his message pointed out the weakness of American banks and the economic results of widespread bank failures. Secretary Mills expatiated upon the need for modification of banking law in his annual report. Now comes a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States with an indorsement of branch banking as a means of strengthening the entire system and extending credit facilities into some communities that are without banks.

Congress does not need to search for evidence of this critical need. Nearly every community has felt the effects of tottering banks at some time in recent years. In the last twelve years there have been more than 10,000 bank failures.

The mortality of banks has been especially high in rural communities. Many have been swamped with farm mortgages. Most of the country banks are small and their resources are inadequate to withstand an economic storm such as that which has swept over the country in the last three years. At present the epidemic of bank failures has been checked by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other relief agencies, but hundreds of communities are without banking facilities. A sound banking structure can not be rebuilt until fundamental changes in the law have been made.

Branch banking is foremost among the improvements recommended by the White House, the Chamber of Commerce and financial leaders. Yet it meets with a cool reception in Congress. Even though unit banks have failed by the hundreds and there is little hope of successfully reviving the old system in some States, the traditional objections against branch banking still linger in some congressional minds.

One other obvious reform is to bring all commercial banks within the Federal Reserve system. Only about 40 per cent of the banks (in number) are now under the protecting wing of the Federal Reserve. Most of those which operate on the outside do so because they do not meet the requirements for membership. This is a condition that demands remedy at the earliest possible opportunity. Leading financiers are coming to the conclusion that a unified banking system, under which all banks would be subjected to Federal law, with competition between the Government and the States in the granting of charters eliminated, is the ultimate solution of the banking problem. It may be a long time, however, before the States will accept that view. In the meantime a step forward may be taken by placing all banks under the Federal Reserve system.

Only a President about to leave office would dare to shake up the departmental dry bones as Hoover shakes them.

PAUL HUDSON.

AMERICA AND JAPAN

By RYOHEI UCHIDA, President of the Kokuryu Kai, and Member of the Executive Committee of the National Federation of All Political Parties of Japan.

The United States of America has branded Japan as aggressor in connection with the Manchurian affair. She is opposing Japan in cooperation with the League of Nations. America is fond of espousing the cause of justice, but it is highly deplorable that her deed does not tally with her profession.

At the Washington naval conference it was the United States of America that not only imposed unequal restrictions on Japan's naval forces, but infringed on the emperor's sovereignty by placing restrictions on Japan's land defense works.

Some time ago when she was badly in need of labor, Japanese laborers were welcomed by the United States of America. But when the railways were built and waste land was brought under cultivation through the strenuous efforts of Japanese workers, the latter were kicked out of America. Not content with all this, the United States is now attempting to interfere in the problem of Manchuria, where Japan enjoys legitimate rights and interests through treaties and agreements and which is a life line of Japan.

It is still fresh in our memory that the United States of America seized every neighboring territory she could lay her hands on. She robbed Honolulu and then the Philippines. It is only four years ago that she occupied Nicaragua and established a puppet government. The American member of the Lytton commission, Maj. Gen. Frank Ross McCoy, was responsible for the expedition into Nicaragua.

The League of Nations was organized under the sponsorship of the late Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, but the country of the sponsor refuses to join it for absolutely selfish consideration. And yet America does not hesitate to cooperate with or instigate the league when it suits her convenience.

HONOR AMONG PIRATES

Translation of a Chinese Pirate Contract of 1850—From the London Times.

A unanimous agreement between Wau Kwanpo, Shay, tsei, and others that with united heart we will assist each other.

We now for the cause of the Kum-lan Association rely upon each other's honesty and mutually unite to wander about and cross the four seas. But we must find out and join in friendly intimacy with heroes.

Our fleet consists of four vessels, who will make their name respected, and, joined together, we will unite our overwhelming (conquering) force and we will protect the three natural bonds and the five natural virtues. We will gain our livelihood upon the sea by plundering the rich and assisting the poor. We are all of one mind, and we first draw up regulations. Afterward we shall fix rules. We now wish a proof, and therefore this unanimous agreement is drawn up, each one retaining it as proof.

The resolutions passed are as follows: The large vessel and Nam-tsei shall receive four shares and a half of the trade. The two vessels Ha Koo-to and Hoi-me shall receive three shares and a half of the trade.

1. Agreed, that if we run alongside a vessel we must advance and not retire. Those who do retire shall have no claim to a share in the trade.

2. Agreed, that on going alongside, if a vessel sail well and arrive first, she must wait until the second vessel come up before boarding and searching her. Those who disobey shall have no claim to a share of the trade.

3. Agreed, that when alongside a vessel and all the brethren have boarded her, searched and taken her goods or money, they must be inspected openly by all. No deception is allowed. Those who deceive shall have no claim to a share in the trade.

4. Agreed, that when, having taken a vessel, there be guns, gunpowder and shot, these must all be divided among the vessels (according to the share to which each vessel is entitled). There must be no attempt made at taking by force (more than one's share); those who do so shall have no claim (to a share) in the trade.

5. Agreed, that on going alongside a vessel, if there be any article particularly valuable, it must be put to the account of the common stock and a price be set upon it. No one can take it for his own use. Those who disobey shall have no claim (to a share) in the trade.

6. Agreed, that a vessel who takes another, she shall have one of her guns; but the swords, muskets and other arms must be all divided. Those who disobey shall have no claim (to a share) in the trade.

7. Agreed, that on going alongside a large vessel, if there have been any firing, the head vessel shall receive 100 dollars per thousand dollars. But if she did not open fire, 50 dollars per thousand dollars.

8. Agreed, that having gone alongside a vessel, those who, though close to her, will not board her, shall have no claim (to a share) in the trade.

9. Agreed, that those who use great exertions in getting alongside a vessel shall receive additional reward.

10. Agreed, that those who have been first in boarding a vessel shall receive 50 dollars per thousand dollars; the head boarders 25 dollars, the next 15 dollars, and the last 10 dollars.

THE OLD HOME TOWN.

By JOHN J. DALY.

When I go down to my home town,
Where Nature spins her loom,
Down where the happy hearts aboun',
And all the flow'rs a-bloom,
I seem to see what used to be
A boy with freckled face;
And sweet contentment cuddling me
In that old, homey place.

There's no renown in my home town,
Old-fashioned in its way,
And there no brilliant lights shine down.
To turn night into day;
Yet I who know the city show
And can't be fooled once more
Would give it all if I could go
Back to that town of yore.

Folks seldom frown in my home town,
And happiness, you see,
Just sort o' clasps you all aroun',
Like ivy on a tree.
There's no display, no Great White Way,
Not much excitement there;
But take me back and let me stay
Where home is in the air.

TO QUENTIN ROOSEVELT.

"He hath outsoared the shadow of our night."

By MARY OWINGS MILLER.

Your high retort to death rings through the year
In laughter that denies the strength of pain;
Your youth remains unconquered, free of fears;
Your thoughtfulness held never thought of gain;
You went as eagles, do in thrilling fight,
Great wings outspread, wild beauty in your heart.
You slipped between the clinging hands of night,
Making of death a gesture—and an art.

You gave to those upon the other side
The thing you gave to us—immortal youth,
Cool, steady hands, a brow unmarked by pride,
An eager heart that knows the ways of truth.
Your body granted death a casual hour,
But all your youth retained its radiant power.

SONNET FOR DIANA.

By H. P. STODDARD.

Amid the throngs that crowd a city street,
You walk, but not as others walk. You go
Envisioning the halcyon retreat
Of gold-ribbed galleons in sunset's glow
Cold lightnings which, like scarlet rippled sleet,
Stream through a lush of leaves, then merge and flow
Within dim galleries to phantom feet
That fringe a rose-flecked woodland pool. The low
Green places where wild orchid goes to meet
Its death in tangled forest undertow
Are known to you. A haunted moon's defeat
In lavenders of endless afterglow
Is your soliloquy, as people pass
Who hold their dreams beneath a burning-glass.

GULLIBLE UNCLE SAM.

By E. B. NICHOLSON.

You are so true, you don't suspect
The wiles of other nations,
But want to help them all you can,
And aid in finding rations.
Yet, all the while they're building ships
To cross the great Atlantic,
And subjugate the people here,
Or else to drive them frantic.
They tried such schemes, in days agone,
And still you are so artless
You wish to help them once again,
To show you are not heartless.
You're very patient, Uncle Sam,
And patience is a virtue,
But you look out! These older heads
Are making plans to hurt you.
You need more schooling, Uncle Sam,
You've quite forgot all history,
You're quick, and smart, but in a jam
You can't compete with "mystery."

THE ROAD OF LIFE.

By DIANA KEARNY POWELL.

We know not where the road of life may lead;
We walk blindfolded down that changeful way,
Bordered sometimes with arbor, or with weed,
With elm, or stubbled field. All the long day
We must march on, though thistle burrs have blown
Along the path and night looms dark with tears.
The future is forever the unknown,
And we are blind to all the unborn years.

You who have tasted of life's bitterness,
Who journey on through desert, fen or mire,
Awake, to seize your pilgrim staff anew!
Defeat is for those only who confess
Its mastery, for still the road leads higher
To nobler things than all we dreamt to do!

THE STARS OF DEWEY.

By ELISABETH ELLICOTT POE.

(A wreath, bearing the four stars of an Admiral, was placed by a service men's organization on the tomb of Dewey in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, on Manila Day.)

America! Lift up your head!
The stars of Dewey see
And courage take from his just fame,
To guard your destiny.
A man was this, four-square and true,
An uncrowned sailor king;
Here history and her sentinels
Enduring laurels bring.

His stars of glory! How they shine
Upon these quiet walls
Where peace has come in majesty
From her supernal halls.
His sword is sheathed, but victor palms
Bespeak the valiant still,
Where ever-living hero deeds
The very echoes fill.

America! Lift up your head!
The night, for him, is gone;
Upon the distant hilltops now
Breaks fair the promised dawn.
His stars reflect the radiant glow
And, in his memory, we Give fealty to his dear land—
The shrine of liberty!

NUITS BLANCHES.

And at night when all is silent,
Echoed on from tower to tower,
Like some ancient watchman calling
Through the city, sounds the hour.

U. S. Fleet In Pacific Irks Japan

Head of Tokyo's Navy Hopes Concentration of Ships Soon Will End.

By GLENN BABB.

TOKYO, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The head of the Japanese navy told the Associated Press here he was convinced that popular feeling in Japan toward America would "be much improved when the concentration of the United States Navy in the Pacific is ended."

Admiral Keisuke Okada, veteran naval administrator and fighting man, now for the second time minister of the navy, insisted, however, that he was not expressing his government's concern over any dispositions the American Navy saw fit to make.

Japanese naval leaders, he emphasized, saw no particular reason to be disturbed because the entire American fleet has remained on the Pacific throughout most of 1932.

"I am merely giving you my estimate of the state of public feeling in this country," he said. "It is futile to deny that the concentration of American sea power in the Pacific has produced irritation and anxiety in the minds of our people."

Japanese public "irritation," Admiral Okada admitted, had been partly caused by sensational stories with little or no foundation published in the Japanese press. These have dealt with alleged "spy" activities on behalf of the American Navy, plans for air bases in the Aleutian Islands and reported increases in American naval and aviation forces in the Philippines.

REFERRING further to the sensitiveness of public opinion in both America and Japan regarding the naval activities of the other nations, the admiral remarked that this was hardly to be wondered at.

"After all," he commented, "there are only two real naval powers in the Pacific, Japan and the United States.

"The leaders of the Japanese navy see no reason to be particularly nervous over reports that improvements are being made in the American naval bases at Pearl Harbor and along the Pacific coast.

"But naturally our people wonder against whom such improvements are directed, especially since our remotest plans do not include offensive operations in the eastern Pacific."

Admiral Okada added that he considered war between the United States and Japan "unthinkable," although occasional irritation was only natural.

"In the case of two states having a common land frontier," he said, "the mobilization of troops along the border by one power inevitably causes alarm in the other. This is merely human nature. Such reactions are entirely natural and can not be helped."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH he has held the highest posts, afloat and ashore, that a naval career offers in Japan, including command of the combined fleets and membership in the cabinet and the supreme war council, Admiral Okada appears one of the most unassuming officials in the empire.

Frequent smiles light his weather-beaten sailorman's face. He speaks in a low, even voice, without gestures or oratorical effects, his replies to questions coming promptly in brief, clipped sentences.

His 64 years show in his iron-gray hair, worn clipped short, and his sparse gray mustache, but his carriage is easy and erect.

He seems to prefer the comfort of his native costume to the stiffness of the gold-braided uniform copied after Occidental models for the navy of Nippon, and when he gave this interview he was clad in kimono and hakama, the divided skirt of the Japanese gentleman, with battered felt slippers on his feet.

Controlled Rockets Forecast by German

Tempelhof, Germany, Dec. 10 (A.P.). Space rockets, radio controlled so that they may be brought to earth at distant, designated points, are within the range of posibilities, says Reinhold Tiling, a German engineer, who has made a name for himself with high-flying projectiles.

He made this statement after demonstrating several of his latest powder-propelled rockets before a gathering of experts at the Tempelhof airdrome here on the outskirts of Berlin.

On reaching its height limit, it unfolds two plane-like wings measuring 13 feet between the tips, and then glides to the ground, generally within 300 yards of the starting point.

"I now am working on a radio-controlled rocket," he said. "This missile will be directed at a designated place on the other side of Germany."

A liquid fuel, not powder, will be used in the device and Tiling hopes it will span the country from east to west.

Provided the trials are satisfactory, the engineer hopes to see rocket service installed for express transportation of mails.

Henry Pu-Yi Misses China Style Noodles

Peiping, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Bringing word that no cook in Changchun can satisfy the palate of Henry Pu-Yi, emissaries of the head of the new state of Manchukuo came here recently seeking chefs.

They hired half a dozen culinary experts at salaries of about $10 a month each.

The doyen of the group was an 80-year-old chef who for 60 years prepared noodles and other fare in the Manchu imperial kitchens, including the time that Mr. Pu-Yi was the "boy emperor" of China.

Motor Cars Banned By Patriotic Turks

Adrianople, Turkey, Dec. 10 (A.P.). In a burst of patriotism and economy this city, one-time capital of the Ottoman empire, has banned motor vehicles.

Only horse-drawn carriages are allowed to circulate within the city limits, although automobiles are still permitted for long distance rides.

The twofold aims are to replace imported cars with home manufactured carriages and to sell home-grown oats in place of foreign gasoline.

Chilean to Start His Third Term As President

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Another President of Chile will be inaugurated for a six-year term Tuesday, December 20, slightly more than a year since Juan E. Montero took office for an intended similar period.

ALESSANDRI

Arturo Alessandri, who won easily in the recent election over Col. Marmaduke Grove and three other candidates, will enter La Moneda Palace after the ceremonies for the third time in his career.

He was President right after the World War, but was exiled to Argentina and Europe. He returned for another brief period of his term during which the 1925 constitution was adopted.

States Paid to Stay In Australian Union

Canberra, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—By threatening to secede, three of the six Australian states have obtained yearly financial grants on an ever-increasing scale.

This year the federal government will give western Australia, south Australia and Tasmania $9,000,000 to quiet their clamor.

Tasmania, which has been receiving grants since 1912, will draw about $8 for each inhabitant.

Estate Freehold Fee Is Red Rose for King

Glenormiston, England, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—H. G. Thorburn, lord lieutenant of Peebleshire, holds the freehold of his estate on the condition that he pays the reigning sovereign one red rose "when he passes that way."

FROM A SENATOR'S DIARY—

Being the day-by-day observations of a "member-at-large" set down for his own satisfaction.

By the 97th Senator

Wednesday.

IF ANYTHING further was required to demonstrate the need for the Norris amendment eliminating the "lame duck" from political zoology the vote in the House on the prohibition repeal resolution furnished it. Seventeen States already have ratified the Norris amendment and I have no doubt a sufficient number to make it effective will hasten to do likewise after Monday's exhibition in the House. With the Norris amendment in operation, Congress in all probability would not be in session now. The newly elected Congress would convene early next month and proceed at once to the dispatch of the business for which it was elected. There would be no "lame ducks" cluttering up the landscape and getting in the way of the obvious will of the majority.

Since this, it seems, is to be their final reprieve, the "lame ducks" apparently are determined to make the most of the brief period of their power between now and March 4. It is a noteworthy coincidence that just as they are about to become extinct they should be able to exert so much influence. I doubt whether ever before in the history of the country the "lame ducks" have been able to exercise such a decisive voice on major issues. Eighty-two, or more than half of the votes against the repeal resolution, were cast by members who won't be with us after March 4, and in nearly every instance they will be replaced by "repealers."

It was a Pyrrhic victory for the drys, however, and surely the wets have no cause to be downhearted. All things considered, they made a remarkable showing. Eight months ago they were able to muster only 187 votes in favor of the Beck-Linthicum resolution to revise the eighteenth amendment. Yet that was considered an extraordinary gain at the time. On Monday the wets had 272 votes for outright repeal, falling just six short of the necessary two-thirds majority. They will be in a much stronger position in the next Congress. Adoption of the resolution by the House early in the spring would seem to be a foregone conclusion, and it may not be necessary for the straight "repealers" to bargain for votes in the Senate. In the long run the wets may be pleased that Monday's setback forced them to wait a few months.

Again the old question, What is a saloon? comes back to plague us. Some members say they will never vote for any amendment that permits the return of a saloon, and so various masters of the English language are busy trying to write a constitutional definition that will forever ban that institution. So far they have met with little success. Hank Ashurst describes a saloon as a place where liquor is sold and imbibed perpendicularly. Carter Glass tried his hand at the task toward the close of the last session and defined a saloon as a place where liquor is sold to be drunk on the premises, but his definition appeared to place a ban on both hotels and restaurants selling alcoholic beverages. Lately Borah has been working on it, but he told me yesterday he had to give up. He couldn't find a satisfactory legal definition of the saloon that could be written into the Constitution. Saloons, as I have remarked before, are outlawed now, but they flourish just the same under a different name.

As a consequence of the defeat of the repeal resolution, the chances of avoiding an extra session have dwindled virtually to the vanishing point. In fact, as I recall the campaign oratory, Gov. Roosevelt is already pledged to call an extra session in the event of no action on the eighteenth amendment at the present session.

Ruth Bryan Owen voted for the repeal of the amendment her father so strongly espoused. All in all, the roll call furnished an astounding exhibition of the agility of politicians of both sexes in climbing aboard the band wagon when they see the handwriting on the wall.

Thursday.

THE Farmer-Labor party is a tough institution. Several times in the last decade it appeared to be marked for extinction, but it emerged from the last election stronger than ever, with a senator, five representatives, a governor, mayors of several cities and numerous State and local officers. No minor party had showed such strength in recent years.

The Farmer-Laborites operate on a different basis than the Socialists. They make little serious effort to build up a national organization. Instead, they concentrate on areas where their doctrines are most likely to fall on fertile soil. The overwhelming majority of the Farmer-Laborites are confined to one State—Minnesota—which they dominate. Some of its influence spills over into the Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa, but its bailiwick is primarily Minnesota.

Ten years ago the Farmer-Labor Party had both the Minnesota senators and its prospects for rapid growth were promising. Along came the Coolidge boom and nearly put it out of business. Farmer-Labor doctrines do not thrive on prosperity. By 1930, the Farmer-Labor representation in Congress had dwindled to one senator—Henrik Shipstead—and one representative—Paul Kvale.

And now it has staged another of its periodical comebacks. Henrik Shipstead will have five playmates in the House, headed by his old colleague, Magnus Johnson. Magnus has been tinkering at various odd political jobs since his defeat for reelection to the Senate in 1924, but as a candidate for congressman-at-large, under the reapportionment mix-up in Minnesota he was top man in the big field of contenders. He is best remembered in the Senate for his enormous lung power. No radio broadcasting would be necessary if all speakers had voices like Mangus. He will add immensely to the oratorical volume of the House and is well qualified in every way to fill the place of John Schafer, "the roaring bull of the Pampas," who is retiring with the consent of his grateful constituents on March 4.

SENATOR GLASS

Friday.

GEN. COXEY is in again. Nothing can keep him down. He comes up smiling after every licking and looks around for more punishment. He got less than 10,000 votes out of nearly 40,000,000 cast for the Presidency, but is he downhearted? Not a bit. He has had some more pamphlets printed and is distributing them in an effort to get people to "see the light." By "the light" he means his pet scheme, which he has advocated since the early 90s to issue billions of dollars' worth of noninterest bearing bonds for public improvements and general relief. Every one would be prosperous and happy then.

The general is now 78 years old, but still hale, hearty and optimistic. He spends all his money promoting "the cause" with no thought of selfish gain except, perhaps, the pleasure he gets out of the publicity which accompanies his efforts. He is jeered far and wide as a crackpot, but he is always good natured. He is blessed with the capacity of laughing even at himself. I have known the general for many years and while I don't subscribe to his doctrines by a million miles, I unhesitatingly say that we would be much nearer Utopia if all public men had the same good intentions and unselfish spirit that Coxey has.

Carter Glass, they say, is slated for Secretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Cabinet. Carter is getting along in years, but he is still full of tabasco, as Ogden Mills discovered in the course of the campaign. Running the Treasury is a man's sized job. The question is whether Carter would care to assume the heavy burdens of the office. He knows what they are, having served as Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson Cabinet. He resigned the Treasury post to go to the Senate, so I find it difficult to believe he would reverse himself now and resign from the Senate to go back to the Treasury.

George Moses lost an election bet to Jack Garner. He sent Jack a check for the amount of the bet. Jack was about to indorse it for deposit when he discovered it was made out to "Vice President Garner." So Jack can't cash it until March 4. R. B. S.

Doak Answers Post Editorial on Vocation Education Board

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in your editorial of Sunday entitled "Independent Offices" the statement that the Federal Board for Vocational Education "came into being for the purpose of training former service men injured in the war" and that "its principal work has been done, but it continues to spend about $8,000,000 per year compared with $300,000 per year for the Office of Education, which coordinates educational work throughout the country."

May I call your attention to some inaccuracies in this statement of which I am sure you are entirely unaware. The statement in fact illustrates certain misconceptions which unfortunately have gained rather widespread currency.

In all essential details the vocational education act creating the Federal Board for Vocational Education was formulated by the National Commission on Federal Aid, which reported its draft of the bill to Congress June 1, 1914, before any suspicion of war had developed either in this country or in Europe.

The act as formulated by the commission proposed legislation in response to demands which had been brought forward by labor organizations, chambers of commerce and educators since 1907. * * *

A joint resolution of Congress in 1914 provided for the appointment of the national commission which reported the bill which with some modifications was enacted in 1917 as the vocational education act.

This act was passed in February, prior to our entrance into the war, and was in no sense whatever a war measure.

* * * *

After the war, the country being confronted with the return and demobilization of hundreds of thousands of disabled soldiers, turned to the Federal Board for Vocational Education as the only available agency of the Federal Government which could undertake the urgent responsibility of providing some sort of vocational training to aid them in reestablishing themselves in some suitable employment.

This work with the former service men was necessarily initiated under a separate act passed in June, 1918, and continued only until Congress in August, 1921, provided for the establishment of the Veterans' Bureau, which was created expressly to take over all work for former service men. Since 1921 the Federal Board for Vocational Education has been entirely disassociated with this work.

In 1920 Congress extended the work of the Federal Board for Vocational Education by an act providing for the vocational rehabilitation of persons disabled in industry or otherwise and their return to civil employment, and since that year funds have been appropriated by Congress annually for allotment to the States in building up State programs of vocational rehabilitation under State plans administered by State officials. This work is not now and never has been in any way whatever connected with soldier rehabilitation work.

The vocational education act of 1917 and the rehabilitation act of 1920, as well as the George-Reed act of 1929, provide funds for the administration of these acts, and for research and service to aid the States in developing their vocational programs. Combined administrative funds under the several acts have aggregated annually between $350,000 and $400,000 a year. Appropriations by Congress to the board for allotment to the States should not be confused with these administrative funds.

Approximately $8,500,000 has been appropriated by Congress to the Federal board for allotment to the States, to be expended by them under State plans for vocational education, and approximately $1,000,000 has been appropriated for allotment to the States for the promotion of their programs of vocational rehabilitation of disabled civilians. No portion of these appropriations is available for administrative expenses of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. The amounts appropriated are simply allotted for payment to the States in accordance with the provisions of the several acts making the appropriations. Allotments paid to the States from these funds are of course in no respect whatever comparable with administrative expenditures of any Federal offices.

* * * *

I take the liberty of calling your attention to these facts because I feel sure that you have no intention of misrepresenting the situation to your readers. W. N. DOAK.
Secretary of Labor, Chairman of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

Cause for Concern Is Seen In Voters' Lack of Interest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While the vote in the recent election is the largest vote ever cast in a Presidential election, it is alarming when you compare the vote cast with the number of men and women of the country over 21 years of age.

The census of 1930 gives the number of men and women over 21 years of age as 72,943,624. According to the Associated Press report given out some days ago, there were 38,908,169 votes cast at the recent election, which would indicate that more than 34,000,000 men and women in the country did not exercise the right of franchise, or 46.7 per cent. In other words, taking the country as a whole, only 53.3 per cent of the men and women over 21 years of age exercised the voting privilege.

In some of the States there are statutory laws fixing the qualifications of voters which would reduce the vote in those States, yet if you will take the 35 States carried by Mr. Coolidge in 1924, plus the State of Wisconsin, and compare the vote cast in 1932 with the census of 1930, out of a total voting population in those 36 States of 56,165,806, only 33,651,487 votes were cast, or 59.9 per cent. In other words, more than 40 per cent of the voters in that territory declined for one reason or another to vote.

When you take into consideration the fact that each party spent legitimately for such expenses as are necessary in conducting a national campaign, all the money it could raise, after more speeches were made than were ever made before in a campaign, including the advantages of the improved radio service, with the press as active as usual, if not more so, and consider that all this energy was not able to bring to the polls more than 53 per cent of the voters of the country as a whole, and only 59.9 per cent in a given territory where there are no statutory laws limiting the right to vote you face a condition which, to say the least, is alarming.

Germany, with about one-half of our population, in her recent election polled about 37,000,000 votes, or only about 2,000,000 short of our recent election. We can not believe that Germany is more patriotic than America, but her people use the ballot more freely than do Americans.

In the recent election in Pennsylvania, 51 per cent of her voters did not vote. In New York 45.3 per cent did not vote; Ohio 38.8 per cent; Illinois 31.5 per cent; Iowa 32.8 per cent; California 45.7 per cent; Massachusetts 42.8 per cent; Kansas 31.5 per cent; Minnesota 37.3 per cent; New Jersey 37 per cent. West Virginia led the States, only 18.9 per cent remaining away from the polls, while Delaware was second with 25.1 per cent.

Only 12.7 per cent of the men and women of South Carolina voted on November 8, and only 14.1 per cent voted in Mississippi. More than 3,600,000 voters failed to vote in New York; 2,900,000 failed to vote in Pennsylvania, 1,600,000 in Ohio, 1,300,000 in Michigan, 1,700,000 in California, 1,500,000 in Illinois, 1,148,000 in Massachusetts, and 929,000 in New Jersey. I could give the stay-at-home vote in each State, but will only mention a few of them in this article.

The man or the committee that will evolve some plan to get the voters to the polls in the coming elections will be much sought after. The precinct organization is the only solution.

Bagdad Bans Kiss Film

Bagdad, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—An old American film, "New York Nights," has been banned by police here because of "too much kissing." The picture, first released in December, 1929, features Norma Talmadge, Lilyan Tashman and Gilbert Roland.

PRAYER

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Lord, we pray make straight our vision,
Let us see beyond derision.
Scorn and scoffing, profit seeking,
Selfish planning, clever speaking,
Ways expedient and polite
What eternally is right.

Lord, embolden us and make us
Staunch that no ill winds can shake us.
Teach us not to be afraid of Threats that cowardice is made of.
Let us even in despair
For the righteous cause declare.

Lord—divine, all wise, creator,
Make us truer, make us greater.
For these days when problems need us
Let no doctrines false mislead us,
But unselfishly and bold
May we keep the faith of old.

THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN

MacDonald's Health.

THE health of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald is inspiring some anxiety in London at the present time. For the past year the eyes of the former leader of the Labor party have been the subject of constant care and attention on the part of his physicians, but now this anxiety has been aggravated by reports that his organic condition may shortly require a major operation.

The day of the opening of Parliament, the Marchioness of Londonderry gave her traditional reception, in honor of the prime minister. Mr. MacDonald appeared between Stanley Baldwin and the beautiful Egeria of the present government. The Marquis of Londonderry is a member of the cabinet and his wife is generally believed to be one of the most powerful forces in the behind-the-scenes moves of the MacDonald government.

There was unusual speculation at the presence of the prime minister's physician, Sir Thomas Horder, who is usually with him wherever he goes. The Harley street specialist kept discreetly in the background, but when Mr. MacDonald left the soiree, it was noted that he did so in company of his physician.

Immunity.

NEXT to the Grand Prix, Paris, in summer has no more fashionable function than the Concours d'Elegance d'Automobiles. Top-hatted aristocrats from the Place de la Concorde's Automobile Club have a veritable "judgment of Paris" in trying to discern the winning prize to the most beautiful automobilist in the smartest motor car.

Last July the scene was all set for the annual show. That part of the Bois de Boulogne, the Bagatelle, which is reserved for the spectators, was thronged with hundreds of people when the first motor, under the control of a popular Parisian actress, proceeded slowly past the reviewing stand. The second entry went by, and the third was Mme. de Cardenas, wife of the Venezuelan Minister to France, in a luxurious, purring Hispano-Suiza.

The diplomat's wife got along for the first hundred feet very well, although it was plainly seen that her nervousness was causing the car to proceed erratically. Just when she was about opposite the reviewing stand the motor lunged forward, took a dizzy turn and plunged into the throng of spectators. Some 23 persons were injured, many of them seriously.

The epilogue took place in the courts last week. Suits for damages were filed against the diplomat's wife by all the injured persons. Mme. de Cardenas, however, took refuge behind her husband's diplomatic immunity, and the Paris courts sustained her. The only recourse left to the injured is a suit in the Venezuelan courts. The actual amount of damages asked exceeded 5,000,000 francs.

Nero in Tin.

WHILE the war rages in the Chaco, pampered Anteno Patino, son of the multimillionaire Bolivian Minister to Paris, strikes a Neronic pose. He is going to take over the palatial home of the French banker, M. Humbert, in La Muette, where his next door neighbor will be Vicomte Henri de Rothschild. His wife, the former Princess Bourbon y Durcal, plans to give there a series of fetes that will make Paris gasp.

The Patino's are the owners of practically a world monoply of tin. Simon I. Patino, the head of the family, was an illiterate but energetic laborer in the region of the tin deposits at Cochabamba. He is reputed to be one of the five richest men in the world.

Patino had himself made Minister of Bolivia to France (diplomats pay no taxes in the country to which they are accredited) and his son is secretary of legation.

Diplomatic Lottery.

STRANGE are the vagaries of fortune. Spanish Ambassador Juan Francisco de Cardenas grows apprehensive because he was once a royalist. German Ambassador Baron Friedrich W. von Prittwitz und Gaffron recalls wanly that he was once a republican. The change in political regimes at home have caused more than a passing anxiety to the two diplomats.

The German Ambassador had another opportunity of glimpsing the hand writing on the wall with the appointment of Roland Koester as German Ambassador to France. For Herr Koester during his days at the Wilhelmstrasse was an arch-foe of everything republican.

Under the Koester regime, every functionary suspected of sympathy for the moribund republican system of government was driven out of the service. Even Baron von Prittwitz came within the range of fire but that time he escaped.

Paradoxically enough, the antirepublican, Koester, is the son of bourgeois family, whose star would have been of small magnitude in the old days at Potsdam. His father-in-law is a wealthy Frankfort banker.

Svelte Leopold von Hoesch, former German Ambassador to Paris, has been promoted to London where he will probably be the darling of Mayfair as he was of the Boulevard St. Germain.

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT

MOST members of Congress don't know it, but House and Senate press galleries have their own methods of cataloguing congressmen, and the picturesque names that are passed around in the galleries do not tally at all with the approved list in the Congressional Directory.

The Fourth Estate, in its lighter, leisure moments, paintakingly sets about finding a tag for more colorful members of both houses.

These nicknames are passed down from one session to another. Few know their origins, but none question their descriptive terseness. Some members, in the know, have enjoyed many a chuckle at the expense of their colleagues.

The House has its "Old Roman;" it has its "Kid Boots." In less respectful vein, it has its "Seaboard Bill," its "Baggy Pants," its "Firpo," "Mamma," "Abbie Kabibble" and "Mule Face."

It has its "Short Line Conductors' Association" whose three members each have "Short Line" prefixed to their Christian cognomens. In press parlance, they come from so far back in the woods they have to ride a short line railroad to get home.

Some of the appellations, applied in all good nature, verge on the sacrilegious. One member, who sits well to the front of the House, and when there is applauding to do generally leads it, is known as "Come to Jesus."

The Senate has fewer "handles." There is Huey Long, of course, who openly is known as "The Kingfish." The upper chamber also has its "Sad Sam" and "Tarzan."

WHEN Speaker John Nance Garner turns his back on the House and takes up less arduous duties as Vice President of the United States, there is one man who is going to miss him more than the most intimate of his colleagues.

He is E. B. Betts, elevator operator at the Capitol for fourteen years. The warmest of friends, Beets and Jack Garner delight in exchanging wisecracks between floors. The veteran operator is an ardent Democrat and now that his party is on top once more, he blythely challenges most passengers: "Republican or Democrat?"

Betts was not always a Democrat. He proudly boasts of his assocaition with the Populist party. Back in 1892, he assisted in drafting the Populist platform.

Operating an elevator for his bread and butter, he finds time to do a little newspaper corresponding on the side. He writes for two weeklies, the Jackson Herald, in Jefferson, Ga., and the Winder News, in Winder, Ga. He has a column, "Notes from the Capitol."

Fatherly of men, Betts is yet big enough, and belligerent enough if provoked, to spank any member of the press galleries. And, speaking of nicknames, most correspondents know better now than to call him "Pop." He doesn't like it.

"CAN'T you make room for another lame duck," said Representative Purnell, of Indiana, espying Representative Strong, of Kansas, on Betts' elevator yesterday.

"I'm not lame," retorted Strong. "Both of my legs were pulled so hard that I don't limp."

Chairman Mary Norton, of the House District committee, has extended the olive branch to Representative Tom Blanton, of Texas, with whom she had a little scrap last session over District legislation. Mrs. Norton shook hands with Tom the first day Congress convened. She invited the dry Texan to join the repeal parade just then being tallied by House Leader Rainey. Tom Blanton laughingly waved her on.

Francis Stephenson, of Associated Press, Friday was mistaken for Charles Stevenson, of United Press, by an outraged Capitol employe, who appeared in the gallery flourishing a gun. Stevenson was the author of a magazine article that made reference to the employe.

Yesterday the following notice appeared in the Senate Press Gallery:

"Mr. Francis M. Stephenson requests that his friends give circulation to the information that he is not a contributor to magazines; that he is an employe of the Associated Press; and that in the future he desires to be known as Mr. Zilch."

The Senate sometimes neglects to haze its new senators, but it never neglects its new pages. One promising but misled youngster passed the greater part of one day combing Senate offices for "Senator Sorghum." Some curious quirk of humor always rings the Senate District committee in on the hazing. Initiates are sent to this committee, just off the Senate chamber, for copies of "The Pages' Manual."

Records for the past 10 years are being examined by the Oklahoma tax commission to determine if any unpaid inheritance taxes can be collected.

Alexander Hurt But Still Hopes To Revisit U. S.

Menton, France, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, brother-in-law and cousin of the late Czar of Russia and cousin of King George of England, has been confined to his bed here with a serious spinal affliction which makes it impossible for him to walk, but is hopefully preparing to sail this spring to the United States, which he calls "my second homeland."

ALEXANDER.

The 66-year-old grand duke, also a cousin of Grand Duke Cyril, pretender of the Russian throne, made his last of several visits to the United States in early 1931.

Despite his serious illness, his secretary, Arkady Roumanoff, said "he has never given up for a moment plans he has made to go to the United States." Roumanoff said the grand duke may even go there to live.

The spinal malady from which he is suffering is the result of an accident which occurred when he last visited New York. At that time the grand duke, mounting the steps of a platform in a local hotel ballroom where he was to lecture, stumbled, missing his footing and severely spraining his spine.

Since then the pain between his shoulders has grown increasingly acute and doctors have been able to aid him in gaining only partial relief.

Clubs for Idle Men Spreading in London

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A club for unemployed men has been opened here and a network of similar clubs throughout the metropolis is planned.

Membership is free, limited to 100. Newspapers to enable the men to hunt situations, pens, ink, stationery and postage stamps are also free.

Provision is made for games and it is hoped to provide facilities for the men to mend their own boots and clothes.

King Gustaf At 25-Year Mark in Rule

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Seventy-four years old, and still able to play a good game of tennis or to spend a day tracking down elk with a rifle in his hand, King Gustaf, of Sweden completed 25 years as a reigning monarch on December 8.

The king is today, as he has been for years, one of the most active men in Sweden. He has a daily routine of work, exercise and recreation that would tax the energy of many of his vigorous subjects.

Sweden sees him as a tall, slender man who walks swiftly, who does not wait for the footman to open the door of his car if he is in a hurry and who can sit a horse as straight as any young officer.

In affairs of government, as the hereditary head of a constitutional monarchy, the king is no less active. He is a profound student of the public affairs of the kingdom.

Spartan in his use of food and drink, the king's daily program begins with a light breakfast, which he usually eats alone, occupied with his newspapers. He next turns his attention to his mail, which is voluminous, and then proceeds with audiences with any one who has a legitimate reason for talking with him.

* * * *

THE king devotes his afternoons to exercise—much of the time to his beloved game of tennis, which he helped introduce into Sweden.

He is an ardent bridge player, provided he can get good competition, and many an evening at the castle is spent at the card table.

One of the popular anecdotes about the king has to do with the formal dedication of a new bridge in Stockholm. Silk-hatted dignitaries assembled in the rain and one, as speaker of the occasion, bared his head to the pelting drops. Swedes, comfortable in their homes listening to a radio broadcast of the program, heard the king whisper:

"Put on your hat."

The official did not heed and again a sibilant whisper found its way through the microphone:

"Put on your hat, I say. You'll catch cold."

This time it was almost a royal command and the hat went on.

The king's hobbies, in addition to tennis and shooting, include a love of fine art which has led him to assemble one of the best silver collections in Europe.

His prowess as a hunter is revealed by the elk heads which adorn his billiard room at the castle. His skill with a tennis racket, and he is known simply as "Mr. G." on the tennis court, is recognized from Stockholm to the Riviera.

America Is Lacking in Clubs for Men

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: America is the land of women's clubs. There is little club life for men in this country as it is known in English cities, but the generalization of one visitor about American women is a true observation. It is that they seek through their clubs to attain civic betterment, literary knowledge, social contacts, welfare work and general culture. The fraternal and business organizations fulfill to some extent the same functions in this country for the men, but there are few like the one which formed the basis of G. K. Chesterton's story about the "Club of Queer Trades."

In Spain are some of the most unusual clubs in the world. Several in Barcelona have names so direct that any man sees at once to which organization he should belong. The Club of Brusque Men, for example, proclaims itself as a home or den, where the restraint of common civility ceases to exert its wearing influence upon the naturally rude. This club specializes in general invective and bad language, in which art its president boasts of being a master.

A club of milder appearance is known as Noah's Ark. The members are all persons with names of animals, such as Fox, Bull, Hog, Bear, &c. Perhaps the strangest is the Ugly Club, to which a man is elected on the strength of his ill-favored looks. The president of this group won his place because of his formidably large nose. The doubt arises in considering these clubs as to whether it is comforting to live in a society where all the members posses physical peculiarities. Certainly the distinction is lessened by looking about as in a hall of mirrors. The theory is that company is a consolation, especially in characteristics about which a man might feel lonely and abashed by himself. JAMES F. WALDRON.

Coolidge Annoyed In Al Smith Building

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Former President Calvin Coolidge was annoyed by the sound of hammering in the Empire State Building, where the national transportation committee was deliberating the railroad problem.

He left the table, where he was presiding as chairman of the committee, and sought to quiet the disturbance. It continued unabated.

"I'll find out how long this fellow will be rebuilding this strucutre," said former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, and he left the room.

The hammering continued after he returned, too, but soon died away. He heads the company which controls the building.

Stalin Is Given Ingot, First From New Mill

Stalinsk, U. S. S. R., Dec. 10 (A.P.). The first steel ingot to be produced by the metallurgical works here has been presented to "Comrade" Stalin with a pledge from the workmen that many thousands more are to follow.

Other leaders of the Soviet government and Communist party were given subsequent bars of steel turned out on the first day of operations of the first open-hearth furnace. Fourteen more open-hearth furnaces, with a combined yearly capacity of 1,450,000 tons, are nearing completion.

Stalinsk is the former town of Kuznetsk.

NANCY ASTOR GUEST AT FAMILY REUNION

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Langhornes gathered in Lynchburg today from far and near to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. John H. Lewis, formerly Elizabeth Dabney Langhorne, head of the Langhorne clan, who was honor guest at a large and brilliant reception given by Viscountess Astor, her niece, member of the British Parliament, and formerly Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia.

Spring flowers decorated Oakwood Country Club where the reception took place and a stringed orchestra played during the hours of the reception from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. Lewis wore a gown of gray satin and lace and carried pink roses. Lady Astor wore black velvet, with a powder blue and silver blouse, and Mrs. Dexter Otey, daughter of the honor guest, who received with them, wore black velvet and lace.

Mrs. Franklin Schley, formerly Miss Langhorne, widow of Admiral Schley, presided at the flower-decked table upon which a tiered birthday cake was flanked by candles in crystal candlesticks, one for each year of the life of Mrs. Lewis. Mrs. Clairborne William Gooch, jr., cousin, and Mrs. John L. Abbot, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Lewis, poured tea and coffee, and other members of the family assisted in numerous ways with the entertainment of the guests. At the end of the afternoon all of the guests formed a circle, and, with hands clasped, surrounded the hostess and her honoree, singing as they circled, "Aul Lang Syne." Then Mrs. Lewis made a little talk and Lady Astor extended a welcome and paid tribute to her aunt, not only for her achievements and accomplishments, but for her modern outlook on life, despite the fourscore years she has lived.

Among guests from a distance, in addition to hundreds of relatives from Lynchburg, supplemented by as many friends, were Hon. Mrs. Robert Brand, of London, sister of Lady Astor; Mrs. Alice B. Winthrop, of New York, a cousin; Mrs. W. H. Langhorne and Mrs. Perkins Ellis, sisters-in-law, Albemarle County; Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, Murfreesboro, Tenn.; Mrs. Heyward Gibbs, Jerome, Ariz.; Mrs. Thomas Ragland, Beckley, W. Va.; Mrs. Stephen Meem, Bluefield, W. Va.; Mrs. C. W. Haden, Richard Langhorne and J. F. Langhorne, Evington. Scores of members of the younger generation of the family from Lynchburg and elsewhere attended the party and assisted in the care of the guests.

Retired Scholar Continues Studies in Secluded Cabin

Philosopher, 73, Finds Sunset of Life Pleasant as He Delves into Ancient Classics, Tends Little Farm and Rides on Horse in Lonely Sector.

Louisa, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Dr. Glanville Terrell, philosophical scholar and linguist, rich in the lore of the ancients and the science of the moderns, is finding the sunset of life by no means the least pleasant.

Here in his secluded cabin that has been dubbed "Solomon's Temple," the retired University of Kentucky Greek and philosophy professor continues to probe into the learning of antiquity and to keep abreast of modern civilization. But more important, he keeps fit daily by application of the command "back to nature."

Dr. Terrell, who retired four years ago, today is as fit at 73 as any man of 50. Every day when the weather is not too bad he rides 10 miles or more astride Maud, his saddle mare, and relieves his achievement when 67 years old, of traveling 610 miles on horseback in 19 days, from Louisa to Lexington, Ky.

A bachelor who had a reputation when he retired, not only as a scholar and a horseman, but also as a traveler and mountain climber, Dr. Terrell was so unaccustomed to family life that he built . one-story frame study near the home of his sister.

Here in "Solomon's Temple" he keeps his books and papers, and studies apart from the noises and trials of housekeeping. The cabin is equipped with reading lamps, writing desk, table, stove, a chair in which he has studied for 25 years, and a bedroom suite. Outside are the quarters of his riding mare.

The scholar does his own cleaning so his books will not be disturbed. "A woman," he explains, "is neat, but she has no sense of order. A woman's idea of arranging books is to classify them according to size and color, because it looks better. Any man knows books should be arranged by subjects, authors and chronology."

At night he is the picture of the true scholar, at ease in his favorite chair, running down an abstruse theory or tracing the march of progress. In the day time he rides, or attends to the many details of managing a farm, applying his knowledge to practical matters such as crops or how best to dig a well.

Dr. Terrell has climbed the Matterhorn and other famed peaks, made six trips abroad, claims to know more about Greece from actual observation in his many tramps over the country than any one else in America ,and has written many sketches on classical subjects.

Boy, Back Broken, on 8-Day Trek of 270 Miles for Aid

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Over 270 miles of windswept mountain roads from Martinsburg, W. Va., a 4-year-old boy with a broken back trekked with his parents, a younger brother and sister, to reach Wheeling—and possible relief.

Jimmy Lucas was injured in a fall down stairs, and his father Elmer, unemployed, had only a little money for food and none for doctor bills.

A brother of Mrs. Lucas lived in Collier, near Wheeling. He promised to help. So Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, Jimmy, Eddie, 3 and a 5-month-old baby girl, started over the mountains. They came much of the way on foot, although "lifts" by automobiles helped "every once in a while," Lucas said.

It took eight days to reach Wheeling, where the woman's brother, a miner, promised to meet them. All were suffering from hunger and exposure—especially Jimmy.

But Mrs. Lucas' brother wasn't here when they arrived. The Salvation Army gave relief and started a search which may locate the man.

Meanwhile, Jimmy is in a hospital, receiving medical care he should have had days ago, 270 miles away.

Miss Sue A. Williams, 97, Oldest Resident of Orange

Special to The Washington Post.

Orange, Va., Dec. 10.—Miss Sue A. Williams, who is considered the oldest living resident of Orange County, will be 98 on December 27.

She is the sole survivor of a family of seven children of the late Bluford S. Williams and his wife, Mary B. Williams, members of a prominent Virginia family. A native and lifelong resident of Orange County, Miss Williams was born and raised on the farm on which she now lives and owns. The farm of 200 acres is a part of a large tract known as the Winslow land, a grant to Benjamin Winslow, her great-grandfather. The tract originally comprised several thousand acres.

Miss Williams' nephew, C. E. Williams, whose home is nearby, has active management of the farm, and her niece, Miss Lucy Mae Winslow, lives with and takes devoted care of her aunt, whose health is good for one of her years. Her mental faculties are remarkably alert.

She recalls clearly many incidents of the War Between the States, in which two of her brothers—Edward and Joseph—fought for "the lost cause." For some time during the conflict she and other members of her family were forced to become refugees while their home was occupied by Gen. Scales as his headquarters, the meathouse being used as a stable.

Miss Williams is a member of Trinity Methodist Church, Orange, and until recent years was a regular attendant at its services.

Eight Tons of Marbles Ruined as Truck Burns

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 10.—An unusual and costly fire, in which eight tons of fancy marbles for the boy trade and a large transfer truck were destroyed, was reported here today.

The truck, belonging to a Clarksburg transfer concern, caught fire in Federal highway 50, near Fellowsville, and both cargo and truck were ruined. The marbles, made at a Clarksburg factory, were being driven to Philadelphia for reshipment by boat to California. Vehicle and cargo insurance were carried.

GEN. WILCOX DEAD; CIVIL WAR VETERAN

Attended Jefferson Davis During His Detention; Retired in 1904.

Brig. Gen. Timothy E. Wilcox, 92, retired Army surgeon who attended Jefferson Davis during his detention at Fort Monroe after the Civil War, died yesterday in his home at 1841 California street northwest.

Gen. Wilcox, who was born in North Litchfield, N. Y., on April 26, 1840, received his early schooling at West Winfield, from which he entered Union College in 1857. After graduation he joined the Northern Army during the Civil War, serving as quartermaster's clerk.

An attack of typhoid fever forced him to retire from active service soon after enlisting, and it was not until his graduation from Albany Medical College in 1864 that he again was associated with the Army. This time he received the commission of assistant surgeon in the Sixth New York Heavy Artillery.

In Charge of Hospital.

After his service in the field he was placed in charge of the hospitals at Farmville and Petersburg, Va., from which he was transferred to Fort Monroe, where it was his regular duty to attend Jefferson Davis, then being detained there by the United States Government.

In 1868 he resigned his commission to take up private practice, which he soon reliquished to accept a post at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. During his stay in the West, Gen. Wilcox participated in numerous Indian uprisings.

He was retired from active duty on his birthday in 1904 at the age of 64. During his Army career the general saw service in Army stations all over the United States and its possessions. During all of his 30 years of service his name never once appeared on the sick report.

Interested in Science.

At the time of his death he held both the M. A. and M. D. degrees, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He occupied the chairs of physiology and chemistry at Union College prior to 1865. He was keenly interested in all branches of science.

He is survived by a daughter, Miss Florence Elizabeth Wilcox, and a granddaughter, Gloria Edna Wilcox, who resides with her mother in Los Angeles, Calif.

The date for the funeral had not been decided upon, but relatives said last night interment would be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Highway Robbery Brings Life Term

Man Sentenced in Orange Had Been Fugitive for Several Months.

Special to The Washington Post.

Orange, Va., Dec. 10.—Walter Ross, colored, 25, native of Louisiana, but resident of Charlottesville and other Virginia cities for several years, tried in Orange Circuit, Judge Alex T. Browning presiding, was sentenced yesterday to life imprisonment for highway robbery with a deadly weapon.

His brother, Joseph Ross, is now serving a sentence for possession of stolen goods and on Monday, with Walter Ross, was indicted in the Circuit Court of Albemarle on two charges of breaking into freight cars and stealing merchandise. This indictment of Walter Ross will be indefinitely shelved in view of the life sentence.

Walter Ross was charged with assaulting W. S. Pandree, a white taxicab driver and his colored pasenger, Archie Kennedy, February 13. He had been a fugitive until three weeks ago when he surrendered to Detective O. M. Wood of the Charlottesville Police Department.

COED RIGHTS SHOW GAINS AT VIRGINIA U.

Move for Equal Recognition of Women Increases; 124 Are Matriculated.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 10.—Among the 124 women students matriculated at the University of Virginia are five who graduated from the Charlottesville High School last May. To observers, this indicates that the contention of Mrs. B B. Munford, of Richmond, and others for equal recognition for women and men in the university has at last obtained a foothold. This is regarded as a challenge to the regulation requiring a college degree of all women matriculates.

The list of coeds enrolled is signalized by the small number of Virginians. This may be attributed to the wide publicity given the prohibitive rule during the fight for a coordinate college at Charlottesville. The fact that there are 60 from Albemarle County probably presages a much larger number from other sections of the State hereafter.

There are comparatively few from the cities of the State. Richmond and Roanoke have only three each. There are two each from Norfolk, Danville and Portsmouth, and only one each from Lynchburg, Petersburg, Staunton, Alexandria and Covington.

Eleven More Registered.

The present total of coeds shows a gain of eleven over the corresponding date last year. They come from twelve States and two foreign countries. Virginia, of course, heads the list with 107. There are two each from Maryland, North Carolina, Texas, South Carolina and Massachusetts, and one each from Louisiana, Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Utah and New Jersey. The foreign countries represented are Puerto Rico and Holland.

Sixty-two of the women students are in the education department, 45 in the graduate schools, 10 in the college department, six in the school of medicine, and one in the law department. Twenty of the 124 are married.

The sole matriculate in the law school is Miss Anna Eliza Dinwiddie, of Charlottesville Those in the medical department are Misses Margaret DeRonde, of Teaneck, N. J.; Johnnie Armstrong, of Ashland, Va.; Clara L. Hoye, of Louisa; Marion S. Love, of Danville; Jean McNutt Martin, of Middlebrook, Va., and Eleanor H. McCoy, of Cambridge, Mass.

School of Education.

Exactly half of the women—62—are in the School of Education. Those from outside of Albemarle County are:

Dorothy Virginia Evans, Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. Martha Webster MacLeod, Asheville, N. C.; Grace A. West, Warsaw, N. C.; Ruth F. Campbell, Culpeper; Mrs. Alice P. Crockett, Alleghany Springs; Katherine Russell Gary, Kenbridge, Va.; Arbutus Lee Grotz, Selma, Va.; Eunice Gill, Danville, Va.; Alice L. Grubbs, Dendron, Va.; Mrs. Evelyn S. Holladay, Smithfield, Va.; Callie Margaret Johnson, Norfolk; Anne P. Lackey, Staunton; Catherine Louise Lund, Portsmouth; Gertrude Morrison, Murat; Susie W. Nash, Clifford; Mrs. Edith H. Pinchback, Richmond; Irene G. Ring, Woodstock; Thelma M. Robinson, Strasburg; Margaret E. Sage, Schuyler; Willie H. Savage, Portsmouth; Marie J. Showalter, Enterprise; Elizabeth H. Spilman, Culpeper; Mary O. Stilwell, Roanoke; Margaret E. Tatum, Norfolk; Emma Comer Tinsley, Roanoke, and Mollie B. Whitlock, Tobaccoville.

In Graduate School.

In the Graduate School, not counting the matriculates from the city, university and county, are:

Helen Camp deCorse, Drayton, Md.; Ahda Antonia Blanco, Santurce, Puerto Rico; Mary Travers Armentrout, McGaheysville; L. Elizabeth Boggs, Dayton; Elizabeth M. Cover, Covington; Georgia May Elgar, Wytheville; Anna Pipes Davis, Covington, La.; Virginia H. Holt, Staunton; Mattie P. Keen, Trevilians; Mrs. Elizabeth H. Jones, Richmond; Mrs. Mary Pinkerton Kerr, Spartansburg, S. C.; Charlotte Kohler, Richmond; Mrs. Katherine Akers Meade, Lynchburg; Sarah Michie, Lubbock, Tex.; Beulah Musgrove, Roanoke; Clara Eugenia Payne, Alexandria; Fannie Bell Shorter, Darlington Heights; Hazel M. Skelhorne, Worcester, Mass.; E. Marguerite Souders, Petersburg; Mrs. Martha M. Taylor, Argentum, Ky.; Mary P. Trammell, Atlanta, Ga.; Mary H. Turk, Tazewell; Mrs. Cameron P. Tutwiler, Gloucester; Mrs. Leonie A. Van de Kamp, Laandam, Holland; Mrs. Dorothy H. Wheeler, Loughman, Fla., and Margaret Lee Wiley, Denton, Tex.

All of the ten matriculates in the college are from the city or university.

School Note Ordered Paid.

The Arlington County School Board, meeting Friday night in the office of County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, authorized the payment of a note amounting to $52,500 which became due yesterday.

MEMORIAL SERVICE SET IN ALEXANDRIA

Wall Around Old Graveyard Will Be Dedicated on Wednesday.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Sons of the Revolution in the District of Columbia, and the Washington Society of Alexandria will participate in two ceremonies on Wednesday incident to the closing of the Bicentennial year. This day, the 133d anniversary of the death of George Washington, will be marked with the dedication of a handsome $6,000 brick wall around the graveyard at the Old Presbyterian Meeting House, 300 block South Fairfax street, the gift of the Sons of the Revolution throughout the country, as a memorial to the friends, neighbors and comrades of George Washington who are buried in this old yard.

At 2:15 o'clock that afternoon the dedication of this wall and descriptive tablet will take place, with the following program: Greeting to the 31 patriotic societies assembled to participate, John B. Gordon; music, United States Army Band; address, "The Contribution of Virginia to the Bicentennial," John Garland Pollard, jr., director of the State of Virginia Bicentennial Commission; address, Col. John W. Williams, clerk of the House of Delegates, Richmond, secretary of the Virginia Bicentennial Commission; solo, Mrs. Evelyn Howard Sheridan, accompanied by the United States Army Band; address, "The Friends of Washington," Dr. Thomas E. Green, national chaplain of the General Society of the Sons of the Revolution; music, United States Army Band; solo, Mrs. Sheridan, accompanied by Miss Frances Alexander Sinclair, descendant of the founder of Alexandria.

At 3 o'clock the assemblage will move to the old school building at the corner of Wolfe and Washington streets, where a bronze marker will be unveiled. This building housed the first free school in the United States. It was endowed by George Washington. The speakers at this ceremony will be Dr. Francis P Gaines, president, Washington and Lee University; William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education; Hugh T. Williams, chairman, National Americanism committee of the American Legion; William Buckner McGroarty, president of the Washington Society of Alexandria.

Dr. William Lewis Schafer, city health officer, reports six cases of scarlet fever in Alexandria in the past month, nine cases of chickenpox and one of whooping cough. There were 29 deaths inthe city in November and 45 births. The free clinic treated 937 patients and 243 at the baby clinic in Alexandria proper and 121 at the clinic held in Potomac.

Mayor Edmund F. Ticer yesterday issued a statement urging the citizens of Alexandria to observe this week as Golden Rule week. Funds contributed during this week may be designated for any specific institution or type of work in which the donor is especially interested. L. H. Dudley, cashier of the Alexandria National Bank, is local treasurer.

City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan has reported State tax collections, prior to the date for the penalty to be added, of $57,520.02. This amount is out of a total of $69,632.22. He reports 4,164 persons have paid their poll tax, approximately 800 less than the number who paid last year.

Members of the Holy Name Society will receive Holy Communion at 7 o'clock this morning in St. Mary's Catholic Church. At 8 o'clock tonight the Junior Holy Name Society will meet in the Lyceum with the older society.

Takoma Park Christmas Tree Planned on Dec. 22

The annual Christmas tree ceremony for the children of Takoma Park, sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, will be held December 22, at 3 o'clock, at the firehouse hall, Mrs. A. L. Reynolds, president of the auxiliary, announced yesterday.

There will be gifts for every child who attends, both of toys and candies. A door prize also will be given for a boy and a girl. A big Christmas tree will be laden with gifts and these will be distributed by Santa Claus. Last year more than 400 children attended the Christmas treat.

DATE OF BALL TRIAL TOPS COURT DOCKET

Judge McCarthy Expected to Take Action Tomorrow at Arlington.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With the opening of the December term of Arlington Circuit Court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, with Judge Walter T. McCarthy presiding, it is expected that the trial date of former County Treasurer E. Wade Ball, indicted for misuse of public funds, will be set.

Another matter that will have the court's early attention and for which a day will be set for argument is the request by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas for an outside jury to hear the case.

The grand jury will consist of the following named persons: Walter O'Hara, J. Vernon Smith, George A. Rucker, James W. Trick, G. C. Bean, Walter E. Bell, Ernest W. Cushing, James Harris and G. O. Basham. The jury will have but five cases to pass on, all for housebreaking and assault with intent to kill.

The Arlington County board at its Friday night meeting after accepting free rights of way for the extension of the Lee boulevard to the Government reservation approved the recommendation made by County Manager Roy S. Braden for a cut in the water rate.

The approved reduction which becomes effective January 1, will be $20 instead of $24 a year, payable quarterly. While at present the rate for all excess of 40,000 gallons per year has been 30 cents per 1,000 gallons, the new rate will be 30 cents for the first 20,000 gallons, 25 for the next and 22 cents for all over 50,000 gallons.

Commercial rates are reduced from a straight 30 cents per 1,000 gallons to 30 cents for the first 10,000 gallons; 25 cents for the next 20,000 gallons; 20 cents for the next 50,000 and 18 cents for all over 80,000 gallons.

In all the board accepted all but 2 of the 23 recommendations which Mr. Braden made.

Tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock there will be a special called meeting of the Arlington County Welfare Board at the courthouse. Chairman E. J. Skidmore called the meeting to consider and perfect plans for a county-wide drive for funds to take care of the many demands for assistance.

Representatives from all service, business and civic organizations in the county have been invited to attend.

With no funds coming to Arlington County this year from the Washington (D. C.) Community Chest from contributions made by county residents, as was the case last year, Mr. Skidmore says that the welfare board needs the whole-hearted cooperation of all organizations worse than ever before.

Presbyterians Celebrate Today.

With special music, the ninth anniversary of the Clarendon Presbyterian Church will be celebrated today. The services will begin at 11 o'clock with the sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Isaac Steenson.

VIRGINIA FUNDS CUT TO BALANCE BUDGET

Pollard Makes Second Slash of 10 Per Cent Due to Revenue Drop.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The unabating tumble in State revenues precipitated the second 10 per cent State general fund appropriations cut today.

Acting with the authority vested in him by the 1932 General Assembly, Gov. Pollard for the second time in six months ordered a 10 per cent slash in all general fund allotments, to keep the budget balanced.

It is to be effective for the second half of the fiscal year, beginning January 1. It will be in addition to the original 10 per cent pruning, ordered June 13, for the entire fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, after the General Assembly itself lopped 7½ per cent off of the appropriations total of the previous year.

Cut for Six Months.

During the last six months of the year the State will be operating on a general fund budget, 27½ per cent less than it was for the same period last year.

The cut today will amount to approximately $750,000. The June 13 reduction amounted to $1,500,000. Using the power given him by the General Assembly to keep the budget balanced the governor thus far has reduced the running expense outlay by $2,250,000.

Armed with this authority, the governor has repeatedly asserted that Virginia's budget will continue to balance and he reiterated this assertion today in a letter to all department heads, explaining that the cut was necessary to stave off an otherwise impending deficit in the general fund treasury.

Reduction Pro Rata.

The reduction will be applied pro rata to all general fund allotments, and it may extend to some extent into the department of highways, although this is operated under a special fund. It was said that the extent to which the highway department would suffer was under consideration.

It was pointed out, however, that in addition to the fact that the department is operated under a separate fund, it suffered severely with the withdrawal of all of its general fund appropriation by the last General Assembly, and more when much of its money was transferred for use on county roads.

The only exception among the departments, agencies and institutions, whose general fund appropriations have been cut 27½ per cent under appropriation of last year, was the department of education. Because of an increase appropriation this year—the only appropriation increase—it is now to operate at expenses approximately 14 per cent below those of last year, J. H. Bradford, director of the budget, said.

35 Cases of Influenza Reported at Lexington

Lexington, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Health authorities were advised today of 35 cases of influenza and four cases of pneumonia at Virginia Military Institute.

They were told that there are about 110 cases in Lexington and vicinity. A considerable increase in the number of cases was noted during the last few days.

Mrs. Robert Cockerille Funeral Rites Conducted

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 10.—Funeral services were held this afternoon in the chapel in the cemetery for Mrs. Savilda Cockerille, 65, wife of Robert Cockerille, who died at her home here from paralysis. She was a native of Loudoun County, and before her marriage was Miss Savildo Hardy.

Besides her husband, she is survived by four children. Interment was in the Leesburg Cemetery.

Moffett Says Navy Needs 11 Aircraft Carriers Now

(Associated Press.)

Early construction of eleven aircraft carriers to bring the United States fleet up to full treaty limit was urged yesterday "as a most essential step to our national defense," by Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, in a report to the Secretary of the Navy.

Fleet exercises have continued to demonstrate the serious shortage of aircraft-carrying vessels, the admiral said, adding that but three out of a total of fourteen permitted ships of this type have been or are being built.

Reiterating his recommendations of last year, Moffett urged that "an ordered program should be at once inaugurated to build up carriers and flying decks to the full treaty limit."

Reporting on the progress of naval aviation during the fiscal year ended June 30, he called attention to the outstanding features of naval heavier-than-air development, which included the use of faster scouting planes, faster fighting planes, the use of long-distance patrol planes based on tenders and on fleet air bases, and the increased use of catapult-launched planes from cruisers and battleships.

On the question of new construction, the admiral said: "I again invite attention to the serious condition of the aeronautical industry. Due to the economic situation, the aeronautical industry is largely dependent upon the business from the Army and Navy. To provide for the future welfare of both the Government and the industry, it is essential that well-established firms be enabled to remain in business. This can be done only by a reasonable volume of experimental and production orders resulting in fair profits."

The report said that due to the failure of enactment of the bill submitted to the last Congress for 114 airplanes for the U. S. Ranger, the Navy is faced with the "very serious and difficult task of providing these airplanes within the 1,000 planes now authorized."

It was explained that this can be accomplished only by eliminating or reducing other very necessary units of the aeronautical organization and the admiral added: "I consider it essential that airplanes, in addition to those authorized by the five-year program, be authorized for all new ship construction carrying aircraft."

TOYS FOR FAIRFAX NEEDY ARE ASKED

Drive Is Started for Yule Remembrance for All Poor in County.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Fairfax 166.

An appeal has been made by Mrs. Eleanor W. Aud, superintendent of public welfare of Fairfax County, Va., to the people of the county to send her all discarded toys and clothes so that all needy children may be remembered on Christmas.

She states that these toys and clothes are to be repaired and distributed to children of the county who otherwise would not be remembered on Christmas. Mrs. Aud is also making an appeal for food and money to buy articles for Christmas baskets to be sent needy families for their Christmas dinners. She has asked all persons and organizations who distribute baskets and gifts to the needy each year to consult with her at Fairfax so that a plan of distribution can be worked out in order that there will be no duplication.

An appeal is also being made for worn-out or discarded children's shoes. The shoes that are donated will be remade and soled under the direction of Superintendent M. M. Barnard of the District of Columbia Workhouse at Lorton.

The play, "Who Wouldn't be Crazy," given by the Alumni Players of the Oakton High School Alumni Association, will be repeated in the auditorium of the Lee-Jackson High School, at Seminary, Wednesday night for the benefit of the school. Members of the cast are: Adele Pfalzgraf, Jeanne Ritchie, Alma Poole, Elsie Buser, Dorothy Ritchie, Thelma Pearson, Audrey Reid, Mavis Cobb, Adrain Newman, Fred Loental, Stanley Dove, Ralph Miller, Dwight Brown, Norman Cobb, Roland Miller and Harold Brown.

Clothing demonstrations for the 4-H clubs and reorganizing the program for the ensuing year's work is the schedule of meetings arranged by Miss Sarah E. Thomas, county home demonstration agent for Fairfax County, for this week.

Demonstrations on the care of clothing will be given at the meetings of the following 4-H clubs: Wednesday morning at Oakton and Forestville; Wednesday afternoon at Forestville High and McLean; Thursday morning at Baileys Cross Roads; Friday morning at Potters Hill and Lorton; Friday afternoon at Franconia; Saturday morning at Fairview, and Saturday afternoon at Herndon.

Tuesday morning the Home Demonstration Club at Floris will reorganize. Tuesday night the Oakton Home Demonstration Club will meet and a demonstration on the preparation of lunches will be given at the home of Mrs. Thomas E. Adams by the club leaders. Wednesday night the Merrifield Home Demonstration Club will meet at the home of Mrs. James U. Kincheloe, at Fairfax, to reorganize and witness a demonstration on rugmaking and repairing. Thursday afternoon the Navy Home Demonstration Club will meet for reorganization and a demonstration on house furnishings.

Motion pictures showing home, health and demonstration subjects will be shown tomorrow night in the Franconia School, Tuesday night in the Oakton School, Friday night in the Franklin-Sherman School at McLean, Wednesday night at Herndon, and Thursday night in the Chesterbrook School. These pictures are given under the auspices of Dr. A. L. Carson, county health director; H. B. Derr, county agricultural agent, and Miss Thomas.

Fairfax Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, at its anual meeting in Fairfax, elected Clinton A. Lane consul, with R. McCarthy Wiley becoming past consul. Other officers elected were Allan Williams, advisor; John M. Whalen, banker; A. B. Carter, clerk; Frank E. Jones, escort; Guy L. Harmon, watchman; John C. Sisson, sentinel, and E. M. Wiley, Frank Jones and John Sisson, trustees. The officers will be installed January 17. A. B. Carter and Lewis M. Coyner were appointed lodge auditors.

The honor roll of the Fairfax School for the past month contains the names of the pupils who have neither been absent nor tardy, and have made an average of at least 90 in all their subjects. Those listed are: First grade—Ford Johnson, Junior Dauvin, Melvin Snappe, Francis Blinkhorn, Douglas Keene, Thelma Loveless, Doris Dindlebeck and Helen Downs. Second grade—Katherine Lowe, Mabel Bowling, Gordon Allder, Gilbert Thompson, John Swart and Wilma Fox. Third grade—Virginia Lee Whalen, Mary Tucker, Mary Sisson, Ethel Fox, Ann Farr, Christine Baughman, George Denny and Earl Garrison. Fourth grade—Doris Hollis. Economy League Units Are Formed

Dudley Is Chairman for Loudoun and Atkinson for Fauquier.

Special to The Washington Post.

Middleburg, Va., Dec. 10.—T. U. Dudley, of Middleburg, has been named chairman for Loudoun County, and Thomas Atkinson, jr., chairman for Fauquier, of the branch of the National Economy League, which organization has just been perfected in Loudoun and Fauquier Counties.

Plans for the organization of this branch were formulated at a meeting in the home of Mr. Atkinson here, at which time Thomas Glasscock, W. G. Fletcher, J. W. Slaughter, J. C. Williams, Henry Frost, Fletcher Harper, C. E. Tiffany, W. H. Clifford and T. U. Dudley were present.

The National Economy League is a nonpartisan organization composed of citizens interested in reducing the cost of government. As an immediate objective, the league seeks the elimination of the growing expenditures by the Federal Government, now in excess of $450,000,000 annually, for benefits to veterans of the Spanish and World Wars who suffered no disability through war service.

PEANUT CROP LOAN LENIENCY PROMISED

(Associated Press.)

Representative Drewry, of Petersburg, said yesterday the crop loan office had assured him that a policy sympathetic to farmers in distress would be pushed in handling loans for their production.

Drewry, Representative Lankford, of Norfolk, and Representative Kerr, of North Carolina, called at the crop loan office to urge greater benefits for peanut growers in their districts who are indebted to the Government for seed loans.

Drewry asked that the growers be permitted to use a portion of their crop, placed in storage as collateral for their Government loans, to borrow cash from banks. Kerr proposed that the credit allowed the growers in placing their crops in storage to the account of the Secretary of Agriculture at the rate of 2½ cents per pound.

They were informed the loan office would not lay down a general policy regarding the release of peanuts for bank loans, but would seek to cooperate in cases of distress.

The loan office also said 1¼ cents per pound credit was the maximum that could be atllowed.

The loan office recently authorized the storage of peanuts in cooperative and other atpproved warehouses as collateral for Government loans. The loans were due November 30. Under the storage authorization the growers will be permitted to market the peanuts throughout the winter.

Sheriff Without Clews In Auto "Lift" Robbery

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10.—Efforts of Sheriff R. Glenn Prout, Anne Arundel County, and Deputy Sheriff Arthur R. Cornwaite, of Laurel, to obtain a clew to the identity of five assailants of Harrison Cornwell, held up and robbed of $87 near Laurel last Wednesday, have proved unavailing.

Cornwell told Sheriff Prout that he was walking along a road south of Laurel when an automobile bearing the five men offered him a lift and he accepted. While riding along, Cornwell said, he told the men he was bound for Laurel to pay an installment on his car. Soon after, he said, the men covered him with pistols, relieved him of the $87, led him into a woods and tied him to a pine tree. Cornwell said he remained bound for about two hours, until Negroes living nearby heard his cries and released him.

4-H Club at Herndon Elects New Officers

The 4-H Club of the school at Herndon, Va., has elected the following officers for the coming year: Miss Alice Bready, president; Jean Thompson, vice president; Betty McGuire, secretary; June Seamons, treasurer; Betty Brown, song and cheer leader, and Willie Kirk, reporter.

Every member of the club has been presented with a 4-H Club pin for making a perfect record in club work during the past year. The next meeting will be held in the Home Economics Building of the Herndon High School on Saturday afternoon. Miss Ruth McGuire will be chairman of the entertainment committee and Miss June Seamons and Miss Willie Kirk will have charge of refreshments.

JOB MAIL SWAMPS VIRGINIA SENATORS

Flood of Appeals Compel Them to Drop Efforts at Acknowledgement.

(Associated Press.)

Deluged with mail from job hunters and their friends, Virginia's senators announced yesterday they had stopped acknowledging such communications.

Even before election day the job seekers were busy in anticipation of a Democratic victory. Since Gov. Roosevelt was elected scores of letters have been received daily by both Senators Swanson and Glass, asking for places in the Government.

The jobs range from big plums like collector of customs and District attorney to clerkships in various offices and run the range of all four classes of postmasterships.

On a smaller scale representatives have been similarly besieged.

It was said at the senators' offices that correspondence regarding jobs was being filed away for future reference. For a time they attempted to acknowledge the applications, but the office staffs were unable to transact other business.

The policy that will be pursued regarding the handling of patronage in Virginia has not been laid down and Senator Swanson said several days ago it probably would not be for six months. The State delegation in Congress, he said, would await a pronouncement from the new President before taking up the filling of offices.

At the same time, it was believed generally in the delegation that postoffices would be left strictly up to the representatives, while the senators would handle the collectorships and court posts.

Loudoun Circuit Court Will Open Tomorrow

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 10.—The December term of the Loudoun County Circuit Court will open here Monday, with Judge J. R. H. Alexander presiding. The grand jury is composed of the following: J. H. Shumate, C. H. Clemens, O. S. Bradon, B. G. Deck, E. L. Norman, Paul A. Adams, W. G. Waltman, George R. Hess and Ben Middleton.

Four cases are to be presented to the grand jury. Among these are Joe Proctor and Roosevelt Gaskins, both colored, who are charged with stealing eight hams from Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, of Middleburg, and they both have a joint charge of taking $3.50 belonging to Mrs. Katherine Elkins Hitt, also of Middleburg. Levi Smith, colored, will be presented for a felony charge, and Rozier Fields for operating a truck while under the influence of liquor.

Two Injured as Truck Crashes Into Train

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 10.—Skidding on the first snow of the season into a passing passenger train on a grade crossing as the truck driver tried to stop, William H. Dillyard and Julian Shade, both of Winchester, Va., were injured this morning near Bunker Hill, south of here.

Shade, driving, was the more seriously hurt. Both were taken to a Winchester Hospital, Shade remaining for further examination. The accident happened on the State highway. The men were bringing a load of groceries from Winchester to Bunker Hill when the accident happened. They were taken to Winchester by a pasing motorist.

Citizens to Discuss County Sewerage.

The needs for a county-wide sewerage system for Arlington County will be discussed at a meeting of the Clarendon Citizens Association tomorrow night at 34 Wilson boulevard. President J. B. Swecker urges all members to attend and aid in getting something started by county officials which will promise relief along these lines.

RICHARD DIX SEES BIG NEW DODGE SIX AT SPECIAL SHOWING

Hollywood, Cal.—Richard Dix, movie idol, and star of the great new Radio Pictures' feature, "The Conquerors", was given a special advance showing of the new 1933 Dodge Six here today.

"The new Dodge is an achievement to be proud of," said the buoyant Mr. Dix, "You know our picture is called 'The Conquerors' and I think that would be a splendid name for this new Dodge car.

"'The Conquerors' shows how one generation learns from its father's, always growing stronger, better, with each new generation showing greater vision, greater courage, greater initiative.

"The story of Dodge is much like that. From the very beginning it has been an outstanding line of cars . . . every year it has grown better . . . now . . . after these trying years Dodge still surges forward with an even greater car . . . another Pioneer in its field. Dodge can be proud of it . . . as we are of 'The Conquerors'."

Reports are flying thick and fast about the new Dodge Six, pending official announcement from the Dodge organization. From reliable sources, however, it is learned fairly definitely that the new Dodge will blaze a new trail in automobile value by offering the public a Six of high quality at a radical low price.

EARLY SHOPPING PAYS

To choose carefully, leisurely . . . from the most complete variety, shop early in the day, early in the week! For economy and satisfaction avoid the rush of last minute shopping . . . and avoid the rush hour of the day. For the best selection, for the attention from salespeople that means satisfactory service, and for the assurance of prompt delivery . . . SHOP EARLY!

YOUR SHOPPING DOLLAR

Not only are the provisions for this Christmas most lavish, but you can secure higher quality for less money than ever before . . . Reading the advertisements in this paper today will demonstrate how far your gift dollars will stretch this year. Take advantage of the exceptional buying opportunities now offered. It will mean finer gifts for your friends and greater economy for you . . . MAKE THIS A QUALITY CHRISTMAS!

QUALITY Circulation Means QUANTITY RESULTS From Christmas ADVERTISING

The record of merchandise and commodity sales in Washington proves that 80 per cent of all purchases are made by 65 per cent of the families. Another 18 per cent of the families account for only 14 per cent of the buying; 5 per cent of the families do but 1 per cent of the purchasing and a fourth group, comprising 12 per cent of the total number of families, account for but 5 per cent of the total volume of sales.

The advertiser's market must, therefore, be gauged on the basis of purchases rather than upon population . . . He NEEDS 80 per cent coverage of one group instead of the 65 per cent represented by mere mass circulation to all groups!

The selective "Quality" circulation of The Washington Post directs 79 cents out of each advertising dollar to the group which spends 80 cents out of every dollar spent in Washington stores!

The remaining 35 per cent of Washington families do but 20 per cent of the buying and are reached by only 21 per cent of The Washington Post circulation.

Ralph Starr Butler, vice president of General Foods Corporation, speaking before the Association of National Advertisers at Atlantic City on November 17 said. "We must get away from QUANTITY and place more stress on QUALITY of circulation." The Washington Post offers HONEST CIRCULATION, in DIRECT PROPORTION to the spending habits of Washington families—Quality circulation that is reflected in QUANTITY RESULTS! GUARD UNIT AWARDS TO GO OUT THURSDAY

Presentation for Summer Work to Be Presented in Silver Spring.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 2103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Presentation of awards won at the summer encampment will be made at the weekly drill of the Service Company, First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, at the Silver Spring Armory Thursday night, according to an announcement by Capt. Ward W. Caddington, commanding. The occasion will be a joint party to be attended by the members of the Silver Spring Post of the American Legion. Former commanding officers will be present.

Among the awards will be the K Company trophy, given by Maj. E. Brooke Lee, former commanding officer, to the enlisted man most efficient in his duties and who has given the most valuable service to his company in the past year; the Forsyth trophy, given by Dr. Howell Forsyth for high expertness with the rifle; the American Legion Cup, given by the Cissel-Saxon Post, American Legion of Silver Spring, to the soldier with the highest score who has not previously qualified; the company commander's trophy for the highest pistol qualification score; and the lieutenants' trophy for the sharpshooter with the highest score.

H. S. Giusta, former commander of the Legion post, will make the presentation of the legion trophy. Various other prizes have been given by Silver Spring merchants to those excelling in marksmanship. An entertainment and refreshments will follow the presentation.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation will hold the monthly meeting tomorrow night at the Bethesda Elementary School, Bethesda, Md.

Montgomery County motorists are being asked by county police to have their cars tested in accordance with the Maryland law which requires that they be certified in good mechanical condition by an authorized garage before license tags can be purchased. The time limit on the campaign has been extended by E. Austin Baughman, commissioner of motor vehicles, for an indefinite period, but motorists are urged not to take advantage of this but to have their cars examined at once.

Practically all garages of the county have been authorized to make inspections, which are conducted free of charge.

Formation of a case study committee to represent the Montgomery County Council of American Legion Posts in cooperation with the Montgomery County Social Service League in the handling of all veterans relief cases in the county was announced yesterday. Under the plan, the social service league officials and the legion committee will confer on all cases affecting former soldiers.

Six members have been named to the committee by Maj. Howard W. Cutler, of Silver Spring, president of the council. They are: Maj. Cutler and Harold S. Guista, of Silver Spring; Robert Tolson, of Rockville; Lawrence R. Smoot, of Kensington; William H. Gilpin, of Sandy Spring and John E. Lind, of Takoma Park.

Thomas C. Kelley, of Darnestown, has resigned as secretary of the Social Service League because of pressure of private business. Miss Lavinia Engle, of Forest Glen, has been elected in his place.

Mrs. Bates Etchison was elected president of the Neighborhood Garden Club of Gaithersburg. Other officers are Mrs. J. W. Wiley, vice president; Miss Grace Osborn, second vice president; Mrs. Sprigg Ward, recording secretary; Mrs. Merle Jacobs, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clyde Thomas, assistant corresponding secretary and Mrs. Charles E. Becraft, treasurer.

Prizes were awarded for the year. Mrs. J. W. Wiley was awarded first prize for a boxwood bush; Mrs. Merle Jacobs, second, for an evergreen shrub; Mrs. Thomas W. Troxell, third, flower vase. The club voted to place a marker on the Bicentennial tree planted at the Methodist Home for the Aged. Mrs. Merle Jacobs, chairman, and Mrs. George Ninas and Mrs. Bates Etchison were appointed a committee to work for erection of a permanent outdoor Christmas tree at the Methodist Home.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will speak at a meeting of the Woman's Club of Bethesda at 3 p. m. Tuesday at the clubhouse on the Old Georgetown road.

Officers of the Homemakers Clubs of the county will meet at 2 p. m. Wednesday, at the office of Miss Blythe M. Turner, county home demonstration agent. Miss Turner and Miss U. M. Keller, State home demonstration agent, will meet with the officers to plan for the program of activities for the year.

Mining Congress To Open Thursday

Stabilization, Taxation and Tariff Will Be Among Topics Discussed.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the American Mining Congress will convene Thursday at the Mayflower Hotel for a three-day session. Every phase of mining activity will be considered it was announced by J. F. Callbreath, secretary of the Congress.

"In view of the political changes that have taken place in national and state affairs," said Mr. Callbreath, "this meeting of the mining congress will determine just what is the best thing to do for the mining industry in the matters of industrial stabilization, taxation, tariff and modern mining methods is of particular importance at this time."

Internal Revenue Bureau experts will be present at the meetings to discuss and answer questions regarding the electrical energy tax to be paid by all mining operators who buy electrical power. Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, and A. A. Ballantine, Undersecretary of the Treasury, will be other speakers.

University Women's Club Meets.

The Women's Club of the Benjamin Franklin University held a dinner and Christmas party at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women yesterday afternoon. A musical program and an open discussion of the problems of women in business followed the dinner.

SCENE AT TOY FUND OFFICE

When William A. Blanchette, of 422 Butternut street, appeared at the headquarters of The Post Toy and Doll Fund yesterday with the contents of his bank to be added to the fund he was greeted and thanked by Sandy, an Orkney terrier, who was host and charge d'affaires of The Post toy shop.

spected all the wonderful toys—and dolls—that had been sent in for the fund. His offering of love was accepted with cordial thanks. Without a backward glance of regret at the pennies which had meant so much in the saving and even more in the giving, Billy went on his way perfectly certain that there is a Santa Claus—for was he not part of him?

The tears were perilously near the smiles of the adults while Billy was giving his all for the sake of other children.

Who will match Billy Boy? What a blessed thing it would be if each of Billy's 184 pennies grew into a dollar, through dollar bills sent in to match the gift of this loving child heart. Men and women of Washington, after you have read this story, sit down and send your gift to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, marking it "Matching Billy Boy." You'll find that your hearts will glow like Billy's with the true Christmas spirit. Try it, it will take away all depression blues.

The Santa Claus Lady kept on opening the letters after Billy left. She came to one containing a $5 check, and the letter read:

Bishop's House, Washington Cathedral.

Post Toy Fund: I am very glad to contribute my mite toward your Santa Claus Toy Fund. I think it is an admirable thing for your paper to attempt to provide for the neglected children of our city. Very sincerely yours,

JAMES E. FREEMAN,
Bishop of Washington.

The Post Toy and Doll Fund thanks the bishop for the inspiration of his gift, and adds to his collection of degrees and honors the title of "Chief Santa Claus Aid."

Conversation Is Overheard.

Sandy Gordon, who is the pet of Justice Peyton Gordon, of the District Supreme Court, enjoyed every minute of his stay at the Santa Claus headquarters in The Washington Post Building yesterday.

Last night he was overheard telephoning to Ding-How of Hydegree, mascot of The Junior Post, who had installed him in his post for the day: "Bow, wow, wow! I had a wonderful day, Ding-How.

"Thanks for the fun! After Billy Boy left, seven little girls called. They were members of the Bluebird group of the Junior Order of Campfire Girls, laden with dolls they had dressed tremselves, animals they had stuffed with their own hands and lots of other toys besides. We had a grand time romping. I pinned on their Santa Claus aid badges and took their names so you could print them in the big Sunday Post—the Capital's greatest newspaper. Here are the names: Elizabeth and Florence Johnston, Jean Silverman, Barbara Stram, Miriam Edmonson, Marie Miller and Betty McHale. Three cheers for the blue bird group and all the other friends who left toys yesterday."

Wouldn't it be fine if other Campfire Girl groups, junior and senior rank, about the city, collected toys, dolls and other gifts for the needy children and brought them to The Post Toy and Doll Fund. It would be living out their creed of service to others. Try it, Campfire Girls, and win bright beads of approval from Santa Claus.

Other Side of Story.

Now for the other side of the picture. Showing how great is the need and how every one must work and give so that no child goes without a Merry Christmas in the capital of the Nation is this appeal:

"Dear Santa Claus Lady:

"My father is dead. I have two brothers and two sisters. My mother works very, very hard, but it is just terrible hard for us to get along at any time. Now mother is sick with the grip and out of work. Margaret, my little sister, also is sick. Mama worries and worries about us. If you will see that the little ones get some things to make them happy at Christmas I don't mind about myself. My brother is 16. If you could send him a warm sweater."

Do not worry, little mother. Santa Claus will be at your house on Christmas eve. And, though you ask it not, your own stocking will be bulging with good things, too.

By aiding The Post Toy and Doll Fund you can make this little family with that brave worker mother at the head of it, and hundreds of other families like it, happy at Christmas time. Then, upon you will fall the blessing of One whose birthday 2,000 years ago we are to celebrate: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

Pacifists Ask Light Upon Investments

Delegation Also Seeks List of Munition Patrons in Stimson Visit.

(Associated Press.)

Delegates from the United Youth Conference Against War asked Secretary Stimson yesterday to make public a list of foreign investments "which American youths may be called upon to protect." They also asked publicity on Government employes who own stock in munitions works.

These demands were presented by five young people after they had appeared at the White Hous to present their opposition to war. They submitted a written statement to Assistant Secretary James Grafton Rogers. Signers were Miss Dorothy Shoemaker, of New York and Swarthmore College; Robert Cullum, of Detroit and Albion College, Michigan; Murrray Baron, New York and Columbia University; Joel Seidman, Baltimore and Johns Hopkins University, and Paul Porter, New York and Kansas University.

The group cited the controversy between the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. with Spain as a case in point, and opposed severing diplomatic relations with Spain.

Play to Be Staged At Three Churches

First of Performances Will Be Presented Next Sunday Afternoon.

An old French miracle play, "The Nativity," will be presented at three local churches during the week beginning December 18 by the Religious Drama committee of the Washington Federation of Churches. Church players representing many denominations will take part in the fifteenth century drama.

The first presentation will be at 4:30 p. m., next Sunday, at the Church of the Holy City, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest; the second will be the same evening at 8 o'clock at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle, and the third on the following Tuesday night at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

No admission charge will be asked, but an offering will be taken. Miss Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard will direct the production.

Questions Will Be Answered.

Following addresses which they will deliver before the Catholic Evidence Guild, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, in Franklin Park, John J. O'Connor, professor of history at Georgetown University, and William McEvitt will answer questions on Catholic doctrine.

NEW ENGLAND PICKS 12 RHODES NOMINEES

Edison Prize Scholar One of Candidates; Two Named at Milwaukee.

Boston, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—An Edison prize scholar and eleven other young men today were candidates selected in the six New England States to compete for the four Rhodes scholarships assigned to this district.

Ivan A. Getting, 21, of Pittsburgh, Pa., holder of the 1929 Thomas A. Edison scholarship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was chosen today by the Massachusetts committee. The second Massachusetts winner was Knight W. McMahan, 20, of Flora, Ill., Harvard senior.

New Hampshire's representatives, chosen today, are Everett Huntington Hymen, of Milwaukee, Dartmouth senior, and George Bancroft Abbe, of Guilford, Conn., senior at the University of New Hampshire. Hymen is editor of the Daily Dartmouth, student undergraduate daily, and is a member of the varsity swimming team.

Selections in Maine.

In Maine, the winners were Arthur A. Brown, of Bangor, a senior at the University of Maine, and Robert C. Hill, 22, of Springvale, graduated from Bowdoin College last June.

The Vermont committee chose George E. Yoemans, of Canton, Mass., Middlebury College student, and Lester L. Woodward, of Richford, Vt. a student at the University of Vermont.

Rhode Island's selections were both Brown University seniors. They were Carl Pafaffmann, of Woodhaven, N. Y., and Owen Franklin Walter, of Canton, Ohio, who played on the football squad.

Connecticut picked Edmund G. Burbank, of Ridgewood, N. J., 22, Yale graduate and at present an instructor at Kent School, and John W. Bobine, of Philadelphia, a senior at Wesleyan University.

Candidates at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Thomas Corwin Mendenhall, Madison, Wis., and Frank H. VerHoek, Grand Rapids, Mich., were selected today as the Wisconsin candidates for Rhodes scholarships at Oxford University. They will compete at district examinations in Chicago, December 14.

Mendenhall, son of Dr. Charles Mendenhall, of the University of Wisconsin, is a graduate student at Yale University, department of history. He is 22 years old.

VerHoek, 23, is now taking graduate work in chemistry at the University of Wisconsin.

Newton Approval Unlikely in Senate

Hoover's Nominations of Democrats Also May Wait Till March.

(Associated Press.)

Senate Democrats indicated yesterday that there would be no relaxation in their rigid ban on confirmation of any major nominations before March 4 which would permit approval of Walter Newton, executive secretary to President Hoover, for a place on the circuit court bench.

The President is desirous of naming Newton, a former member of the House from Minnesota, to a vacancy in the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, which district includes Newton's home State of Minnesota. But the Senate Democrats believe it unwise to make any exceptions and it is very doubtful if Mr. Newton permits his name to be presented.

So rigid is the Democratic prohibition against further Hoover appointments that it seems certain to hold also for Democratic nominations, including the recess appointments by Mr. Hoover of Atlee Pomerene to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Charles Crip, of Georgia, to the Tariff Commission. The door is closed until President-elect Roosevelt comes in and makes his own choices.

Takoma Park Baptists Will Hear C. N. Howard

Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the National United Committee for Law Enforcement, will speak on "The Constitution and the Commandments" today at 10:30 a. m. at Takoma Park Baptist Church, and at 7:30 p. m. at the Temple Baptist Church.

Mr. Howard will address the Methodist preachers' meeting in the Methodist Building tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Beer and Business."

Comedy to Be Given Saturday.

The popular comedy, "Nothing but the Truth," will be presented next Saturday night at the parish hall of All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church by the Dramatic Club of the church.

Father Sees 6 Sons Taken Dead From Mine; Toll Is 23

Harlan, Ky., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Twenty-three bodies removed from its gas-filled interior, the Zero mine at Yancy, near here, was sealed shut today and rescue teams left the pit in the belief all the victims of yesterday's underground explosion had been accounted for.

The bodies of the last of the trapped miners whose lives were snuffed out by the tragedy were brought to the surface today, placed in huge burlap sacks, and taken to Harlan, where hundreds of persons viewed them.

Ten of the bodies were removed last night and the remaining thirteen this morning. Twelve of the victims were Negroes. Of the eleven white men who lost their lives, six were brothers.

John F. Daniel, chief of the State Department of Mines, said he would conduct an investigation next week to determine the cause of the disaster.

It was generally believed that all the men died from the effects of carbon monoxide gas following the explosion, although bodies of four showed burns. While it was not definitely determined what caused the explosion, J. S. Bryson, safety director of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, said it probably followed a back-firing blast for coal that ignited coal dust and caused a spread of carbon monoxide gas, or "black damp."

Dave Davenport, 36, one of the score of workmen who escaped death in the blast that killed his brother, gave a graphic account of the tragedy today. Davenport said he and twelve other men were working about 150 yards from the explosion.

"I felt something like a needle pushed into my ears and then jerked out," he said. "I never have been in a blast before, but I knew what it was and yelled, 'Come on, boys, let's get out of here,' and we started running. I could see the dust coming in whirls down the entry."

Davenport said his mining career and that of others he knew has been ended as a result of their experience.

Harlan, Ky., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—J. M. Massengill, 70 years old, his huge hands rough with years of labor underground, stood close to the mouth of the Yancey Zero Mine today and watched with dry eyes the removal of bodies of his six sons, who died when a blast wrecked the tunnel bored in Little Black Mountain.

Henry, Cal, Garrett, Tom, Esau and Charles were the sons who worked beside Massengill in the dark bore after they came down from their Tennessee home. They brought the bodies out one by one and Massengill claimed them almost in silence.

Miners who have long been accustomed to labor disorders in southeastern Kentucky, but never before have suffered a major mine disaster, came to offer condolences and Massengill received them stoically.

"There ain't much need of my stayin' around," he said grimly, "but I reckon I'll stay anyhow."

Bomb Blast

Residence of British High Commissioner Target of Cairo Plot.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A bomb exploded tonight in the garden of the official British residency, at present occupied by Sir Percy Loraine, British high commissioner to Egypt and the Sudan.

There were no casualties and no serious damage was done. Investigators connected the outrage with the internal political situation in Egypt. Nationalists have criticized Britain because King Fuad ousted the Wafdist (Nationalist) administration and replaced it with the present cabinet under Ismail Pasha. Britain has disclaimed any part in the internal situation.

Wheeler Club Play Ready.

The Wheeler Club Players, under the direction of Robert Handley, will present the three-act farce, "Sunshine," in Holy Comforter Auditorium tomorrow and Tuesday nights.

Two Killed by Train As Snow Blinds Driver

Cambridge Springs, Pa., Dec. 10 (A. P.).—Blinded by a driving snowstorm, two men were killed today when their moving van was struck by an Erie Railroad passenger train at a Cambridge Springs crossing.

The dead: C. A. Rhodes, 40, and William Hyland, 36, both of Johnstown, Pa. The van was driven onto the tracks immediately into the path of a New York-Chicago express. The train was held up for nearly two hours after the wreck.

Wadsworth Home Burns With Loss of $50,000

Geneseo, N. Y., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Hampton, the century-old home of Representative-elect James W. Wadsworth, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin at 4:30 o'clock this morning. The loss was estimated at $50,000.

The former United States Senator and Mrs. Wadsworth were not at home, and only servants were in the house.

Chorus Girls Hurt As Scenery Drops

'Take a Chance' Continues After Injured Trio Are Removed.

Julie Jenner, who was a principal in the "Vanities" last year, was taken to a hospital with injuries which doctors said were severe. Francis Gordon and Mildred Stevens were slightly hurt.

The accident happened within full view of a large audience. The curtain was dropped, the injured girls, who had been dancing, were carried away, and the curtain was raised and the show, in proper theatrical tradition, continued.

100 SINGERS APPEAR ON PROGRAM TODAY

National Symphony to Play for Bach's Cantata, "Sleepers Awake."

About 100 local singers will present Bach's cantata "Sleepers, Awake" at a concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Constitution Hall.

It will be the second time that the city has been able to hear members of the Washington Choral Society accompanied by a symphony orchestra. Last year, when both the symphony group and the choral society had been recently organized, their performance was well accepted. Today's presentation is expected to be marked with improvement in program.

Conductor Hans Kindler, who returned to the city last Wednesday from a cello concert tour, will lead his orchestra, and Louis Potter will direct the vocal group.

Local singers who will present solo parts are Mrs. Ruby Potter, soprano; Dr. George E. Anderson, tenor, and Maj. Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, bass, who for years has been the bass soloist at the famous Bach festivals held every spring at Bethlehem, Pa.

Shore and Beach Group to Convene

Society for Preservation of Coast to Gather Here Wednesday.

How to protect shores and beaches from erosion by the ocean will be the principal topic of discussion of members of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association, who will hold their annual meeting in the National Research Council Building Wednesday.

Members of the association from all the Atlantic and Gulf coast States will participate in the meeting, and will make their headquarters in the Carlton Hotel.

Among those who will address the meeting are Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, Chief of Engineers of the Army; L. H. Weir, of the National Recreation Association; Capt. R. S. Patton, director of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Robert Moses, president of the Long Island State Park Commission.

Height of Buzzards Point Smoke Stacks Is Limited

Aviation interests and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission won a partial victory yesterday when the District Commissioners agreed to limit the smokestacks at the Buzzards Point development of the Potomac Electric Power Co. to 180 feet. The power company had asked for 225 feet.

Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals recommended the action subsequent to a conference of District and Federal agencies with power officials earlier in the week. Objections to the 225-foot stacks, he said, were based on esthetic and safety grounds.

G. U. Actors to Stage Three Plays Thursday

Georgetown University's Mask and Bauble Club will make its initial appearance of the season in three popular plays Thursday night at Trinity Parish Theater.

The program will consist of a newspaper play called "Copy," "The Rising of the Moon" and "The Lost Silk Hat," all of which have had long runs on professional as well as the amateur stage. There are no feminine roles in any of them. The Rev. John C. Murray is directing the student actors and the Rev. George F. Strohaver is his assistant.

Women Drys Tomorrow Will Discuss Politics

The Women's National Committee for Education Against Alcohol will hold a luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel tomorrow with "Not a Third Party, but Independent Candidates Where Neither of the Majority Parties Offers Drys" as the main topic of discussion.

Sixty prominent dry leaders, both men and women, have been asked to attend the luncheon. Mrs. William Tilton, who will preside, declared yesterday, that "we can not consent, as in 1932, to be sponged entirely off the political map."

One Shot, One Caught As Quartet Flee Prison

Chillicothe, Ohio, Dec. 10 (A.P.). Four prisoners attempted to escape from the Federal Reformatory here last night, but only two were successful, it was learned today.

Sam Turner, 20, sentenced from Chicago to serve ten years for robbing a postoffice, was shot in the side by guards as he fled through the brightly lighted prison yard. He was captured a short time later with Charles Milburn, 20, of East St. Louis, Ill. James Wrigley, 22, of Chicago, serving eight years for a postal violation, and Albert McGary, 19, another postoffice robber, were not captured.

Capt. Donnella Expires In Louisville, Ky., at 85

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Capt. Schuyler A. Donella, 85, a veteran of the United States Secret Service and of the Confederate Army, died today at his home near Jeffersonville, Ind. He retired from Government service in August, 1920.

Capt. Donella, a native of Albemarle County, Va., ran away from home when he was 14 years old and enlisted in the Fifth Virginia Cavalry, serving throughout the war.

DAY OF ACCURATELY FORECAST WEATHER BY SUNSPOTS CLOSE

Carnegie Institution Exhibit Reflects Progress Made in Climate Study.

CYCLES OF SOLAR RAYS AND RAINFALL COINCIDE

Almost Perfect Accuracy in Measurement of Light Speed Attained.

(Associated Press.)

A time when scientists will be able to glance up at the sun spots and predict climate changes for the benefit of farmers and commercial interests was forecast yesterday at the annual exhibition of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

An indication of this possibility was seen in evidence that sun spots have been affecting the earth's climate for millions of years, in waxing and waning cycles of between eleven and twelve years in length, exhibited by Dr. A. E. Douglass and Dr. Waldo S. Glock. Climate cycles, reflected in the thickness of tree growth rings and annual deposits of clay and mud by streams, correspond closely with sunspot cycles far into the past, they showed.

Further study of the cycles may make predictions of climate changes possible, Dr. Glock said, though not day-to-day weather forecasts.

Little Variance of Heat.

He explained that the drought of 1930 apparently bore out a developing theory that sun spots are closely connected with rainfall comparison of growth cycles of trees from California, Sweden and Germany with sun-spot cycles shows that rainfall increases when sun spots are at both their maximum and minimum. Presumably there is less rain between these periods, and the 1930 drought conformed with this theory.

The sun's heat falling on earth has varied only within narrow limits for nearly a billion years, ever since life began on earth, Dr. Glock said. It never has risen above 150 degrees Fahrenheit or fallen below freezing long enough to destroy life. Since the sun's heat has been stable for so long a time, he said, it gives ground for believing this stability will continue.

Light Speed Measured.

Distances of the stars and other "measurements" of the universe now can be made more accurately than ever before because the speed of light has been determined with new exactness. The speed of light is the yardstick used in measuring great distances in astronomy and its speed now is known within 1/100,000 of "perfect" accuracy, reported Dr. Walter S. Adams, of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory.

Light's speed in a vacuum is 299,780 kilometers, or about 186,274 miles per second, accurate to within three or four kilometers. The speed was measured by the timing light flashing through a mile-long vacuum tube.

Christmas Eve Party Planned at Press Club

An address by Senator William E. Borah, and Christmas hymns and carols will feature the Christmas eve party of the National Press Club in the lounge of the club on Saturday afternoon, December 24.

The music will be sung by the National Capital Choir of 36 voices under the direction of Dr. Albert W. Harned. The program will be broadcast from 1:30 p. m. to 2 p. m. by the Columbia and National Broadcasting Companies and rebroadcast in Europe, South America and South Africa. B. N. Timmons, president of the club, will preside.

Columbia U. Plans Big Capital School

Institution Would Cater to Part-Time Adult Students.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Establishment of an extra-mural teaching center in Washington, D. C., and the organization of a new school affording academic recognition to part-time adult students are urged by Prof. James Egbert, extension director of Columbia University, in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler.

"As soon as the financial situation will justify such action," he says in the report made public tonight, "I shall recommend to the administration board the establishing of courses in government, mainly for graduate students of the City of Washington.

"These courses are intended to give students an opportunity to carry on their studies in close proximity to the Capitol. As this city is the seat of the Federal Government and the location of the Congressional Library and many important institutions, residence for a period of study in that city would be of inestimable value to both students and instructors."

Fishermen Plan Escort To Honor Leon Trotzky

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Fishermen, instead of Communists, will put on a demonstration of welcome for Leon Trotzky, when he arrives tomorrow night from Copenhagen, where he lectured on the Russian revolution.

Turkish officials, always careful in such matters, will not permit any Communists to gather. But Trotzky's nonpolitical fishermen friends plan to escort him, at a discreet distance from the police guard, from the Prinkipo Island wharf to the villa where his 6-year-old grandson awaits the return of his grandparents. The boy was kept as hostage to insure Trotzky's return.

Around the Town

WITH THE STROLLER.

COMMUNISTIC CONNOTATIONS.

To have missed viewing the hunger march encampment in its New York avenue stockade last week was to have missed a tableau that resembled some fantastic social nightmare. Standing on the high bank which hovered over the bleary and weary marchers was an unparalleled lesson in mob psychology. Here were 3,000 men and women motivated totally by slogans, catchy lines and a blind instinct to follow the leader. Their diet was bread, green apples, water, coffee and platitudes. About half of them knew what they were here for.

Giant Negroes strolled up and down the street, their arms around white girls, whose faces were pinched like the nose of a rabbit. Everywhere the word, "Comrade!" A little stream of blowsy girls march up and down in front of Representatives La Guardia and Kvale singing a bawdy tune, and two fat mamma-agitators beam and comment, "Isn't that cute?" with the most motherly accents imaginable. A quack priest attempts to address the workers, but they are told to turn their backs on him, and he interrupts his heavenly exhortation to hop this way and that to get in range of the newsreel cameras. A Negro woman swears in Russian.

An old cotton-haired Negro preacher invades the lair, to stir up a little religion, but comes out disgusted, saying, "They don't want no religion" . . . the vigilant tear-gas police squad, many of them acquainted with gas during the war . . . Maj. R. B. Lawrence, local man, who perfected the gas for "commercial" use, looks on . . . cops with ragged nerves . . . one of the march leaders, named Myers, with a rich cultured voice, former Sunday school teacher and former editor of a small-town newspaper . . . a weird, mentally vague mob, standing placidly by in view of the most palpably pornographical display, and yet protesting vigorously when one of the leaders spieled, "And the Capitol police deliberately tripped one of our women up!"

Cocktail shaker manufacturers believe that America has forgotten the mixings. On many of the new shakers are engraved recipes of Manhattans, Bronxes, Knock-me-downs, etc.

Two yellowed memos of another day hang in dusty frames from the walls of The Post's city room. One is a permit given by the State of Illinois to William F. Berry and Abraham Lincoln, on March 6, 1833, to operate a tavern. It cost Mr. Berry and the to-be Great Emancipator $7, of which $6 was a Federal tax.

The permit allowed mine hosts the following rates per pints:

French brandy, 25 cents; peach brandy, 18¾ cents; apple brandy, 12 cents; Holland gin, 18¾ cents; wine, 25 cents; rum, 18 3-7 cents, and whisky, 12½ cents. Meals were 25 cents apiece, while overnight stayers were presented with a 12½-cent check upon checking out. It cost twice as much to house your horse at Berry and Lincoln's, 25 cents, and an additional 12½ cents for oats. Regular customers were given breakfast, dinner and supper for 37½ cents.

The other memory of a bygone age, which rests upon The Post's walls, is a little list of instructions for operating a Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. messenger buzzer. The slogan of the company was "The Only Opposition." The form stated that "We never close" and guaranteed "intelligent" messenger service.

Two cranks of the little gadget brought a messenger (probably bewhiskered).

Three cranks sent a hansom cab cloppity-clopping up to the door.

Four cranks brought a carriage for four, and—

Five cranks, a cop.

In case of trouble the Postal Co. advocated that the user get in touch with it by phone. The number was 458—in this day of exchange-less telephone service, when men were men and the conductor yelled "All out!" at Seventh street and Florida avenue.

An Eleventh street florist has a window of "Depression Plants." I guess they'll recuperate without aspirins in the water.

Sidney Smith, creator of Andy Gump, received threatening letters about the time that the Widow Zander was about to hook Uncle Bim. Gasoline Alley is taken from life. There is really a Skeezix, and Walt and Auntie Blossom. Walt is a big fat, jovial guy, with a thatch of hair hanging down over his forehead just like the caricature you see in The Post each day. They live in Chicago, and the story goes that Skeezix is their real child, born in France, where "Walt" served during the War and "Aunty Blossom" was a Red Cross nurse. Walt was shell-shocked, forgot all about his marriage to "Aunty Blossom" and she followed him back to America and won him again.

The scabs are just coming off the knuckles of Washington's firemen who, for the first time in at least 35 years, pounded policemen's beats last week while substituting for the policemen detailed to other duties. The fire-eaters turned in a great job of protecting humanity, but on one point they fell down badly—twirling a club. One of them got hit in the chin with his recalcitrant billy, and a score of knuckles were bruised. One fireman was seen carrying his billy in his coat pocket.

But the unkindest crack of all was delivered unwittingly by the wife of one of the assistant corporation counsels who, noticing a particularly congested corner on the way down town one day, exclaimed, "There ought to be a cop, or a couple of firemen, at this corner."

Wonder why the hundreds of lights in the vast patent searching room of the new Commerce Building must burn all night? (Pardon me, Mr. George "Federal Diary" Riley.

One of the strangest stories of the hunger march was produced in the lobby of the National Theater early last week, while a top-hatted audience was gathering to witness one of the offerings of the Irish Players. Into the lobby sauntered a certain gentleman, in evening clothes. He chatted with friends and then strolled past "Iron Hat" McCormick, veteran ticket taker.

He was a "hunger" marcher. He is a retired man of money who is in sympathy with Messrs. Benjamin and Myers and the dynamic Miss Gerlak, and the motley, tatterdemalion army they represent. He motored here in his twelve-cylinder job, and during the stay in Washington had a suite at the Willard. He is believed to be the "angel" of the movement, although many are the rumors that the march was Soviet-inspired and financed.

The shifting scenes of time have removed two men from the political eye whose clashes over the architecture of the much-maligned State Department Building brought new words to the American language and became a public issue. The men were Senator Reed Smoot, defeated candidate for reelection to Congress, and the late Senator Wesley Jones.

Smoot gave the philologists a new word to meddle with when he denounced the "spizzerinktums" of the State Department (he meant the protruding porches, gargoyles, Corinthian frieze, &c.) during that long discussion on what to do with the architectural monstrosity which rears its ugly head at Seventeenth street and the Avenue. Senator Jones hotly defended the building, and loudly protested a proposed $3,000,000 appropriation to remodel the building enough to make it resemble the Treasury's columned exterior.

The Government is out about $100,000 on preliminary (and now abandoned) architects' fees, and the State, War and Navy Building continues its dogged stand. What it will look like when the march of those sleek white Government buildings hems it in is a matter of conjecture.

Time is the hope of this massive adoption of a type of French architecture. Its plan is unappreciated by many Washingtonians, and admired by a smaller group who perhaps have traveled extensively through France. Probably 30 years from now it will at last have taken on the green mold of stately antiquity. It's in its awkward teens now.

But anyone who has worked in the building, with its tiny windows and yard-stick walls, and in whose rooms all electric lights must burn all day long, will vote for a new building.

Mexican Divorces Held Void by Mississippian

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Divorces obtained in Mexico by citizens of the United States without legal establishment of residence in the southern republic are void in this country, Chancellor A. B. Amis, jr., ruled today.

The decision was handed down in a case involving W. H. Hopper, who obtained a Mexican divorce last June. Testimony indicated Hopper remained in Mexico about 25 hours and the divorce decree later was forwarded to him by an attorney in El Paso.

Conservatives Plan Reform of British House of Lords

Proposal Would Have General Election Intervene Before Veto Can Be Set Aside—Labor Would Abolish Chamber.

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The legislative position of that historic hereditary body, the British House of Lords, is rousing fierce attack and defense.

Signs that this question is forcing to the front in the mind of peers and politicians, and is likely soon to become a crucial one in the national political life, are numerous. On the defense, a plan of reform for the lords, drawn up by peers fighting for their traditional power and their ancient prestige, has appeared, and caused a warm debate in Parliament a few days ago.

The proposal was drawn up obviously to forestall by swift action the ominous threat that the first step which the Socialist Labor Party would take whenever it should assume office again would be to abolish the House of Lords.

Meanwhile, Labor peers, acting on the Socialist principle that an unrepresentative body such as the Lords has no right to pass on legislation produced by the representatives of the popular will, the Commons, have refused to vote on the Ottawa agreements measure.

The stage is set for what may be the final battle of the British peerage to keep its privilege to supervise the destinies of the British nation.

That elements of the Labor Party are planning to erase the hereditary house from the book of legislative power is an open secret. The position of this faction is simple.

The House of Lords, they argue, has no responsibility to the people. It is an institution whose purpose is merely to preserve its own special class privileges. Therefore it has no place in a modern democracy.

Since the lords can obstruct legislation and frequently squash it—the Labor thesis holds—it must be wiped out before any social legislation of real importance can expect to have a chance of passing into law in Britain.

Already the powers of the Lords have been curtailed. They have no authority over measures which the speaker of the House of Commons designates as a "money bill." That means a bill dealing with national finances, such as the annual budget measure.

On general legislation, their veto is nullified if the commons passes a measure a third time within two years. It then proceeds to Buckinghame Palace for the royal assent without further reference to the upper house.

REVISION OF BRITISH DOLE IS CONSIDERED LOOKING TO FUTURE

Royal Commission Offers Dual Plan of Insurance and Relief.

2,700,000 JOBLESS ON "LIVE REGISTER"

Payments for 1933-34 Under Present System Estimated at $400,000,000.

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A two-year search for an answer to the riddle of the dole has brought the majority of a royal commission to a dual scheme of insurance and relief.

As the latest attempt to diagnose and heal a long-lived and acute sore in Great Britain's economic body, it proposes a recasting of the present treatment of the unemployment problem.

While it is aimed directly at the current abnormal unemployment, it also looks to the future as the frame of a long-run policy for dealing with the able-bodied workless.

Insurance Scheme.

The dual nature of the commission's scheme is a recognition of the fact that there are, in general, two kinds of unemployment—intermittent and long-continued.

The proposal for dealing with the intermittent variety is a self-sustaining insurance scheme. For treatment of long-continued unemployment, an "unemployment assistance" plan is recommended, in which relief is subject to willingness to work and a proof of need.

The majority proposals, attempt to salvage from the present system what the members believe to be its best features, and subject them to changes expected to make the whole scheme work out better in practice.

They come at a time when more than 2,700,000 unemployed persons are on the "live register"—a list of jobless who are able-bodied and willing to work—and payments to unemployed for the financial year 1933-34 under the existing system are estimated to aggregate upward of 120,000,000 pounds, or around $400,000,000.

Three Sources of Assistance.

Under the present system of unemployed relief, the three major sources of assistance are: Benefits to insured workers; "transitional payments" to workers who have exhausted their right to insurance benefit, and poor law relief.

Unemployment insurance has been so modified and extended by legislation that it now affects 12,500,000 workers and their employes in a wide variety of occupations.

The income is derived from weekly contributions by the workers, employers and the exchequer.

Under the system, insured workers who become unemployed had, or have as the case may be, the right to draw benefit for a definite period.

With the growth of unemployment, however, and the exhaustion by many insured workers of their right to further benefit, the rules were relaxed and "extended benefit" became allowed as an advance payment.

Beginning of Dole.

This, extended and revised, finally became known as the system of "transitional payments"—the dole in its strictest sense—whose burden fell on the exchequer.

What the royal commission proposes in its dual scheme is a divorce of the insurance system and the transitional payments, reverting unemployment insurance to a solvent and self-supporting system and creating the unemployment assistance scheme for handling the transitional payments.

In comparison with the present insurance system, which is burdened with a debt of around $380,000,000, the new one would have to provide its benefits and the cost of their administration out of its own revenues. Its salient feature is that it be self-supporting.

Means Test Planned.

The suggested unemployment assistance scheme embraces all able-bodied unemployed workers under 65 years of age, including both insured workers no longer entitled to benefit under the insurance scheme and some workers in trades not at present insurable, mainly agricultural.

However, whereas insurance benefit is unconditional or, simply, a right, unemployment assistance as recommended would be made subject to definite conditions, such as a proof of need based on a "means" test.

It would be administered by the local authorities, and the present lack of financial responsibility on the part of the local authorities would be met by a flat rate contribution by them.

Cut in Quantico Marines Studied

Virginia Base May Not Be Operative as Result of Economies.

(Associated Press.)

Marine Corps plans under consideration for meeting the proposed cut of 1,743 in enlisted personnel include material reduction of forces at Quantico, Va., and San Diego, Calif., which practically places these bases on inoperative status.

These tentative plans also provide for closing of the recruiting depot at Parris Island, South Carolina.

Officers said yesterday that probably only a small detachment of caretakers will be left there to guard the buildings and Government property remaining temporarily at that station. The Marine Corps strength at the present is 15,343 enlisted men.

TAXING OF BUSINESS INSTEAD OF BUYERS IS ECONOMIST'S IDEA

Illinois Professor Asserts Benefits Would Follow Levy on Surplus.

PROBLEM COMPARED TO BOOMERANG BY HUNTER

Farmer's Plight Taken as Example in Argument for New Plan.

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—From a Midwest economist comes the suggestion that the Nation's tax system could be altered to exert some influence as a "business stabilizer" instead of "acting as a business boomerang."

Business itself should benefit, says Prof. Merlin H. Hunter, of the University of Illinois, if part of its net returns were used to meet revenue needs of the Government, leaving the Nation's "small income group" entirely free from taxes.

"Business would not suffer, but would actually benefit, with a tax levied directly upon it rather than in such a way as to lessen purchasing power of consumers," argues this taxation specialist

Would Tax Surplus.

To increase public purchasing power, Dr. Hunter proposes that the amount now taken in taxes from persons of small income be left with that group.

To derive that same amount of revenue, he suggests, a tax should be laid on business funds which "may be considered in the nature of a surplus—which would not have been used to buy goods."

"To tax net income of business," he contends, "is to tax after business has reaped the benfit of all advantages. To tax the potential customer is to hinder business development."

Granting that industry can not expand as rapidly if a share of its "surplus" is taken by the Government, Dr. Hunter argues that consumers, on the other hand, "can buy more, the larger the share of their income left them by a tax system.

"It is exactly in this manner that a tax system, through a retardation of the expansion of business and through an acceleration of purchases, may be of some influence as a business stabilizer."

Cites Farmer's Plight.

His argument follows this line of reason:

"Can it be that the business man thinks that by hurling the tax boomerang away from him it will not come back, perhaps with a force more destructive than that with which he hurled it?

"Take the farmer for example. If he is compelled to pay a large part of his income in State and local taxes, how can he be expected to buy farm machinery, fertilizer and other products as if his income had not been thus depleted?

"The machinery and fertilizer industries may have but a small tax levied on them, but it is the tax on the farmer which affects them none the less. A generalization may be drawn from the illustration of the farmer.

"Eighty to 90 per cent of the revenue comes from taxes on property, much of which if not used for taxes would have been spent for goods.

"Stabilizer of Business."

"Might not the manufacturer or merchant fare much better in the end if he reasoned as follows:

"'We will be willing to contribute from out net income to support of the Government, rather than have the Government, through its tax system, destroy our market for goods.'"

The trend of taxation, Dr. Hunter says, is toward surplus as a base.

"From the standpoint of the owner of the surplus, this is not a cause for regret and antagonism," he contends. "For the economic consequences may be such as to lessen the jolt which the boomerang of the old system occasioned.

"Rather than assume the attitude of an unmitigated objector to such a trend, the business man might better encourage it. Not only will it insure a larger market for the sale of his products, but it will have some influence as a stabilizer of business."

Mongolian Nationalists Seize Control at Urga

Moscow, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Nationalist elements in outer Mongolia, headed by the Manchurian leader, Tzing Wang, have seized control of Urga, according to reports circulated today in diplomatic circles, but without confirmation officially.

Although Tzing Wang received his military education at Moscow, he was believed to be unfriendly to Soviet political policies.

Notables to Attend Music Convention

Teachers Will Hear Talk by Taylor, Damrosch and Erskine.

Three notables in the world of music will be on the program of the Music Teachers National Association convention in Washington December 27 to 30, it was announced yesterday by Carl Engel, chairman of the Washington committee of arrangements.

Walter Damrosch will talk on "Music For the Many Through the Radio." Deems Taylor, American opera composer, will tell of "America and Her Music." John Erskine, pianist and author, will talk on "Amateurs May Be Musicians."

Headquarters will be at the Washington Hotel, where the chief social event of the meeting—a banquet—will be held December 28.

FEWER DRY DAYS IN WET FINLAND

Nation Becoming Accustomed to Change From Prohibition Period.

Helsingfors, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A decrease in the number of "black" days, when liquor cannot be bought at government stores, is expected in the near future as Finland becomes better accustomed to the changing over last spring from prohibition.

Under the present arrangement the liquor stores are open only four days a week, Tuesday to Friday, from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. Furthermore no liquor can be had on the days preceding and following public holidays.

These restrictions, introduced to prevent a too violent reaction to legal liquor, have been much criticized of late on the ground that they encourage bootlegging, since workers, paid late Friday or on Saturday, are debarred from buying legal alcohol until the following Tuesday.

But supporters of the system say it has prevented an increase in drunkenness since the repeal of prohibition. They fortify this point by citing police records.

Importations and sales of alcoholic beverages are intrusted to a single company in which the State owns a controlling interest. Disposal of profits is fixed by law.

After payment of a 7 per cent dividend on share capital, 35 per cent of the remaining profits goes for the promotion of temperance, care of dipsomaniacs, prevention of bootlegging and maintenance of the old age and disablement insurance fund.

Another 35 per cent is available toward ordinary government expenditures. The remaining 30 per cent is divided among communes in which alcoholic beverages may be neither sold nor served.

The quantity of liquor that may be bought by any one person at one time is restricted, although police permission can be obtained to purchase more for special occasions or to stock a cellar.

Serving of liquor in first-class hotels and restaurants is unlimited. Second-class restaurants are allowed to serve ale, wines and whisky and soda, but no "straight" drinks.

AMERICAN EXPERTS SHAPE TURK POLICY

Young Nation's Isolation Is Being Broken Down in New Attitude.

Angora, Turkey, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A marked change in Turkey's policies is breaking down the Young Republic's isolation complex and is bringing her into closer relations with the outside world, particularly America.

Under the new minister of economy, Djelal Bey, a movement against the present high protective tariff and another seeking the engagement of foreign experts to solve internal economic problems are now afoot.

An American, Robert Vorfeld, has been engaged as adviser on customs organization. Other experts on railroads, state monopolies, and on civil aviation will be consulted, and it is considered likely that they, too, will be Americans.

These innovations are all the more noteworthy because a hangover from the regime of capitulations under the sultans made the Kemalist government view all foreigners askance. Attempts to establish foreign enterprises here often were considered threats upon the country's newly-won independence.

Turkey, according to that view, was to be run—even if she were to be run on the rocks—solely by the Turks.

This point of view and the high tariff policies of 1929 prevailed until a few months ago, when M. Bey, one of the republic's leading financiers and economists, became minister of economy.

He is aiming to kill the antiforeign ghost which haunted his predecessors, and is working toward fewer restrictions in commerce with other lands.

The contingent system, in the rigorous form in which it was put into effect a year ago, is now generally admitted to have injured the economic situation of a country so predominantly agricultural as Turkey.

The drop in imports and exports is considered by some to be proof that Turkey needs greaters freedom in her commercial exchanges. This freedom is promised by the new minister.

Darwin Theory Is Attacked By Curator at Smithsonian

Says Both Humans and Great Apes Belong to Category of Giants and Idea That One Is Derived From Other Is Unfounded.

Men are giants.

The fact that both human beings and the great apes of two or three million years ago belong to this category, according to Gerrit S. Miller, curator of mammals of the Smithsonian Institution, practically invalidates any presumption that one is derived from the other. Such a derivation was the original Darwinian thesis which still is maintained by many anthropologists.

No case is known, Miller declares in the journal of the American Society of Mammalogists, in which a race of "giants" has given rise to a new line of development equivalent to the development of man from the great apes.

Mr. Miller does not deny the descent of man from simian ancestors which, he maintains, is well demonstrated by other lines of evidence.

"The fact that man and all the great apes, excluding the gibbon," Mr. Miller says, "are in the advanced evolutionary stage known as gigantism can hardly be doubted by anyone who will take the trouble to survey the living members of the order primates as a whole. For he will then see that this group of mammals is made up of hundreds of kinds whose size ranges from that of squirrels to that of bird dogs, a dozen or two that are somewhat larger, and four whose great bulk makes them wholly exceptional—gorilla, orang, champanzee and man. Obviously it is the majority and not one of the exceptions that must set the standard for size.

"The records of paleontology show that giants have arisen in many groups of mammals. More significantly, they show that these overgrown creatures commonly exist during short intervals, geologically speaking, and then become extinct without giving rise to new lines of development. Their racial life seems to have advanced beyond its period of plasticity. It is true that a gigantic stock dating from one age is often represented in a later age by a modified successor of its own general kind—as one elephant by another. But in no single recorded instance have we the fossils to demonstrate than an earlier mammalian giant has been modified into a later giant of an obviously different type—as a mastodon into a modern elephant or a great sabertooth into a modern great cat. So complete is the absence of evidence that a mere suggestion of such transitions would not be seriously put forward."

TWO INAUGURATIONS IN LONG LIST STAND OUT FOR GRANDEUR

BUCHANAN'S WAS LIKE IMPERIAL CORONATION

White House China Smashed as Crowds Sought to Drink Jackson's Orange Punch.

(Associated Press.)

President-elect Roosevelt, stipulating a simple and economical inauguration, will enter office in most marked contrast to Roosevelt of yore, inducted with a $65,000 spread, and Buchanan, who came in "after the manner of an imperial coronation."

He will follow the line of least ostentation insisted upon by Jefferson, Jackson and Calvin Coolidge.

Other Presidents took oath of office and walked into the White House in more or less sumptuous style, depending considerably upon circumstances.

12,000 Attended Ball.

The $65,000 outlay of District of Columbia guarantors to make impressive welcome to Theodore Roosevelt's own regime, after his completing of McKinley's term, was almost reimbursed by proceeds of the inaugural ball, attended by approximately 12,000 guests at $5 each.

What a day it was! Rough Riders in prancing cavalcade about Roosevelt. A half dozen most famous Indian chiefs heading the pageant of history that swept along from 2 p. m. to 6:30. Costumed cowboys. Fifty Pennsylvania miners with skull caps and lighted torches. A specially trained chorus of 500 voices singing at the Capitol, and at the ball. Fireworks, $3,000 worth of them, illuminating the Ellipse. Statuary, of $100,000 estimated value, donated by Louisiana Purchase Exposition managers to embellish the "Court of History" in front of T. R.'s reviewing stand.

Its promoters proclaimed it the most elaborate inauguration in history, but contemporary historians also had much to boast about in Buchanan's time.

$3,000 Spent on Wine.

Consider its inaugural ball supper. A pyramid of cake 4 feet high was ornamented by a flag bearing the arms of every State and Territory. For wine alone $3,000 was spent. Served also were 400 gallons of oysters, 500 quarts of chicken salad, 1,200 quarts of ice cream, 500 quarts of jellies, 60 saddles of mutton, 4 saddles of venison, 8 rounds of beef, 75 hams, 125 tongues.

In Buchanan's parade a Goddess of Liberty rode in a car drawn by six horses. The specially tailored suit Buchanan wore was lined with black satin stitched to represent the 31 States.

Madison's a "Blaze of Glory."

Descriptions of Madison's "blaze of glory" stressed Dolly Madison's gorgeous gown and purple velvet bonnet. Polk was welcomed with two inaugural balls, a $10 one for the aristocrats, a $2 one for the proletariat. "Old Rough and Ready" Zachary Taylor's regime was launched with as many balls as a pawnbroker's sign, and he danced at all three of them. Sumptuosity at Hayes' inaugural took the form of a colossal floral eagle, with body of camellias, head of violets, wings of flowers and ferns, all resting on a bed of roses.

Even the Presidents declaring for ultra-simplicity found the Capital determined to jubilate on Inauguration Day. A newspaper said of plain-garbed Jefferson's induction: "The day was devoted to festivity, the night to illumination." Several thousand dollars worth of White House china and cut glass were broken in the people's rush to get at Jackson's orange punch. A columnist observed that "fah-de-lah" Washington was not at all pleased with the simplicity of the Coolidge inauguration.

Employment Is Limited To Civil Service Names

All District Engineer Department wage-scale employes, except day laborers, yesterday were brought under the Commissioners' order limiting employment to applicants on civil service lists, by agreement between the Civil Service Commission and the District heads. The wage-scale employes are those in various engineer activities, up to the rank of foreman.

The agreement also clarified the positions of the Welfare Department, under which employes may be drawn elsewhere than from the civil service lists.

Britten and Reece Facing Contests

Two Defeated Democrats File Protests With Clerk of House.

(Associated Press.)

Contests against election of Fred A. Britten (Republican), for the Ninth Illinois District, and B. Carroll Reece (Republican), for the First Tennessee District, were filed yesterday with the clerk of the House of Representatives.

James McAndrews (Democrat) is contesting Britten, and A. C. Tipton (Democrat) challenged Reece. Unofficial figures showed Britten reelected by about 3,600 more votes than McAndrews. Reece, a member of the last Congress, was listed as ahead of Tipton by about 30,000 to 8,000.

Representative Lovette (Republican), who lost the Republican nomination to Reece and then as an independent polled 28,000 votes in the general election, told newspapermen he, too, planned to contest Reece's election. The special House elections committee already has taken testimony in the Tennessee district.

Griffith and Cronin Plan Deal for Pitcher at Majors' Session

Nats Dangling Boss as Bait For Trade

First-Class Pitcher Only Will Be Considered in Deal.

Would Also Acquire Catcher at Meeting at New York.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

JOE CRONIN, 1933 Nat leader, arrived in the city from his San Francisco home yesterday morning and immediately hustled to the Stadium, where he and Owner Clark Griffith talked baseball all afternoon in a meeting of the minds concerning what they hope to accomplish at the major league parleys, which start in New York Tuesday.

One important piece of business which the Nat officials expect to complete is the trading of First Baseman Harley Boss, while there is a possibility that a deal to strengthen the catching staff will be made. Since Griffith let it be known that Boss was to go on the auction block, the Cleveland Club has expressed great interest and General Manager Billy Evans has intimated that he will make the Nats an offer at this meeting which they can not afford to refuse.

Harder or Hildebrand Would Be Welcome.

Evans already has offered material in quantity, but Griffith has advised him that he has plenty of rookies, that quality is what he wants, and that the Indians can have Boss for a first-class pitcher. Just which flinger the Nat owner has in mind is not known, but he indicated yesterday that he could use either Mel Harder or Orral Hildebrand. It is not believed that Manager Cronin would have any room on his staff for such players as Jack Russell, Belve Bean, Willis Hudlin and Bob Connatser, who have been mentioned by the Tribe.

Griffith has done little talking about his catching department, but it is known that he has hopes of swinging a deal of some kind which will give him an experienced catcher. Roy Spencer is one of the best when right, but he pulled up with a touch of malaria at the spring training camp and then followed with several layoffs, due to an ailing leg, which decreased his value about 50 per cent.

Cronin Planning Innovations.

Most of Cronin's interest yesterday seemed to be in connection with some innovations he has in mind for next season. The shortstop, showing some blistered hands as a result of work in the yard of a newly acquired home in Frisco, looked to be in first-class physical condition except that he was sporting about two extra sets of chins. While taking time off from his digging, Cronin did considerable thinking over plans for next season, he declared.

"We've got to have Fred Marberry back in winning form," he said, "and my idea is to sell him the thought that he needs much more work than he thinks he does. As I see things, he's not been doing quite enough training work. Except last spring, when a malaria attack slowed him up, he has breezed along pretty well in three-inning shifts at camp and this has given him the idea that he is ready. Then, when he has had to go longer routes, he's found that he has been unable to do so. I believe that I can show Marberry that things have worked out this way for the past few seasons and convince him that Trainer Mike Martin knows more about conditioning him than he does himself.

Says Coffman Needs Proper Training.

"Dick Coffman is another who will be put under the care of Martin. From what I can find out, Dick never has been properly trained at camp. He's got plenty of stuff and, if I can get him off on the right foot, he'll win lots of games for us. He simply was unable to get started after we got him from the Browns in a trade last June, and it finally got his goat. But I'm counting on him next season."

Monte Weaver, Cronin believes, will be as effective next season as he was last. "That boy's got the stuff," he said, "and with the experience and confidence he gained last season, he ought to continue to hurl great ball." In this connection, the new Nat leader explained that he plans to let Weaver use his own judgment a little more in the clinches. "Monte has more confidence in his curve ball," said Joe, "and, this being the case, he ought to be allowed to use it more often when the count is three and two. From force of habit, most catchers call for a fast one under these conditions and that's usually what the batter is expecting. So I'm planning to let Monte cross the hitters with his curve whenever he wants to do it."

Al Thomas' Arm Now Normal.

Just about the time Cronin hit this spot in outlining some of his ideas, Trainer Mike Martin burst into Griffith's office with the good news that much may be expected of Pitcher Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas. "He's been coming over here daily from his home in Baltimore ever since his operation and I've been working on his arm. It's perfectly straight and normal now and that means another good pitcher you can count on," said Mike.

Taberski Finally Wins in Cue Event

Five-Time Champion Defeats Franklin; Has High Run of 64.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Showing a flash of the form that carried him to the national title five times since 1916, Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., today won his first game in four starts in the national pocket billiard championship, turning back Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, 125 to 21, in 12 innings.

As Taberski shot his way out of the ranks of nonwinners, Pasquale Natalie, Chicago veteran, moved into a three-way tie for first place with the defending champion, Ralph Greenleaf, and young Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del. Natalie turned back James Mills, of San Jose, Calif., 125 to 29, in 23 innings, to win his third successive game.

The Schenectady veteran played with far more confidence than any time in the current tournament and climaxed his brilliant playing with an unfinished run of 64 in the last inning. It was the third highest run of the tournament, being surpassed only by Andrew Ponzi's 72 and Greenleaf's 67.

Vines Beaten In Finals by Crawford

Australian Avenges Wimbledon Defeat in Net Finals.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Jack Crawford, Australia's leading tennis player, today defeated Ellsworth Vines, jr., American and Wimbledon champion, 1—6, 6—4, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4, to win the championship of Victoria.

The result reversed their meeting in the semifinals at Wimbledon, where Vines defeated the tall Australian in the standout match of the tournament, going on to take the title from H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England's leading player.

The match, although closely contested, was rather slowly played, with neither player taking many risks. As a consequence, the issue was decided mainly from the baselines with Crawford passing Vines whenever the American tried to go to the net. Vines also erred frequently.

The terrific heat seemed to affect both players with Vines apparently weakened more than Crawford.

Vines got some measure of revenge for the defeat as he returned to the court with Gledhill in the first semifinals of the doubles to defeat Crawford and E. Moon, of Australia, 4—6, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4.

The other two members of the touring United States team, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, made the doubles an all-American affair as they defeated H. O. Hopman and Cliff Sproule, Australian Davis Cup players, in the other semifinal 9—7, 6—4, 6—4.

Sonnenberg Gets Bill, Bruise in Mat Match

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—When Gus Sonnenberg, "Billy Goat" of the wrestling world, sailed out of the ring here Wednesday night he raised more than a bruise. Don George, who won the match, boosted Sonnenberg over the ropes, and he came down clavicle first.

Sonnenberg's tumble revived an old argument in which county authorities and the Milwaukee County Medical Society participated.

After his fall Sonnenberg was rushed to the Emergency Hospital in a police ambulance. There he received medical attention, without charge. Officials of the medical society estimated the wrestler's income in 1931 was in the neighborhood of $100,000. The place for him, in the opinion of Dr. Paul M. Currer, president of the society, was a private hospital attended by a physician not "on the public pay roll."

Officials of Emergency Hospital retorted that the question turned on a definition of what is an emergency. The debate today reached the courthouse, and W. L. Coffey, superintendent of county institutions, said a bill for services will be sent Sonnenberg.

G. W. Gridmen Play Auburn, Tennessee

Clemson Also Booked by Colonials for '33 Games Here.

WORD has been received in Washington that the visit of Coaches Jimmy Pixlee and Len Walsh to the Southern Conference meeting in Knoxville, Tenn., has not been without fruition. Three outstanding football elevens, Auburn, Tennessee and Clemson, have been signed to meet George Washington's ambitious Colonials next season, and plans for other big league games have been started.

Auburn and Tennessee tied for the Southern Conference championship this year, keeping their records clean except for a tie apiece. Clemson had a splendid record, losing only to the two Georgias and South Carolina. All three games will be played at Griffith Stadium, Clemson on October 14; Auburn, October 21, and Tennessee, November 4.

As the Southern Conference meeting dribbled to an end, the Colonial coaches were dickering with Florida to play in Washington against G. W. on Thanksgiving Day.

Hardest Schedule for D. C. Eleven.

Even if Florida is not brought into the G. W. schedule, the Colonials, nevertheless, will have the most ambitious football schedule ever compiled by a local school. The rest of the games are expected to be culled from the far corners of the country, Tulsa from the Southwest, Missouri from the Midwest, Washington and Jefferson from the busy Pittsburgh district, and a couple of breathers in Westminster from New Wilmington, Pa., and the University of Delaware, from Newark, Del., and others.

Following the custom of last year, G. W. will play the majority of its games at home, maintaining Friday night dates if necessary.

The Colonials will have a raft of manpower to carry on its great 1933 schedule. Back from this season's team will be Nig McCarver, Johnny Baker, Chris Doose, the Parrish brothers, Steele, Matia, Trilling and Lee Carlin, backs, and Zuzu Stewart, Hardy Pearce, Gilbert Conn, Kirk Norton and Ozie Wray, linemen. Coming up from the freshmen will be a raft of line material and a back field man or two of promise.

Play-by-Play Account Tells Of Trojans' Superior Play

MEMORIAL COLISEUM, Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Southern California advanced its national championship aspirations for a second consecutive year today by trouncing Notre Dame, 13 to 0, before a season's national record crowd of over 100,000 persons.

The gridiron was fast, showing no effects of the rainstorm of last night. The sky was partly overcast, with black clouds clustered about the peaks of the distant mountains, but it was evident there would be no more precipitation.

FIRST QUARTER.

Southern California won the toss and in respect to Orv Mohler he was permitted by the Ramblers to hold the ball, giving the Trojans twelve men on the field for the first play.

Murphy returned the kick-off 7 yards to the 26, and Mohler retired from the field.

In two plays the Ramblers lost 2 yards so Banas punted out of bounds, into the wind, on the Trojan 39.

Clark and Griffith banged the line for 4 and Griffith's punt was caught for no return exactly at the point Banas had kicked from. Lukats tossed a long pass on third down after two line play failed, but it was knocked down.

Griffith returned Banas' punt 6 to the 30. Again the Ramblers held and Griffith punted over Murphy's head with the ball rolling to the Notre Dame 10-yard line. Lukats and Banas drove to the 15. Banas' kick was almost blocked by Smith and the ball rolled out of bounds on the Notre Dame 40.

Griffith tried a pass on the first play but it was grounded. Griffith quick-kicked over the goal line. Three plays netted 4 yards. Banas' kick was downed on the Trojan 37.

Griffith on a spinner knifed through right tackle to the 50-yard line. Griffith punted and Sparling tackled Murphy without return on his 12-yard line.

Lukats and Banas hammered the left side of the line for a first down on the 23. Lukats ran to the 28 as the first period ended. Score:

Notre Dame, 0; University of Southern California, 0.

SECOND QUARTER.

Jaskwhich's kick was returned 12 yards by Warburton, who went in for Griffith. The ball was on the Ramblers' 46. Warburton's pass was incomplete. His quick kick just barely rolled over the goal line.

Anderson sent a new back field in. Koken sifted through for 8 yards. Brancheau made it first down on the 32. Koken all but was stopped on a reverse, and nearly tackled for a loss, so he turned and ran the other way to his 44 for a first down.

In two drives at the line, Koken went to the 49-yard line. He sifted through left tackle to the Trojan 43. It was the first time the Ramblers had set foot in S. C. territory. Melinkovich, on two tries, picked up 3.

Jaskwhich punted over the goal line. Warburton gained 6 yards, but his quick kick went out of bounds at midfield. Koken lost 4. Brancheau's pass was incomplete.

Warburton, on a beautiful broken-field scamper, returned Jaskwhich's punt 35 yards to the 44-yard line. The ball was right back to the spot where it was kicked from.

Warburton through a gigantic hole dashed to the 30-yard line. On two line thrusts, he picked up 4 yards. Griffith found no pass receivers and lost 5 yards. Griffith passed to McNeish, who caught the ball on the 3-yard line and scored. The Rambler secondary was caught flat-footed. It was a 31-yard gain. Smith kicked goal.

Score: Notre Dame, 0; Southern California, 7.

THIRD QUARTER.

Brancheau returned Smith's kick-off to the 28-yard line, a 10 yard run. Koken and Melinkovich made it first down on the 38. Griffith intercepted Koken's long pass, returning the fall 4 yards to the Rambler 49.

Two plays failed and Griffith quick kicked. Jaskwhich fumbled and Erskine recovered for the Trojans on the Notre Dame 26. A flat pass was incomplete.

Sparling, on a reverse, picked up 9 yards. Griffith drove center on a spinner to the 10-yard line.

Clark drove center to the 7-yard line, and picked up two more through the same hole. Griffith broke away over right tackle to the 1 yard line.

Score: Notre Dame, 0; Southern California, 13.

Melinkovich returned Smith's kick-off 19 yards to his 27. Brancheau's pass fell incomplete so Jaskwhich punted to Griffith. He returned 10 to midfield.

Griffith punted to the 1-yard line, where the ball was downed. Jaskwhich punted immediately. Griffith returned 7 yards to the Rambler 32.

Griffith's pass fell incomplete, so he ran right end for 3. Another incomplete pass cost 5 yards. He punted over the goal line.

Koken made 2 yards in two crashes into the immovable line. Jaskwhich passed to Koken for 7 yards, and Melinkovich made it first down on his 33.

Koken drove to the 35-yard line as the third period gun barked.

Score: Notre Dame, 0; Southern California, 13.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Jaskwhich, from punt formation, tried to pass, but found no receiver and ran 16 yards to the Trojan 49. It was the second time Notre Dame was in Trojan territory.

Lukats broke the lacing of his trousers and the Notre Dame Team went into a huddle on the sidelines without benefit of the spectators' vision, as he put on a new pair of pants.

Lukats' attempted pass was smeared and Murphy punted out of bounds on the 34-yard line.

Georgetown Five Bows In Debut

Hargaden Is Leading Scorer as Pitt Wins, 32-18.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Inaugurating the newest league in Eastern athletics—the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference—Pitt's basket ball team opened the season tonight by overwhelming Georgetown University, 32 to 18. A crowd of 2,500 saw the contest.

The Hilltoppers and the Panthers battled along evenly in the first half, which ended with the score 14 to 11 in favor of the home team, but the second period was quite different. Stepping out with a rush two minutes after the last half got started, the Pitt offense functioned strongly and its defense was even stronger, holding the Georgetown men to a single field goal.

Hargaden High-Scorer Of Game.

The Hoyas produced the high individual scorer of the route, however, in Eddie Hargaden, who tossed three of his team's five field goals and six fouls for a total of 12 points.

Goals by Skeppy Hughes, sophomore forward, two by the veteran, Russ Ochsenhirt and one each by Claire Cribbs and Don McCamant, along with four free tosses, gave Pitt its 14 points in the first half.

Hargaden, with two goals and two fouls, Capt. Jack Crowley and Charley Parcells, each with a field goal and Verne Murphy's foul accounted for Georgetown's 11 points.

Georgetown scored first on Murphy's foul but the Panthers soon took the lead behind fine playing by Ochsenhirt and Hughes, and at one time led, 12 to 5, in the first half. The Hilltoppers put on a rally just before the period ended and started the second half trailing only 3 points.

In the second half the Panthers scored 9 points before the Hoyas cracked the scoring ice. Hargaden dumped in one from close and the Pittsburghers went back to work again. Hargaden's steady work at the foul line from then on brought the only points to the Hilltoppers with the single exception of a successfully converted gift toss by Parcells.

No Fight Left in Majors, Say Baseball's Old-Timers

By JAMES L. RENICK.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—What baseball needs is more "he-man" scowls and sneers and the "good old days" when a player could sass bleacherites, if you believe the old-timers.

"There's no fight left in baseball," complained the stars of yesteryear at chinning bees during the annual Minor League convention here. They yearned for the days when Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, John McGraw and others were ready and willing to give as good as they got.

Sportsmanship is well and good, they agreed, but the crowd likes to see a good scrapper in action.

Players Act Like Varsity Pals.

"Why, nowadays," wailed Tris Speaker, "you see opposing ball players going about the field with their arms around each other, shaking hands and acting like fraternity brothers. In my day maybe we spoke to the opposing players and maybe we didn't. If we did, you can bet your life, the salutation wasn't fit to print."

And the managers of the present day came in for their share of the panning from the old timers who played baseball when a game meant a good fight before the ninth inning. "Give me the John McGraw type of pilot," declared Rube Marquard, who acquired fame under the management of "Jawn." "There isn't a scrapping manager in present day baseball," said the Rube. "An umpire banishes a manager and he leaves the field without a comeback. You bet McGraw always managed to give 'em a little argument before he left."

The old time ball players liked a razzing from the crowd, they said, and it was good for baseball to argue with the fans, but now, they opined, a player is fined if he talks to a spec-

Reilly's Racing Stock Brings From $1 to $90 at Auction

Hazy, Which Cost $10,000, Top Price; Draft Horse Sells for $60, Topping Many Thoroughbreds.

Special to The Washington Post.

WINCHESTER, Va. Dec. 10.—While a gallery of scarcely 200 persons huddled and shivered around an improvised auction block on the once famous Montana Hall estate of the Conrads in Clarke County, near here, the last in the long line of thoroughbred racing horses owned by Reid Reilly was sold by a receiver today to satisfy an execution in his hands. The entire lot, 52 in number, brought only $1,552 dollars, and went to Washington and Virginia breeders and a representative of Pennsylvania horse-buying interests at prices ranging from $1 to $90 per head.

Hazy, a stallion of the Reilly string which he was reported to have bought from the United States Government at a price in the neighborhood of $10,000, was knocked down to J. K. Keyser, of Flint Hill, Va., for $90 by Coleman Dunn, who wielded a hammer for receiver Charles M. Feltner.

Broodmares, gelding, yearlings, 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds were next to go under the hammer. The entire lot was in poor condition, due to having been underfed for the past several months, and were knocked down to various interests at prices ranging from $1 to $60 per head. Lydia A. and Supercilius, dams of many winners, were in the lot.

W. E. Rudacille, Front Royal; D. N. Rusk, Washington; N. W. Colvin, of Sperryville; Amos Shyrock and Stuart Bells, of Winchester; Harry K. Benham and Dabney C. Harrison, of Boyce; Frank Moffett, of Sperryville, and Jack Garrett, of Westchester, Pa., the latter representing professional buying interests, formed the retinue of purchasers who took the Reilly string at the lowest prices ever paid at an auction sale of blooded stock in the Blue Grass regions of Virginia.

Rusk bought three broodmares for

Charity Game Gets $10,000 Insurance

Snowfall Nets Sum for North-South Football Tilt at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Insurance of $10,000 against snow, hail or rain prior to today's North-South football game for charity will be collected because of snow, Alfred E. Cross, treasurer of the committee in charge, announced today.

"I heard that the Junior League failed to get anything out of a rain-insurance policy because the rain didn't measure enough," Mr. Cross said. "We didn't want that to happen to us, so we got a policy stipulating we could collect for any snow, rain or hail whatsoever between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m."

The policy cost $1,900. Rain or snow after 11 a. m. made the contract binding. A committee consisting of Clarence Meddinger, Horace White and Raymond Buschman sat in the stadium in the driving snow until the deadline was passed.

period, assuming the role of invader for the first time in the second quarter when the elusive Mike Koken sidestepped his way to the 43-yard line. The visitors did not get past the center of the field again until the final period. At the outset, Jaskwhich, finding no available pass receiver, ran with the ball and was brought down on Southern California's 49-yard line.

A few minutes later Notre Dame uncovered a passing attack which for a while had the Trojans running around in circles. After Smith missed a field goal from the 40-yard line, the visitors took the ball on their own 20-yard line and Ray Brancheau passed to Hugh Devore on Notre Dame's 48-yard line.

Lukats passed to George Melinkovich on Southern California's 41 and the same combination worked the ball to the 23-yard line. Laurie Vejar, a Hollywood boy, then shot one to Sheeketski on the 5-yard line. The drive was stopped when Griffith intercepted a pass on his own 9-yard line.

The Trojans kicked out but Notre Dame was right back knocking at the door with another long pass from Lukats to Melinkovich, winding up on the 13-yard line. An incomplete pass over the goal line foiled this, the last effort of the South Bend contingent.

Trojans' Only Good Pass Scores.

Notre Dame gained 131 yards on seven completed passes from a total of seventeen attempted. Southern California completed only one pass of eight, but this toss was good for a touchdown.

The visitors outgained the home team and scored twice as many first downs, but the Ramblers carried the ball more. Notre Dame never kicked on third down, while Southern California consistently punted when two plays had failed to negotiate a first down.

The game was a rough, tough affair, marked by hard line play. Larry Stevens, Southern California guard, and Steve Banas, Notre Dame full back, were ejected from the game just before it was completed for hitting in the clinches.

Orville Mohler, Southern California's star quarter back who was injured in midseason and forced to retire from competition, was permitted to hold the ball for the opening kick-off of the game, trotting from the field as Emmett Murphy caught it and brought it back 7 yards.

Blocked Punt Nets Dixie Victory

Turnbow, Mississippi Tackle, Kicks Point to Decide Game.

North Scores After Fumble; Only 1,723 Witness Clash.

By MILES H. WOLFF.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A touchdown break in the closing minutes of the game gave the South All-Stars a 7-to-6 victory over the North All-Stars in a football war between the States here today.

The weather was more suitable for a reenactment of Valley Forge than Vicksburg or Bull Run. Snow fell steadily on an already snow-covered gridiron and a chilling wind kept the 1,723 spectators huddled in the vast Baltimore Stadium constantly shivering.

It prevented any of the fancy football expected and led to a shortening of the four periods to twelve minutes.

Despite the handicaps under which the game was played, both touchdowns were made on sensational breaks and victory came to the South from the accurate placement kick of Guy Turnbow, University of Mississippi tackle.

Turnbow's Punting Is Feature.

Turnbow's brilliant punting had kept the South out of difficulty more than once during the afternoon and the assignment of attempting point after touchdown with the score tied at 6-6 was a trying one, but he rose manfully to the occasion.

Judging his distance carefully, he sent a perfect placement spinning between the uprights just before a swarm of Northern linesmen bore down on him in their effort to block the try.

The touchdown for the Gray team from the South came with startling suddenness, when it appeared that the North's six points would be sufficient for victory.

Turnbow's long punts had gradually forced the North back during the fourth quarter, and Chase, quarter back from Brown University, found himself forced to punt from his own 15-yard line. As he booted the ball, Romey Hunter, an end from Marshall College in West Virginia, crashed through the line and leaped high in front.

Falls on Ball Across Line.

The ball struck Hunter squarely in the chest, and skidded over the packed snow across the goal line. Hunter was after it like a flash, falling on it for the six points that tied the score.

North's touchdown was made early in the game. Dick Harlow, of Western Maryland, coach of the Southern eleven, had given his boys some tricky criss-cross plays, and it was on one of these the North touchdown was made.

Corzine, full back from Davis and Elkins, had the ball and was preparing to hand it to one of his teammates when it shot out of his hands and into the air. Cliff Aultman, Geneva tackle, happened to be in the vicinity and, snatching the ball before it had time to touch the ground, raced 20 yards for the touchdown. He was untouched in his dash for the goal. Chase's attempt at placement was wide.

James Breaks Away In First Period.

Between the two touchdowns there were few interesting plays. Neither side was able to advance the ball, each chalking up two first downs. The North team, coached by Jock Sutherland, of Pittsburgh, made one when Jack James, Princeton full back, shot through tackle for a 30-

PAUL T. WINS JEFFERSON PARK FEATURE BY NOSE MARGIN

Shandon Pair Run Second And Third

Gilbert-Mills Battle Same; Each Rides One Winner.

Colorado Boy Gets in Money in First Six Races.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The initial running of the Jefferson Futurity, 1 mile handicap event for 2-year-olds, was the stellar attraction offered here today, and an exciting finish saw Paul T., flying the silks of O'Connell and Rector, the winner, by a neck over At Top. Ennis was beaten two lengths for the place. The second and third horses both represented Shandon Farm.

The weather was cloudy and the track slow following showers overnight, but a good sized crowd cheered Paul T., the $6.60 for $2 choice in an open race, as the veteran J. (Goggles) McCoy drove the son of Paul Weidel first past the pagoda pole. The winner covered the 8 furlongs in 1:41 under 113 pounds. Col. Hatfield had to be withdrawn after striking himself this morning, but ten youngsters started.

Mills Is Third With Ennis.

Hank Mills rode Ennis and it marked the fifth straight race in which he finished in the money.

There was no change in the Mills-Gilbert race for 1932 riding honor. Each rode one winner.

Ennis was used up racing Yankyway into submission in the first six furlongs. Paul T., always on the outside, was well back until the far turn, where McCoy got him to running. The colt covered ground rapidly the remainder of the journey, caught Ennis in the stretch and held on with good courage to hold the fast closing at top under control.

Hank Mills guided Tennywood first home in the 6-furlong dash which opened the card. This was the Colorado lad's 186th winner and left him only two behind his rival who later rode his 189th. Tennywood scored by a neck in a drive with Arrow. Silverman was third two lengths farther back with Gilbert riding. Mills and his mount were messed around at the start but recovering quickly took the lead sailing into the stretch and survived a hard duel gamely. Gilbert's charge was well up but could not make up ground in the final drive.

Vercher Is Winning Jockey.

Plenty of excitement was provided in the second race, another 6-furlong affair. It appeared until the final strides as if either Mills or Gilbert would win, but the less fashionable jockey, T. Vercher, came along and beat them both with Dr. Syntax, an $11.20 for $2 hazard.

Hank Mills again was in the money in the third event, but could do no better than third after holding a substantial early lead. The winner was Bonnie Cap, paying slightly more than 2 to 1, which scored by a half-length over Concisus, with Serving Lad, another length and a half behind. Mills was looking back as Serving Lad led to the stretch by plenty of daylight, but his mount wavered in the straightaway. Concisus took a short-lived lead, succumbing to Bonnie Lad's final challenge in a hard drive.

Paula L., Mills Up, Loses by Nose.

The mile and a half test, fourth on the program, found Mills again prominent, but beaten at the finish, the lad losing with Paula L., by a nose on this occasion. Portmess outfinished the mare, to take the purse and return $13.60.

Johnny Gilbert got back into his stride in the sixth event, piloting Buck Hero to that gelding's second straight at the meeting, to pay $18.40. This triumph placed Gilbert three winners in front of Mills, and it was his 189th score. Buck Hero won by two lengths from Pacheco, while Lilybet, third, an additional eight lengths back, gave Mills his sixth in the money mount of the day. Buck Hero overhauled Kingpin when Gilbert asked him to run approaching the stretch, and easily held Pacheco safe.

Regal Flag just lasted to be at the break, Gilbert up, by a neck, in the closing contest. McGonigle was third. The winner paid $5.40.

PHILLY TEAM TO OPPOSE EAGLES

Berger to See Action in Contest at G. W. Gym.

HAVING corralled all of the semi-pro talent in town, the Eagles will open a long and, it is hoped, successful schedule this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at George Washington University's conveniently located gym. The Preston Club, hailing from Philadelphia, will furnish the opposition.

Tubba Farrell, Moon Evans and Ralph Bennie, who performed with the Eagles last year, are again with the team. Cast in a supporting role are Bozie Berger, former Maryland U. star; Buddy Zimmerman, of the Celtics, and Joe Sweeney, former Vic mainstay.

From present indications, Vic's will not be represented on the court this season. Manager Vic Gauzza figured the rental of Silver Spring's armory too costly, inasmuch as officials in charge of the armory refused to accept a percentage of the gate receipts this year rather than a flat rental fee, which was paid last season. With the Eagles playing in a gym accessible to all fans, Gauzza does not believe his team could make expenses at Silver Spring.

A preliminary game, involving Delaware & Hudson and the Olmsted quintet, will precede the Eagle-Preston tilt today, starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Browns Sign Ruel, Reported in St. Louis

St. Louis, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The Post-Dispatch said today it had "learned on high authority" that Harold "Muddy" Ruel, one of the outstanding major league catchers of the past decade, unconditionally released last fall by Detroit, has signed to play with the St. Louis Browns next season. Ruel built up his reputation as a top rank catcher while with Washington. Later he was with the Boston Red Sox.

SOUTH. CALIFORNIA BEATS NOTRE DAME

Clark drove to the 40-yard line. Warburton's quick kick rolled to the 2-yard line where the ball was downed by Warburton.

Jaskwhich punted to his 33-yard line with no return. S. C. gained 33 yards on the exchange of kicks.

Three plays involving Warburton, Sparling and Clark were good for as many yards. Smith's attempted place-kick from the 20-yard line was short.

De Vore caught Brancheau's long pass for a 26-yard gain to the Rambler 48. Lukats lost 4 yards on an attempted lateral.

Laurie Vejar, a former Hollywood boy, went in at quarter for Notre Dame. Lukats passed to Melinkovich to the Trojan 41-yard line. On the same play Melinkovich caught another pass on the 23-yard line.

Vejar passed to Sheeketski for a first down on the 5-yard line. Sheeketski lost 6 yards trying right end.

Griffith intercepted Vejar's pass on the 9-yard line to eliminate Notre Dame's first sustained drive.

Griffith punted to Devore on the 37-yard line after Warburton had gained 4 in two thrusts.

Lukats completed another long throw to Melinkovich, who was run out of bounds on the 13, for 24 yards gained. Another toss was incomplete.

Lukats ran left end for 4 yards. Vejar's pass over the goal line fell incomplete.

Griffith quick-kicked to the 25-yard line, when two plays failed to gain. Twice, Lukats passed, but there was no receiver handy.

Banas punted to the Trojan 45-yard line. Sparling on a reverse ran to the Rambler 36-yard line, gaining 19.

Griffith's long pass was incomplete as two Notre Dame players tried to catch the ball simultaneously. Another pass fell incomplete. He punted out of bounds on the 20-yard line.

Lukats completed a pass to Sheeketski on the 30-yard line as the game ended.

Score: Notre Dame, 0; Southern California, 13.

BOXING BITS Hereabouts

PETE SANSTOL, Norwegian bantamweight champion, and Benny Schwartz, Baltimore scrapper, are to clash at Portner's Tuesday, December 20, in what promises to be one of Portner's most notable fights of the year. Sanstol is the second ranking bantamweight in the world, and a victory for Schwartz means much to the little Jewish scrapper, who recently beat Eddie Burl.

Marty Gallagher is gunning for a match with Joe Knight, the black-haired Georgian with a stick of dynamite in his left paw. Gallagher's friends say he can take the Dixie light-heavyweight king, who expects to be a world's champion in a few months.

The way Knight plastered Cowboy Phelps at Portner's is full proof that he can whip not only the big shots who trade punches at a terrific speed, but also the most unorthodox fighters. Failing to win a round, Phelps suffered the worst beating of his career. When Knight belted him with a cross right and a quick left whip, Phelps was knocked off his feet for the first time in any ring. The cowboy's peculiar tactics make him a hard man to box.

With respect to Mr. Gallagher, our experts report that he has taken the fatal count only twice in his life. Larry Johnson flattened him in Chicago a few years ago, while Charlie Retzlaff scored a technical kayo in a preliminary to the Stribling-Schmeling fight two seasons ago.

Gallagher still insists he wants Knight. Promoter Frankie Mann has the match under consideration.

Swaggering Jimmy Reed, who was the target for mauling in the recent bout with Young Joe Firpo at Portner's, expects to be fighting at the Alexandria arena shortly after the New Year.

"I lick ten good boys and lose to one—so I'm a bum," Jimmy said. "Yet I keep on fighting, drawing down fair purses and pleasing the crowds."

A crashing blow to the solar plexus knocked out Reed in the fifth.

Joey Goodman, young Richmond, Va., battler, who was ranked sixth last year in the junior welter and light weight divisions, is anxious to disport his wares at Portner's. Goodman has had a colorful career in boxing. A native of Baltimore, he broke into the ring game about seven years ago. He came under Ike Dorgan's tutorship in New York and fought a number of fights at Madison Square Garden. Later Jimmy Dunn, who managed the great Johnny Kilbane, former world's featherweight champion, took the youngster under his wing. Joey fought Sammy Mandell when the Rockford, Ill., sheik was lightweight titleholder, and gave him a battle for fifteen rounds. Recently Goodman returned from the Coast, where he piled up a string of victories.

One of Washington's outstanding drawing cards is coming back. He is Young Van, the Adonis of the ring, who is training faithfully in preparation for a match at Portner's on December 19. His opponent has not been announced.

RACING STOCK GOES AT CUT-RATE PRICES

$105, while Garrett was successful in obtaining twelve head, consisting of broodmares, geldings and yearlings, at prices ranging from $15 to $60 per head.

Once Valued at $30,000.

The horses sold today were once valued in excess of $30,000 by the owner and were the brothers, sisters and mothers of personages which won on the track during the season just closed.

Reilly, not present at the dispersal sale of his stock, was said to have blamed the depression for conditions resulting in the auction, adding that markets for his stock were not available.

HIGH TEAMS IN CHARITY GAME

Intercity All-Star Event in Baltimore Urged.

ALTHOUGH negotiations for a football game for charity between a team composed of Washington school boys and an all-high team of Baltimore are reported to be under way, no local coaches were aware of the fact last night. The game will be played in Baltimore New Year's Day if plans emanating from the Monumental City materialize.

H. Clifton Neild, of Baltimore, chairman of the committee in charge of the game, has circulated letters to all local newspapers requesting their all-high candidates for the season recently closed. According to Neild, either John Paul Collins, of Eastern; Hap Hardell, of Tech, or Orrel Mitchell, of Gonzaga, will be appointed coach of the local team this week.

None of the trio had been approached last night. Collins, who is chairman of the board of faculty advisers of the high schools, stated that if the matter is broached to him it will have to be referred to the board of principals with the recommendation of the advisory board.

"Pop" Goddard, well known in Baltimore athletic circles, will coach that city's team. Admission to the game will be three cans of foodstuffs, which will be turned over to the Commissioner of Police for distribution among the poor of Baltimore.

Championship medals will be awarded members of the winning team.

GEORGETOWN BOWS TO PITT IN DEBUT

Pitt did little stalling, as it found the Georgetown zone defense full of holes. The captains of both teams were ejected after four personal fouls.

Georgetown won over Pitt in last year's game at Washington.

GRIFFITH AND CRONIN ANGLING FOR PITCHER

Judging from Cronin's conversation he plans to concentrate on getting his pitchers ready to step off at top speed, for all of his comments had to do with this department. He did not have much to say about the other members of his staff except to praise "General" Al Crowder and to bemoan the fact that Lefty Loyd Brown adds so many defeats to his usually good victory column. Ed (Missing) Linke and Bud Thomas were the only youngsters he mentioned, both having a chance to make good, he declared, judging from their records in the minors.

GEORGETOWN LEAGUE.

"Lefty" Lomax rung the hoop for 32 points as St. John's swamped West Washington Baptist, 74-25, in the Georgetown Church League last night. Mosteller tallied 22 points for the winners. In the second game of the night Peck Memorial nosed out Fourth Presbyterian, winning by a score of 27-26. Lochte was outstanding for victors, while Smithson was best for the losers.

Ring Technique Developed Gradually by Gene Tunney

Trained Methodically to Build Physique and Perfect Boxing Skill Which Later Made Him World's Champion.

By ROBERT EDGREN.

ALMOST any youngster can get real strength, combined with speed and endurance, by doing a moderate amount of daily exercising in some branch of athletics.

I think Gene Tunney was the most remarkable example of the usefulness of constant exercising, without strain, to develop a little natural ability into the prowess of a champion.

When Tunney was a youngster he did quite a bit of boxing. He liked the sport. But he didn't show anything that would make an ordinary observer, or any of the ringside experts, pick him as a coming world's champion. In fact, he took some trimmings in his early fights. He was just a good, game youngster—not a ring sensation.

Fought for Small Purses And Fun.

When he was a shipping clerk in New York, he went on boxing small bouts for small purses and got a lot of fun out of it. He trained himself carefully. When in France as a Marine this early training showed its effect. He won the interallied light heavyweight championship. He was good, but nobody thought of him as a world-beater. Gen. Pershing, when he made a speech and referred to Bob Martin, winner of the heavyweight contests, as "The greatest fighting man among 2,000,000 fighting men" probably never wasted a second thought on the lighter and more slender Gene Tunney—who was to go so much farther in the glove game.

Tunney was just a lightly built, rather awkward fellow when he came back from the war and decided to make boxing his profession. The managers didn't fall over each other trying to "grab" him. He made very little money for a long time, but he trained methodically, worked to build up his weight and strength, and studied every trick of the game. He had his ups and downs.

Greb Gave Tunney Fancy Trimming.

Harry Greb, then light-heavyweight champion, gave him a fierce beating. Tunney found a training place in the country down on the New Jersey coast, took long easy runs on the country roads every day, punched the bag, boxed now and then, studied his faults and corrected them. Then he came back and whipped Greb twice. After that he went up fast. A natural student, he worked out a reason for every move he made. He developed his fighting strategy, but developed his body and arms and legs too. He was no Jeffries or Dempsey. It would take plenty of work to get to the top, but he had already set the heavyweight title as his mark, although the doughty Dempsey was king.

Tunney took his time. He never was in a hurry. He won bouts that at last made him a possible opponent for Dempsey. He was tentatively offered that match. He turned the offer down.

"I'm not ready to fight Dempsey yet," he said. "If I fought him now he'd beat me. In another year I'll have a chance."

Tunney Made Study of Dempsey.

In another year, having spent the interval in careful training, Tunney was ready. He had even studied every move Dempsey made, getting moving picture films of Dempsey's fights and having them run over and over, night after night in his quarters. Physically he was as fit for a title fight as any man of his weight could possibly be. He didn't have a month of training behind him—he had years of training.

In Philadelphia Tunney met Dempsey's first rush with a terrific straight right hand punch on the chin, standing Jack up on his heels. Gene had planned that punch and practiced it for months. It gave him a good start. After that his long, careful training and his close study of Dempsey's fighting style carried him through to a one-sided win.

After the fight Dempsey said to me, "Tunney's strength surprised me. I thought he was a skinny, sickly fellow. I didn't seriously think he had a chance. But he was stronger than I was and he gave me a good licking."

Long training that he went through because he liked it and because he was ambitious to go to the top, made Gene champion. Without unusual bulk or the natural build that made some of the other champions easy winners of the big title, he developed the strength of a man 30 pounds heavier, and he knew how to use it.

I won't say that any boy can make himself a champion, but any boy of average intelligence and average health can make himself a pretty good athlete, if he starts right and doesn't quit on the job.

Gene Venzke, as a boy, lived in the country and ran to school and back every day. Later he ran five miles to his job every morning, and five miles back at night, just because he liked to run. Now he is the world's greatest mile runner and holds the world's amateur record of 4 minutes 10 seconds.

Years ago a young man named George R. Gray worked in a small country store up in the Canadian woods. George had plenty of time on his hands. So just for exercise he began putting a stone on a bit of level ground in front of the store. After awhile he could put it farther than any of the lumbermen who dropped in to try out with him. He developed a fine pair of shoulders and an all around husky build.

Soon Was Shot-Put Record Breaker.

Going to New York, he joined the New York Athletic Club, and soon broke the world record putting the 16-pound shot. His record of 47 feet, made at the Chicago World's Fair in '93, lasted nine years. Gray went back to Canada, became a lumberman and made a fortune. Almost forgotten, he trained up in the woods, returned to New York one day, and won another championship, just to show he could do it.

W. W. Coe added 2½ feet to Gray's record. Like Gray, he was of average height, not a giant like Ralph Rose, McDonald, Brix, Sexton or the big record breakers who followed him. Like Gray, Wesley Coe developed himself by exercising at a sport he liked just for the fun of it.

Julian Elliot, a New York school boy phenom. of some years ago, weighed only 145 pounds, but was a shot-putting marvel. He had half a dozen shots of different weights in his back yard, and for years practiced putting a couple of hours a day. He developed amazing strength and put the 16-pound shot in competition 46 feet—which was almost a miracle for a 145-pound man. But the funny thing was that he could give Pat McDonald, who weighed about 300 pounds, a close competition with the 22-pound shot, the biggest weight ever used in shot-putting competitions.

Houser World's Champ While In High School.

Bud Houser, who won a national championship shot putting when in the high school at Oxnard, Calif., and afterward won both shot and discus in the Olympics, as well as a great number of other championships, was of just average height and weight. For several years he practiced weight throwing for the fun and exercise he got out of it, and that made him one of the greatest weight throwing champions. Because he invariably beat much bigger men he was called "the great competitor." Almost beaten, he could always gather strength for a winnng last throw.

All the men mentioned exercised for years for the fun of developing themselves—not just to win competitions. They did the kind of training that builds up strength. They didn't go through the straining that throws it away. That is really the secret of reaching championship form in any sport.

Capital Senators Tie in Charlotte

G. W. Players in Line-up as Washingtonians Play on Muddy Field.

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Playing on a rain-soaked gridiron, the Charlotte Bantams and the Washington Senators, including several 1932 George Washington U. players in their line-up, battled to a scoreless tie here this afternoon before 400 spectators.

Fumbles were frequent, due to the slippery condition of the ball; for the most part the tussling was all in midfield.

In the first period, Schwartz recovered a Senator's fumble of a punt on the Washington 22-yard line, and the Bantams, with Franch and Kealer showing the way, drove to the visitor's 2-yard line, where the ball went over on downs. This was the only serious threat by the Charlotte outfit.

In the final period, Carter returned a Bantam punt 37 yards to the Senator 47-yard line. Snyder shot a pass to Levinsky for 17 yards, and then a couple of line plays by Carter and Snyder made it first down on the Charlotte 23-yard line. The Senators were unable to advance, and Carter punted over the goal line.

There were no long runs and few spectacular plays. The Senators made seven first downs to four for the Bantams.

COX TO MEET McMILLAN ON MAT

Villainy, Personifications of Fair Play Clash Thursday.

RASSLING carries on its merry and meaningless mayhem Thursday night at the old fortress of foul play, the Washington Auditorium. Jim McMillan, reformed hero, meets up with Bullet Joe Cox in the feature. Two other bouts have been arranged to date, and two more are in the process of being forged, or something.

McMillan vs. Cox, of course, represents villainy vs. the reincarnation of fair play. Wrestling has delved back into the earliest forms of English drama and scooped up its ideas from hoary old liturgical plays, which represented the various vices and virtues by means of characters, and gave the characters such names as Faith, Hope, and perhaps Charity.

McMillan Aroused The Populace.

McMillan aroused the auditorium inmates so much last week, when he conquered handsome and gentlemanly Frank Judson, that about 200 people cluttered up the gangway to the dressing rooms and if Jim hadn't frozen his features into a rather awful leer as he stalked out of the ring, somebody probably would have been silly enough to take a poke at him.

Cox is another model matman. Good looking, amiable, he never stoops to such extra-carricula enterprises as a bit of eye-gouging or friendly lip tearing. And McMillan does. It begins to look like McMillan is going to become so unpopular here that he'll be a great box office attraction on the part of people who come to see him beaten.

Polish Champion On Program.

The other wage earners scheduled for a piece-work job Thursday night are Frank Judson, who meets up with Abe Coleman, and platinum blonde Everett Marshall, who engages one Joe Naroki, who, at least until press time last night, was supposed to be the Polish champion.

Women free.

U. S. Poloists Beaten But Win Chilean Title

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Although beaten by a picked Chilean four, 9 to 8, today, the United States touring poloists won the Chilean championship by a margin of two victories to one.

The North American team, riding as a Middlebury (Va.) four, won the first game of the series Tuesday, 8 to 7, and the second on Thursday, 7 to 4. Winston Guest, Michael Phipps and Jimmy Mills rode in all three games, while J. C. (Cocie) Rathborne and H. Phipps shared the other position.

Women's Basket Ball Committee to Meet

A basket ball demonstration, sponsored by the women's rating committee, will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. Gymnasium, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Miss Helen Lawrence, chairman of the committee, will be in charge of the program.

Miss Eline von Borries, chairman of the national committee on women's basket ball, will be present to discuss the many changes in the rules this year. She will be assisted by Miss Dorothy Tapley, of Goucher College, who is also a member of the national committee.

All coaches, officials and players are urged to attend this meeting. Girls from George Washington University will participate in a demonstration game.

CENTENNIALS PLAY EAGLES.

Defying the elements the Centennial and Anacostia Eagle 125-pound gridders last night agreed to play their game today, which will determine the champion of their class, as scheduled on the Fairlawn gridiron at 1 o'clock. All Centennial players are requested to report at the New York avenue playground at 11:30 a. m.

MACK FACES LANDERS IN FEATURE

Bantams Wage War at Portner's Arena on Tuesday.

BILLY LANDERS, Norfolk, Va., speed merchant, makes his first appearance in this section in five months when he trades blows with Jimmy Mack, Philadelphia bantamweight feature eight-rounder of the triple-star boxing program Tuesday night at Portner's Arena in Alexandria for the benefit of the Day Nursery.

Landers fought Benny Schwartz at Twin City in July, losing the decision after a rip-snorting ten-round encounter, but since then has confined most of his boxing to other sections. It was the third match with Schwartz, two previous decisions having been copped by the Norfolk buzz-saw.

Fans Wanted Mack's Return.

Mack's return comes as a result of a popular demand from boxing fans who have clamored for his presence ever since the hectic eight-round bout with Eddie Burl at Portner's Halloween night. Mack, it is recalled, took the bout on three days' notice, and after a three-month layoff. Mack holds a victory over Benny Schwartz, having defeated the Jewish star in Wilmington, Del.

Landers scored a knockout over Eddie Buell in his first appearance at Fort Washington, flattened Jimmy Tramberia in the second, defeated Frankie DeAngelo, Frankie McKenna, and Joe Fino. He lost an eight-rounder to Midget Wolgast, world's flyweight champion, at Portner's.

Another eight-rounder on the card next Tuesday will bring dynamic Johnny Edwards, 118-pounder from Huntington, W. Va., conqueror of Midget Wolgast and Babe Triscaro, into the ring against Dick Welsh, Norfolk sensation. Edwards has beaten among others Willie Davies, Happy Atherton, Ollie Bartlett, and has knocked out Luis Carpentero, Routeir Parra, Sammy Tucker, Ace Hebe and Joe Dragon. Welsh, it is recalled, gave away 12 pounds when he lost to Mickey Gelb at Ritchie Stadium. A veteran of over 100 fights, he also holds a decision over Billy Landers, and has fought Midget Wolgast to a draw.

De Beve Faces 657th Test.

The third eight-rounder on the program finds Arthur DeBeve, former French lightweight champion, and veteran of 657 fights, opposing K. O. Tony Stetz, Lithuanian fighter from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Stetz is ranked high in his section. He weights 140 pounds.

In the preliminary bout, Barefoot Green, Fredericksburg's contribution to the ring industry, will step four rounds with Charlie Estes, of Walter Reed Hospital. Green, a farmhand, won his first professional bout at Portner's with a knockout over Johnny Perussi.

Tickets for the fight may be procured at Vic's Sport Shop.

G. W. Grid Dinner Plans Completed

Hornaday Toastmaster at Banquet Wednesday at Mayflower.

Except for the naming of the principal speaker, arrangements for the annual George Washington University football banquet, scheduled Wednesday night in the Mayflower Hotel, are practically complete. The varsity and freshmen football players will be the honored guests and will receive the school letters and numerals in recognition of gridiron services performed during the late season.

Dr. Frank A. Hornaday, class of 1907, and widely known in the medical fraternity, yesterday accepted an invitation to serve as toastmaster. Dr. Hornaday formerly was president of the District of Columbia Medical Association and president of the G. W. U. General Alumni Association.

One of the features of the program will be the award of a silver trophy to the member of the 1932 Colonial varsity adjudged most valuable by a committee of local sports editors. The trophy, donated by the Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary activities fraternity, will be presented by Steel McGrew.

Entertainment will include music by a male quartet of the university glee club and the orchestra of Gerald Free, manager of the 1931 football team. Max Farrington, assistant athletic director, has announced that the affair will be informal and only men will be admitted. Tickets may be procured at his office, 2010 H street northwest.

OLD-TIME FIGHTERS NEED OF BASEBALL

tator. "Get the crowd down on a player and the stands will be filled every day just for the sake of razzing this player," was the opinion voiced by George Burns, former first baseman for the Cleveland Indians.

Violence Not Advocated.

None of the old-timers advocated violence between players and umpires or between players and spectators, but they all believed there is too much fraternizing between members of the different clubs. "Give me a player who will pass an opponent and scowl at him instead of rushing up and shaking hands," said Bill Clymer. "I like to see 'em a little mad at each other and if they are you can count on the spikes flying on the field."

Yes, baseball, as it is played today, is a "sissy game," say the old-timers and they move their pompous forms to another chair where perhaps tales of other days are being retold by Bill Friel, Earl "Greasy" Neale, Ben Tincup, Harry Leibold and others who played the game when it was "a man's game and not a fraternity convention."

MISSOURI AND DUKE QUINTETS INVADE CAPITAL THIS WEEK

Week Brings 7 Collegiate Contests

Big Six Team Plays G. W. Thursday at Tech Gym.

District Debuts Due for Georgetown and C. U.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE.
WEDNESDAY.
Catholic University vs. Maryland State Normal, at C. U.
THURSDAY.
George Washington vs. Missouri, at Tech.
FRIDAY.
Georgetown vs. Duke, at Tech.
Gallaudet vs. Maryland State Normal, at Gallaudet.
Catholic U. vs. LaSalle, at Philadelphia.
SATURDAY.
George Washington vs. Duke, at Tech.
Catholic U. vs. Seton Hall, at South Orange, N. J.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

BASKET BALL goes big-time this week in Washington when a card of seven attractions will be offered by the college boys, the dominating factor of which is the first appearance in Washington of a Big Six team. The team is Missouri, cochampions of their conference; the date, Thursday night; the place, Tech High Gymnasium, and—lest we forget—the opponent, old G. W. U.

The week also serves to introduce the latest court creations of Georgetown and Catholic University. The Hilltoppers open their local season with a bang, meeting Duke, at Tech, Friday night, while C. U. starts the round of collegiate activity for the week by playing its first home game Wednesday night, at C. U. gym against old Maryland State Normal, and then sets out on a two-game trip north.

Game Commands Much Interest.

The meeting between the high-powered Colonial Giants and Missouri commands a lot of interest. The game matches up opposite ends of the football tactics world, with G. W. an outright scoring team whose pointage often reaches 60, and Missouri a team almost nationally known for its defensive skill. In fact the whole Big Six goes in for defense rather than offense, and it is quite the thing for their games to end up with 14-11 scores and stuff like that.

Missouri has three outstanding players. Johnny Cooper was coholder of the high-scoring championship of the conference last year, tied with none other than Ted O'Leary, new assistant coach of the Colonials, who played with Kansas. He's about Johnny Fenlon's size. Norman Wager, 6-foot-3 center, is a great ball handler. A fine baseball pitcher, he'll be given a tryout with St. Louis Cardinals next year. George Stuber, is a fleet guard, and very rugged. The team plays an offensive game that is methodical and sure as death and taxes. Unless George Washington can pep up its defense it will get in plenty of trouble.

Missouri is coached by George Edwards, whose last four teams have been either champions of the Big Six, or in the money. The squad plays Butler, in Indianapolis Wednesday night; G. W. the next night and Washington U., in St. Louis Saturday night.

Duke Opens Season Against G. U.

Duke will be inaugurating its season when it comes to town Friday to play Georgetown's interesting new team. The Blue Devils start out Wednesday night with Baltimore U., meeting Georgetown Friday night, at Tech, and George Washington the next night, also at Tech.

C. U.'s revamped squad should have no trouble disposing of Maryland State Normal, but may run into trouble against LaSalle up in Philadelphia Friday night, and Seton Hall, in South Orange, Saturday night.

V. P. I. Found Champion Of "New" Conference

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Had the "New" Southern Conference been in operation the past football season, V. P. I., with four victories and no defeats, would have won the championship, records revealed today.

Duke had four wins and one loss and South Carolina one win and one tie. The standing would have been:

School.	W.	L.	T.	School.	W.	L.	T.
V. P. I.	4	0	0	Virginia	2	3	0
S. Carolina	1	0	1	N. Carolina	1	2	0
Duke	4	1	0	V. M. I.	1	3	0
N. C. State	2	1	1	W. and L.	1	4	0
Maryland	2	3	0	Clemson	0	2	0

Langley Aviators Tie Arrows at Richmond

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Langley Field and the Arrow eleven, of Richmond, splashed to a scoreless deadlock on a muddy field today to chalk up their second consecutive tie game in as many years.

Arrow threatened on several occasions and pushed to the 1-foot line in the third quarter, where they were held by the aviators.

The visitors only once menaced the Arrow goal line and on this occasion Sam Lankford's 70-yard punt pulled the home club out of danger.

Arrow made 8 first downs and gained 135 yards from scrimmage as compared with 6 first downs and 118 yards from scrimmage by the Langley eleven.

Takoma-S. S. Court Prospects Bright

Four regulars returning for the season, which opens Tuesday, augur well for a winning season on the court by Takoma-Silver Spring High School. The soccer team of the school was eliminated last week by the Allegany County representatives in the semifinal round of the State title series. Last year Takoma lost out in the semifinal round of the basket ball series to the same county.

Bozievich is the only regular not returning. Clark, Lizear, Pritchard and Tompkins are the returning veterans. A corps of green recruits are striving for the vacant berth.

Tuesday Takoma tackles Mount Rainier High School in the first game on its schedule. Because the former is beginning practice only tomorrow the game will be more in the nature of a practice affair.

American University Basket Ball Talent Unbeaten in First Two Tests

FORMIDABLE QUINTET AT AMERICAN

Coach Young Builds His Team Around Veteran Sells.

(This is the fifth of a series of articles dealing with the prospects of Washington's college basket ball teams.)

BY BOB CONSIDINE.

WITH about 25 boys to choose from each year, and without any aid in the direction of athletic scholarships, a young man named Walter Young has been fashioning first rate basket ball players at American University for four years, since coming to the school after a first rate athletic career of his own at Ohio Wesleyan.

He doesn't know the secret of his success. The funny part of it was that he played little or no basket ball in college, being taken up almost entirely with football. Now American University's football teams, probably because of a total lack of manpower, are notoriously ineffective, but his basket ball teams are feared in all quarters.

On the percentage tables American had the best team in town last year. It lost only two games on a schedule of 15. Navy was one of its victims. It lost a close game to Villanova, at Villanova, and was defeated by St. John's, at Annapolis, after beating the Johnnies in Washington.

Team Play Helps Eagles.

Probably the secret of A. U.'s success of late years has been the abnegation of self in the striving for perfect team play. The Eagles don't go in for individual stars. Their plays concern different shooters. But one boy this year has stood out. He is Oscar Sells, 6-foot-2 center who can do things with a basket ball that few in town can. A peppery little squad is being built around Sells, featuring Leonel Dick, Danny Kesseler, Gladstone Williams and Orville Targee, all of them young but plenty experienced.

Young is an exponent of the zone defense system, and believes that the new basket ball rules will cause most of the teams to turn to this style of defending a goal, because it is now illegal to "freeze" the ball down the other end of the court. It must be brought up the floor in attacking style all the time, and so the zone players can simply wait. On the offense Young believes in a combination of set and impromptu plays, most of them executed by short passing and, of course, speedy shifting. You see very little long-shooting by an A. U. Team. He's going to cut down on pivot plays, in fear of the 3-second rule.

Tennessee Schedules G. W. and Louisiana

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The University of Tennessee football team will play Louisiana State University in New Orleans and George Washington University in Washington, D. C., in 1933, Col. Paul Parker, athletic director, said today in announcing the Volunteers' next year schedule.

Parker said a one-year contract was signed with George Washington and a two-year contract with L. S. U.

Two dates are still open. Four teams, North Carolina, Maryville, Mississippi A. & M. and the University of Chattanooga, 1932 opponents, do not appear on the new schedule.

The schedule:
September 30, open.
October 7, University of Mississippi, at Knoxville (tentative); 14, Duke, at Durham, N. C.; 21, Alabama, at Knoxville; 28, Florida, at Knoxville.
November 4, George Washington, at Washington, D. C.; 11, open; 18, Vanderbilt, at Knoxville; 30, Kentucky, at Lexington, Ky.
December 9, L. S. U., at New Orleans.

BASEBALL WRITERS MEET.

Denman Thompson, president of the Baseball Writers Association of America, announced today that a meeting of the association would be held in the Hotel Roosevelt, New York, at noon next Thursday. Thompson is sports editor of the Washington Evening Star.

BEST TEAMS QUIT DIXIE CIRCUIT

New Southeastern Attracts Cream of South.

W. T. PEACOCK.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—When thirteen members of the Southern Conference withdrew and banded themselves into the Southeastern Conference they took the major part of the old conference's football prestige with them.

Figured on the results of contests between teams in the two groups the past fall, the Southeastern Conference is just about twice as formidable in a gridiron way as the Southern Conference as it now exists.

And the results of past years bear out the 1932 verdict. Since the Southern Conference was organized the dominant teams have been Alabama, Tulane, Georgia Tech and Tennessee, with Auburn and L. S. U. coming in this fall for a share of the glory. All are members of the Southeastern group.

Southeastern Teams Hold Big Edge.

During the season just closed there were twenty games which, if the conference had been split as now, would have been interconference games. The Southeastern teams won twelve, lost six and tied two.

In most of the games, the clubs from the Carolinas-Virginia-Maryland group, which is now the Southern Conference, were badly outclassed. Altogether the Southeastern-ers scored 332 points to 175 for their opponents.

Virginia Poly turned in the best record against the Far South, the Blacksburg Gobblers played three games with members of the new group, beating Georgia and Kentucky and closing to Alabama. They scored 20 points against 15 for their opponents.

As its part in upholding the gridiron game in this section, South Carolina tied Auburn, ruining an otherwise perfect season for the Plainsmen.

Duke lost to Auburn and Tennessee of the Southeastern, but whipped Kentucky. North Carolina played five teams of the new conference, losing three, winning one and tying one.

Tarheels Outscored, 121 to 52.

The Tarheels lost to Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech, tied Georgia and licked Florida. They were outscored, 121 to 52.

Kentucky's Wildcats broke even in four games with teams from this end of the conference, losing to V. P. I. and Duke, but whipping Washington and Lee and V. M. I.

N. C. State confined its activities almost entirely to its home sector, but won its lone game with a Southeastern team, beating Florida.

Mount St. Mary's Lists 17 Basket Ball Games

Special to The Washington Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Dec. 10.—The Mount St. Mary's College basket ball schedule, comprising seventeen games, eight on the home court and nine away, was announced here today by J. Earl Bender, graduate manager of athletics. The Mountaineer quintet will appear once in Washington playing the Georgetown University combination on February 8. Columbus University, of Washington, will open the season here on next Friday night, the only game listed before the Christmas recess.

The schedule:

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

WITH three or more games scheduled every day from Tuesday until Friday, inclusive, there will be plenty of basket ball among the high school teams this week. All of the public high schools, with the lone exception of Tech, inaugurated their campaigns during the past week. The Maroon and Gray is down for two engagements.

The first of the fifteen games listed for the week brings St. John's to Eastern Tuesday, where it opens its season. Central's high-powered aggregation hits the highway for Baltimore and a game with Mount St. Joseph's, and Roosevelt clashes with Emerson at the Boys' Club.

Tech gets its first taste of competition and the new rules Wednesday, entertaining Mount Rainier in its spacious gym.

Incidentally, three freshman teams of schools located hereabouts open their seasons this week. The C. U. yearlings encounter Roosevelt Tuesday, the second tilt of the day for the Teddy Bears, and Western matches wares with George Washington's cubs the same afternoon.

Western is down for a tussle with American U.'s frosh five Thursday.

Coaches Driving Squads.

Departing from the usual custom of permitting their players to take things easy in the preseries games, all of the high school coaches are driving the teams, intent on getting off to a flying start.

Despite the fact that he is blessed with a veteran combination, augmented by the addition of three good players from Roosevelt, Bert Coggins is working Central as hard as the rest of them. Central has a flashy combination in Keyser, Burke, Tipton, Gregorio, Nau, and Moulton, but aside from these the team is only mediocre. The Blue is a heavy favorite to win the title.

Carroll Shore, of whom much was expected in the impending series, will be out for the season because of an injury to his knee, suffered in football. Shore was a star and captain-elect of the team at Roosevelt before transferring to the Mount Pleasant School.

Eastern, defending champion, figures to have the best chance among the remaining contenders, of stopping Central. Coach Mike Kelly's players are a trifle smaller than those of Central, but are smart floormen and should develop into a smooth-working team. Waters and Bayliss are the only regulars back from last season. Eastern lost Lieb, giant center, Shirley, Kane and Zola, or about 90 per cent of its scoring punch.

Belmont, Spa Stake Entry Lists Smaller

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Entries for the important summer and fall stakes at Belmont Park and Saratoga, the East's two main race tracks, made public today by the Westchester and Saratoga Associations, show a sharp decrease from 1932 both in number of entries and nominators.

For the seventeen stakes at Belmont Park in 1933 and 1934, entries for which closed December 5, only 2,015 horses were nominated by 124 owners as against 2,757 horses last year by 155 owners. For the nine 1933-1934 stakes at Saratoga 97 owners nominated 1,324 horses as contrasted with 1,873 horses nominated from 123 stables in 1932.

C. V. Whitney headed the list of nominators at Belmont Park with 136, closely followed by Willis Sharpe Kilmer with 131 and W. R. Coe with 129. Kilmer nominated the most horses for the Saratoga stakes, 73, Mrs. Whitney's Greentree Farm named 70 and C. V. Whitney, 65.

TITLE GAME POSTPONED.

St. Stephen's Preps' game with the Apaches for the championship of the 135-pound division of the Independent League, scheduled today, has been postponed because of the poor condition of the playing field. It will be played next week.

NAVY READY FOR COURT SEASON

Middies Open Wednesday Against William-Mary.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 10.—Culminating a week of intensive practice, the Naval Academy basket ball squad this afternoon staged its first brisk practice session, under playing conditions, in preparation for the opening game of the season next Wednesday with William and Mary College, of Virginia. The first string players won by a count of 38 to 20.

Head Coach Johnny Wilson said his charges are steadily hitting into good stride, although the squad will not be at full strength for a week or more, owing to the usual delay of some of the talent not getting down to the grind, as they have been resting following a hard football campaign. The gridders, who are among tossers, include Borries and Dorin, who are members of last year's Plebe quint; "Fid" Murray, captain-elect of the eleven, and Cameron. There is every prospect that the Tars will have their strongest five in a number of years.

The varsity line-up today with Rankin and Loughlin, forwards; Kastein, center; Capt. Bedell and Campbell, guards. Bedell, Loughlin and Kastein were members of last year's team, and Rankin and Campbell were first call substitutes. The second team was composed of Christie and Randolph, forwards; Mandelkorn and Batchelor, guards; Becker, center.

In addition to William and Mary, the Middies will have one more game before the Yule holidays, meeting Columbia next Saturday.

V. M. I. Matmen Face Ambitious Schedule

Lexington, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—V. M. I.'s ambitious wrestling team faces an equally ambitious schedule which will test the mettle of the six varsity grapplers and their understudies who are working out daily under the watchful eyes of Pete Hessmar.

Although well supplied with experienced matmen in the heavier events, Hessmar has been concerned no little by the absence of letter-winners in the lighter weights.

In the 115-pound class, the leading candidates are Harkness, Jones and Bane, with the first named having the edge, while Rugh and Buist are chief contenders for a starting place on the team in the 125-pound division. Orr, in the 135-pound division, is waging a merry battle with Early, a sophomore.

At this point, Hessmar's worries cease. He has Gene Venable and Stith, both experienced grapplers in the 145-pound class; Capt. Landis in the 155; Rucker in the 165, and both Dorrier and Meem in the 175.

While the varsity is being put through its paces, the freshman squad of 30 is being whipped into shape by Col. Heflin.

Varsity grapplers will start their season against the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on January 28. On February 4 they will meet the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, and will return to Lexington for a meeting with North Carolina State on February 11 in their only home stand.

Army and Temple will be met on February 18 and 20, respectively.

PECK TEAMS SEEK FOES.

Peck Memorial 100 and 115-pound quintets are on the lookout for games. They have a gym. Call Potomac 4270 after 6:30 o'clock.

COURT LISTS READY IN COUNTY

Hyattsville Girls and Boys Open Season This Week.

BOTH the boys and girls basket ball teams of Hyattsville High open their schedules this week. The boys will meet the Kendall School quint Friday night at 7 o'clock at Kendall Green and the girls also will play Friday, engaging the Takoma-Silver Spring High lassies in an afternoon game at Silver Spring.

The Hyattsville boys will start play without Blaine Calhoun, a regular, and two reserves, Jack Cain and Gaffney, all of whom have failed to make the scholastic grade.

The championship of the sophomore class in the intersection basket ball tourney at Hyattsville High will be decided Friday when Sections 24 and 21 face. Other tourney games this week follow: Tomorrow, sophomore, Section 22 vs. Section 23; Tuesday, junior, 33 vs. 31; Wednesday, senior, 41 vs. 44; Thursday, freshman, 15 vs. 16.

Two basket ball games will be played today and two Thursday night at the National Guard armory at Hyattsville.

In today's matches Company F meets the Alexandria Aces in the main attraction and the Shade Shop quint faces Adjutant General's Office in a preliminary. Play starts at 2 o'clock.

Lustine-Nicholson's strong team will face the Fairy Gold A. C. of Baltimore Thursday night, and in a preliminary Company F will take on a team to be scheduled. Challenges are being received by Lieut. Hugh McClay at Hyattsville 521-J, after 5:30 p. m.

Colonial Five Plays Saturday.

Richard's Colonials, which are setting a fast pace in the 145-pound class, with ten victories in as many starts, have booked a contest with Dixiana Barbecue next Saturday night on the Hyattsville High School court.

Mount Rainier High School boys basket ball team is booked for two games this week and its girls team faces one contest.

The boys will meet Tech High in the latter's gymnasium Wednesday afternoon and Friday will go to Silver Spring to engage the Takoma-Silver Spring High five. The quint opened its season with a 24-10 win over Kendall School last week.

In their game, which is their first of the campaign, the Mount Rainier girls will travel to Rockville Friday afternoon for an encounter with the Rockville High sextet.

Leading members of the girls' squad, coached by Miss Mabel Barnes of the school faculty, include Grace Click, Ina Fager, Dot Bauman and Edith Bless, forwards; Louise Crump and Marie Miller, centers; Jeanette Katz and Mabel Wynn, side-centers, and Evelyn Crisp, Edith McGregor, Marian Miller and Margaret Miller, guards.

SOUTH TRIUMPHS OVER NORTH, 7-6

yard gain in the first period. The second came on a 20-yard pass from Chase to Aultman just as the third period ended.

A pass from Whelan to Woods in the first period gave South one first down. Another pass, Murff to Woods, was good for 30 yards in the second quarter.

After their touchdown the Southern players started a spirited drive that was ended as the final whistle blew.

Duke, N. C. State Gridmen Dominate All-Star Squad

Each Eleven Furnishes Six in Group of 35 Picked by Scouts; Keenan, Wood, Woods, of Maryland, Named.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—An all-star squad of football players from the eight Southern Conference schools in Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland, picked by football scouts who observed the men closely from week to week, was announced here tonight by William H. Wranek, of the University of Virginia alumni news service.

Thirty-five players were named on the squad, the fourth time such a group has been selected. No effort was made to pick players for a first, second and third team, but the names of the various men were listed for their positions in alphabetical order.

The squad:

CENTERS—"Red" Roper, N. C. State; Bill Porterfield, V. P. I.; Lewis Reiss, Virginia.

GUARDS—Tom Boland, Washington and Lee; Gene Hite, V. P. I.; Ed Kostainsek, V. M. I.; John Stanko, N. C. State; Chris Thompkins, Virginia; "Pop" Werner, Duke.

TACKLES—Fred Crawford, Duke; Bill Grinus, V. P. I.; Bill Kaylor, V. M. I.; Ted Keenan, Maryland; "Buck" Poss, Virginia; Rudy Seitz, N. C. State.

ENDS—Bill Condon, Virginia; Bob Greason, N. C. State; Harry Rossiter, Duke; Al Seamon, V. P. I.; Erwin Walker, North Carolina; Bill Wood, Maryland.

QUARTER BACKS—Tommy Johnson, Virginia; Lowell Mason, Duke; Bill Smith, V. M. I.

HALF BACKS—Bill Croom, North Carolina; Bill Holtzlaw, V. P. I.; Nick Laney, Duke; Bob McAdams, N. C. State; Roy Mills, V. P. I.; Joe Sawyer, Washington and Lee; Frank Sippley, Virginia; Al Woods, Maryland.

FULL BACKS—Stuart Chandler, North Carolina; "Mope" Cuminsky, N. C. State; Artie Erahler, Duke.

HONORABLE MENTION: Centers—Underwood, North Carolina; Webb, Maryland. Guards—Barclay, North Carolina; Hilliard, V. M. I.; Mitchell, Maryland. Tackles—Burger, Virginia; Hodges, North Carolina; Morrow, W. and L. Ends—Hanley, W. and L.; McIntire, V. P. I.; Rogers, Duke; Urick, V. M. I.; Wager, Virginia. Backs—Edgar, Virginia; Groth, V. P. I.; Morgan, V. P. I.; Nelson, Maryland; Popleman, Maryland.

WOOD, M'HUGH, HUNTER, ESPINOSA SURVIVE ON COAST

Dutra Forced To Default By Illness

McHugh Wins by 16 Up; Diegel Bows to Craig Wood.

Former British Titleholder Eliminates Romie Espinosa.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Par-shattering golf today swept Johnny McHugh, of San Diego, Calif., and Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., into the semifinal round of the San Francisco national open match play tournament along with Al Espinosa, of Akron, Ohio, and Willie Hunter, of Los Angeles.

Both McHugh and Wood finished three strokes under par. McHugh ended his match on the twenty-first hole with a 16 and 15 victory over W. J. Schwartz of St. Louis, and Wood defeated Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente, 1930 tournament champion, on the thirty-second green, 5 and 4.

Al Espinosa, who scored a 70, 1 under par for eighteen holes, won his match from Mortie Dutra, of Long Beach, when the latter was ordered to bed by his physician. Dutra was stricken with influenza last night, but nevertheless played this morning and turned in a card of 72, to be 2 down to Espinosa at the end of the first eighteen. Hunter, former British amateur champion, defeated Romie Espinosa, of San Francisco, 4 and 2.

69's Provide Day's Thrills.

The thrill of the day was furnished by McHugh and Wood. Both turned in cards of 69, two under par for the first 18. The San Diego professional had four birdies on his morning round and went to lunch holding a 14-up lead over Schwartz. He won the last ten holes in a row. McHugh continued his sensational golf in the afternoon, winning the nineteenth hole with a birdie 4, going 15 up. He held his lead with a half on the twentieth and won on the twenty-first with a par 3 to Schwartz's 4. McHugh, so far, has been the surprise of the tournament. Yesterday he eliminated Olin Dutra, of Santa Monica, national Professional Golfers' Association champion, by a 3 and 2 count.

Wood matched McHugh's brilliant golf in defeating Diegel. He marked up four birdies on the first 18 holes and went into a commanding lead over Diegel by winning the seventh, eighth and ninth holes. He took the seventh with a par and the eighth and ninth with birdies. Diegel was unable to overcome the advantage. Wood scored two more birdies on the first 9 of the second round to win in easy fashion.

Terrys-Mercurys Delay Grid Meeting

Snow and the accompanying hail and rain last night led to the postponement of the Terry-Mercury game for the championship of southwest Washington, which was to have been played today at Seat Pleasant. The teams were willing, even eager, to battle it out as scheduled regardless of the bad weather conditions, but agreed on a postponement when a slim audience, and consequently small gate receipts, loomed. The game probably will be played next Sunday.

Mrs. Moody Beaten By Griffin in New York

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Playing her first tennis since her return from Europe, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody lost a two-set exhibition match to Elmer Griffin on the Heights Casino indoor courts today. The scores were 6—4, 6—4.

Mrs. Moody played well, but apparently did not "bear down" on her strokes.

The California star said she planned to remain in New York about a week longer, returning to San Francisco for the holidays.

Why Bring That Up? Ruth's Salary Answer

New Bern, N. C., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A huge and prolonged yawn was Babe Ruth's answer today to the well-laid plans of busy major league magnates to slash salaries next season.

"Ho, hum," said the king of the sluggers. "Now why bring that up?"

Right now the Babe, who is at Camp Bryann near here, on his annual hunting trip with Bud Fisher, the cartoonist, and other friends, is more interested in the arrival of Mrs. Ruth, due tomorrow for her first hunting lesson.

"I'm not worrying about my salary," he said as he stretched his enormous bulk before a big open fire and listened to the rain swish against the cabin windows. "I'll get enough to live on and when you can do that these days you're lucky, ain't you?"

Ruth expects Mrs. Ruth to forfeit several of his best shirt tails when she starts after deer next week. Down here, when hunters miss shots at bucks they are required to hang their shirt tails on the club house walls, along with other trophies of the hunt.

CADDIES MEET MEMBERS.

St. Louis (A.P.).—Westwood Country Club sponsors a Caddy Bogey Club to encourage good fellowship between members and caddies and to improve the quality of caddies' work. Annual prizes are awarded to the best caddies.

ASK POLICE PROTECTION.

Dallas, Tex. (A.P.).—Because of intense rivalry between followers of the two teams, the Dallas club asked police protection for its players in games of the Texas League play-off at Beaumont.

BEARS WIN RECRUIT.

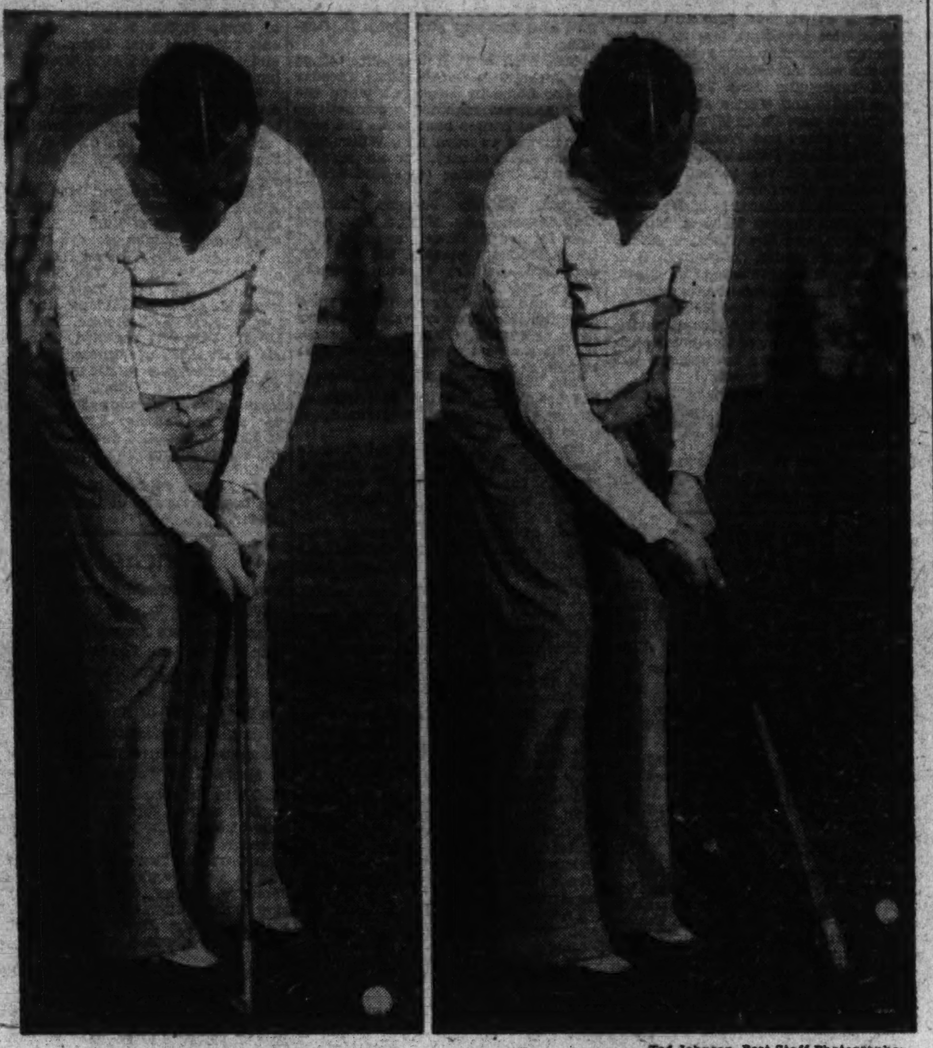
Berkeley, Cal. (A.P.).—Harry Cordes, who won a scholarship at Palo Alto High School as the athlete of outstanding character and performance, has signed up for freshman crew at the University of California.

HEAVY S. CAROLINA LINE.

South Carolina's football line this year averaged 200 pounds per man.

Chip Shot Valuable as Putt Saver

Al Price Illustrates Short Approach to Green, Stressing Condition of Turf As Important Factor.



Ted Johnson, Post Staff Photographer.

Mate Not to Campaign In England Until 1934

New York (A.P.).—A. C. Bostwick has changed his plans about sending Mate to England this winter, but he still has hopes of winning the Ascot Gold Cup with the son of Prince Pal in 1934.

Mate, an outstanding 3-year-old last year, but winner of only one race this year, will campaign during 1933 on American tracks. If he returns to form, Bostwick plans to ship him to England for the famous distance race in which Mrs. John Hertz's Reigh Count finished second in 1929.

ON THE SIDELINES

by BRIAN BELL

GLENN S. (POP) WARNER has turned his back on Far Western football and will move East to Temple when the flowers bloom again in Philadelphia.

The boys have been resigning Pop's job for him at intervals for years, but this is the first time the "old man" has asked Stanford to accept his resignation.

When all is said and done the veteran Warner, now in his sixties, knows a lot of football and certainly he has invented or developed as many plays as any living coach. His reverses and spinners are great stuff when the men can be found to work them.

It was said by some disrespectful critics this season that while it was true, Stanford's opponents much of the time did not know where the ball was to be found, neither did the Stanford players. But if this be true it was not Warner's fault. He told the boys how to run the plays and if they couldn't keep track of the ball there was nothing he could do about it.

If he has good material at Temple he will be heard from, for he will take his famous razzle dazzle system with him. Sure-handed players who do not fumble too much can go places with his plays.

It will be interesting, too, to see if the wise old coach, when he is interviewed at Philadelphia, says Ernie Nevers is the greatest player he ever coached.

Admirers of Jim Thorpe sat up and howled when Coach Warner made this observation in California. He tempered it later by saying Thorpe had more ability than any other football player, but he still placed Nevers ahead of the famous Indian.

Nevers, of course, was a great player and may become a great coach, but the Thorpe supporters will not admit any football player can be rated ahead of Jim.

UNHAND THEM RULES!

Just when football fans thought the game had been tinkered beyond further change, suggestions are made that a pass receiver not be permitted to run after successfully catching the ball. And other recommendations may be made to the committee between seasons.

Probably the code will be left alone for a time, at least, and certainly it is hard on the customers to make them learn a new set of rules just as they are growing accustomed to the old. In fact, many of the rank and file of the spectators have not yet made themselves letter perfect on the 1932 rules.

WELL, MAYBE ONE MORE.

One suggestion that has been brought up before and may come up again is that the ball be left in the position occupied at the close of the second period, just as is done at the completion of the first period. It does seem that there is little excuse for starting the game all over again at the beginning of the second half.

But if the advice of the man in the street and in the stands should be sought, it's a safe bet he will ask that the rules be left alone, dead ball and all.

By AL PRICE
(Rock Creek Golf Pro),
As Told to Dave Herman, Post Staff Golf Writer.

THE chip shot is chiefly a putt saver, and comes to the rescue of a player who is off color in driving and fails to land on the green with his next shot. By chipping dead to the hole after being short of the green or over, you are able to get down in par figures.

A chip shot is mostly arm and wrist action, but most of the action is propelled from the left wrist. With the feet close together, the stance should be slightly open, meaning that the left foot should be slightly back of the right. Stand well over the ball; with both hands close to the body, and play with the ball in about the center of the feet.

I employ the Vardon overlapping grip, and grasp the club slightly short. Remember to grip firmly with the thumb and first finger of the right hand. The distribution of the weight depends entirely on the player's own individual stance.

Keep your eyes fastened on the ball and head well down.

No Pivot in Stroke.

There is no pivot, but the left knee breaks slightly toward the right knee in bringing the club back. The back swing depends entirely on the distance of the shot. The one-fourth stroke I use for a chip of about 20 yards short of the green; for a shot of 40 yards I recommend a little over half a stroke. However, a short swing is all that is needed for the chip shot. Grip the club firmly with the left hand, which guides the stroke, and also maintain a firm grip with the thumb and forefinger of the left hand. Don't forget that the hands should be kept in line with the club.

Hit down into the ball, as shown in the picture. The shot should be made rather cleanly and smoothly. There should be no shift in the weight at the moment of contact. As the club goes through, the knee movement is just the opposite of the back swing. Avoid hurrying the shot, and keep the clubhead low along the ground.

Condition of Turf Important.

The selection of the club for a chip shot, which depends entirely on the lay of the land, is all important. It is also necessary to observe the condition of the turf and putting surface before executing the shot. A soggy course means little roll; a hard course means going a long way. If the approach is level, I would suggest a spade mashie. If it is elevated, I would use a mashie niblick, because there is a loft required. I consider a No. 4 iron a very good club to play a chip shot from 3 or 4 feet off the edge of the green. The pitcher is another club that can be used for the chips. The player should not expect as much run with the mashie niblick shot as with the spade.

OXFORD BEATS CAMBRIDGE.

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Oxford today defeated Cambridge in the annual intervarsity cross-country race, finishing all five of its men for a perfect score of 15 before a single Cantab runner crossed the finish line. Two Oxford runners, Lovelock, of New Zealand, and O. J. Mabey finished the 7½-mile course in a dead heat for first place in 42 minutes 38 seconds.

SHOLL'S TO PLAY GRIFFS.

Keen rivals last season, Sholl's and Griffith's will renew their court rivalry Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock at Central High School. The pair clashed twice last season, Sholl's winning the first game by a small margin with Griffith's taking the second after two extra periods of play.

Giant Wolverine Squad Practicing for Season

Ann Arbor, Mich. (A.P.).—A team of giants may take the floor for the University of Michigan when the basket ball season opens here this winter.

Fourteen men each 6 feet tall or more, are listed in the tryouts, according to Coach Franklin Cappon. The tallest man is Jim Garner, who stands 6 feet 6 inches.

YALE BEATS ALUMNI.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 10 (U.P.). Yale University's basket ball five scored an easy 38-to-16 victory over the Alumni today.

GLEN ECHO BOOKINGS.

Glen Echo Cards have the use of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School gym Monday and Thursday nights and would like to book games with strong unlimited teams. United Grays are especially challenged. Call Bradley 650 today, between 10 a. m. and 12 noon.

Brave Brothers

Referee Contest Between Their Own Teams.

Mooresville, N. C. (A.P.).—You have heard of brothers on the same football team or on opposing elevens, but how about brother referees sharing a job in the same game? And they the rival coaches, too!

C. Y. Hood is Mooresville coach. His brother, Tom Hood, is the Mount Ulla mentor. There's great rivalry between the two schools, and as time approached for their annual duel it was found that no arrangements had been made for a referee.

A desperate search failed to locate an official. So the brothers agreed to take turns refereeing.

The game ended in a scoreless tie.

And everybody was satisfied—at least with the officials.

Cling to Soccer

Illinois Kicker Forced to Pay Own Expenses.

Champaign, Ill. (A.P.).—They've tried to make the University of Illinois soccer team quit this year, but the boys refused to do so. They like to play too well.

At the ouset of the season, Coach Hartley D. Price and his squad were told, "Sorry, there's no money available, so you'll have to give up soccer."

But Price and his kickers came back before the athetic board with this:

"Let us continue soccer. We'll pay all our own expenses!" So the board consented.

For transportation, the players borrow cars from friends, split up the cost of gasoline and patronized one-arm restaurants for meals.

With three games to go this season the team has piled up a record of 21 victories, 4 ties and 3 losses in six years.

ALEXANDRIA GRIDMEN BUSY

Hopkins, All-Americans to Meet in Feature Game.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 10.—Hopkins Storemen gridders will play their final football game here Sunday when they meet with the All-Americans on Haydon's Field at 2:30 o'clock.

Ray Smythe, former New York Giant professional football team adviser, is coach of the All-Americans and has selected his players from three teams, Seaman Gunners, Meridans, and Engine Company No. 5. The latter's back field will be used in the second period.

The Virginia A. C. will play the N. E. Trojans at 1:30 o'clock at Baggett's. This is one of the feature games for the locals.

Scholastics Tackle Pirates.

Bill Hammond, manager of the Pirates, has scheduled the Scholastics for a battle Sunday on Guckert's Field at 2:30 o'clock.

Johnny Pierpoint, former star basket ball player with the Celtics and Old Dominion Boat Club quints, has signed to manage and coach the St. Rita's five this season.

Tomorrow the Saints will travel to Fort Humphreys for their inaugural game with a company team. Players are requested to meet at the church hall at 12:30 o'clock.

Herbert Bryant, former University of Virginia star athlete, has been signed to coach the Alexandria Fraters basket ball quint this season.

The first drill for the Fraters will be held next week. Les McMenamin, Sonny Genamer, Gunny Davis and other well-known local players have signed to play.

Va. Frosh-Staunton Cancel Due to Snow

University, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The scheduled basket ball game between the University of Virginia Freshmen and the Staunton teams was called off tonight when the Collegians notified university authorities that today's snowfall made crossing the mountains by automobile hazandous.

Scores, Blocked Kicks Win Hats From Kerr

Hamilton, N. Y., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Andy Kerr, Colgate coach, will swap a hat for a touchdown or a blocked kick any day.

Kerr has been giving new hats to his Colgate players who scored touchdowns or blocked kicks in major games. And he has announced that the same prizes will be offered to all members of the East squad, of which he is coach, who turn the feats in the Shriners Hospital Fund game with the West at San Francisco.

The Eastern players selected by Kerr will leave for the Pacific Coast next week, joining a squad of Middle Western athletes selected by Dick Hanley, Northwestern coach, at Evanston, Ill.

SWANN QUINTET BOOKING.

Games with strong unlimited teams are wanted by the Swann five. Call the manager at Adams 2901.

TOLEDO BUYS PITCHER.

Cleveland, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Indians today announced the sale of Pitcher Jim Moore, who was with Toledo in the American Association last year, to New Orleans in the Southern Association.

GRIDMEN HOLD REUNION.

John W. Heisman, coach of Georgia Tech's "Golden Tornado" in 1927, held a reunion of members of that year's team at Atlanta.

"3-P" SYSTEM SUCCESS AT MICHIGAN

Team Kicked, Passed With Prayer for the "Breaks."

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (A.P.).—The "Three P" system of Coach Harry Kipke at the University of Michigan has a good chance of continuing there again next year, in the opinion of Quarter Back Harry Newman, whose game-winning forward passes helped capture the 1932 Big Ten football championship.

The "Three P" system—thus called because it was said the Wolverines kicked and passed, with a prayer for the "breaks," and made touchdowns where a "first downs" team might have expended its power in futile drives down the field—needs kickers and passers.

Michigan has them, says Newman, in Johnny Regeczi, who did the kicking this year, and in Jimmy Renner, of Youngstown, Ohio, who was out with injuries much of this season.

Regeczi, Renner Good Passers.

"Regeczi is as good a passer as I am," says Newman, "and Renner is a lot better than I am, only he hasn't been in any games."

The stocky-legged speed merchant thinks he is no great natural passer.

Although he was an all-city scholastic player at Detroit, he threw but two passes in all his life before he went to Michigan, and both were incomplete. His specialty was carrying the ball and catching passes in high school.

Benny Freidman, who made a name for himself at Michigan as a master of the aerial attack, took Newman in hand at a summer camp and taught him a lot of the secrets of the forward pass. Coaches polished off the rough spots. Practice did the rest.

The result—two touchdown passes accounted for victories over Northwestern and Ohio State. Newman became a "second Friedman."

Long Drills Paid Dividends.

The long practice sessions which Kipke devotes to punting and kicking also had their result. Newman won the Minnesota game with his field goal.

Returning punts is a part of the "Three P" system, also. Newman's chunky legs are deceiving. Coach Kipke once lined up his squad for a goal-to-goal race and Newman won it, outsprinting track men on the team.

These legs accounted for some of the long returns of kicks by Michigan, and made the Wolverines anxious to engage in punting duels.

Kicking and passing, Michigan has won or shared seven Big Ten championships in the last 11 years, and now has its first undefeated and united team since 1923, when Kipke was captain.

Cleveland Will Stand Pat With Present Line-Up

Cleveland, Ohio (A.P.).—Barring unforeseen opportunities to improve the club, the Cleveland Indians will stand pat on the 1932 line-up, Manager Billy Evans has let it be known.

Evans was well satisfied with his outfield last year. Odell Hale, third baseman, and Bill Knickerbocker, short stop, both bought from Toledo, may have an opportunity to break into the infield if Burnett, Cissel and Kamm do not perform as well as they wound up last season.

Although Evans would not turn down a good left-hand pitcher, should one be offered at a bargain, he is pretty well satisfied with his pitching staff as it is.

Least of all does Evans intend to dispose of Wesley Ferrell, despite the flareup last season, when the right-hander was suspended for ten days.

SPEAKING OF TENNIS

By BOB CONSIDINE

MOST European tennis critics (me and them is buddies from way back) in their lists of the greatest tennis players of all time invariably will place the sanctimonious chassis of Bill Tilden at the top, ahead of the glamorous Dohertys, of England, and the equally hallowed Cochet and Lacoste. A few of the more clever court commentators contend that Ellsworth Vines, on form, could have beaten any player of any age.

But on one point this international amity stops. Suzanne Lenglen was the best woman tennis player of all time, virtually all European critics have long since decided. The vivacious Frenchwoman, whose flashing thighs and bristling knees became as well known as the rings under the Prince of Wales' eyes, beat Helen Wills, 6-3, 8-6, way back in 1926, before she became Mrs. Moody. Suzanne peremptorily retired, and Helen kept improving from then until about 1929, and has yet to begin to slip, except that she probably no longer has such a grim determination to win. But that one meeting between the two was enough for the European tennis writers. They're convinced, although both the girls intimated that they were not at their best, Suzanne characteristically stating at the time that she had never played more poorly.

Helen Knots Count At Five All.

That 6-3, 8-6 match will be one of the few that are inscribed indelibly in the annals of tennis. Bitterly fighting before a mob of partisan French spectators, the girls threw everything they had into the battle on a blustery Riviera court. When Helen tied it at 5-5 in the second set, one bawling American struggled to his feet, and after hurling a few invitations to fight to most of the anti-Wills audience bellowed a $500 wager on Helen at even money—but had no takers.

The Boys Club, which has a commodious enough gymnasium at Third and C streets northwest, is thinking seriously about opening an indoor court.

It also looks like there will be no local indoor tennis team playing in the Baltimore Indoor League this year. Can there be a slump in the tennis depression?"

Cochet and Borotra were both ranked number one in the French ratings, reminiscent of the days of 1924 and 1925 when Lacoste, Cochet and Borotra were all given first place. D—— clever, these French.

Fred Perry broke his first place tie with Bunny Austin this year, according to rankings released last week, and now reposes on the top of the British heap. Austin is second, H. G. N. Lee, third; George P. Hughes, fourth; John Oliff, fifth; Herman F. David, sixth; Ed Avory, seventh; Ian Collins, eighth; Nigel Sharpe, ninth, and Charles R. D. Tuckey, tenth. They rank 12 in England, the remaining two being none other than our old polysyllable friend Kenneth Constantine Gander-Dower (the third), eleventh, and Frederick Hemingway Dodsworth Wilde, twelfth. Try and fit those last two in a No. 6 headline.

English Ranked Twelve.

Perry had a great year, beating Austin, Johnny Van Ryn, Wilmer Allison, Giogio de Stefani and Jiroh Satoh. Lee, holder of third position—a conservative baseliner who plays a great deal like Bill Seidel, for local instance—won some notable victories during the year, beating Lacoste, Borotra, Jack Crawford, Harry Hopman, Christian Boussus and Jacques Brugnon (the French amateur who, with Vinny Richards on this side of the Atlantic, popularized the Dunlap ball).

Betty Nuthall, most famous of the British women players, ranks fifth in her country, behind Mary Heeley, Dorothy Round, Mrs. Eileen Whittingstall, and Kathleen Stammers.

Funny thing, in commenting on the women's rankings, one staid old English paper said it was heartily in favor of the first two places, but could not understand how Mrs. Eileen Whittingstall (ranked third), could have been placed so low.

Mrs. Moody returned from Europe Wednesday and had nice things to say about lean and sallow King Gustave, Sweden's amazing old man of tennis. Helen played with the 75-year-old monarch on several occasions and reported that he could still stand four fast sets of mixed doubles without giving vent to one regal puff.

American Lawn Tennis catches an amusing slip by a St. Louis paper, which commented on the fact that "Austin appeared on a St. Louis court without his short tennis panties, but wearing his big sun hat." It neglected to add, of course, Mr. Austin wore some other kind of trousers.

DOWN the FAIRWAY

by DAVE HERMAN

THERE are several features that combine to make the past golf season one of the most successful in District history, but the showing made by the younger flock was particularly impressive, both in local and national competition.

Who can ever forget the glistening 72 scored by 14-year-old Billy Dettweiler when he qualified in the sectional trials for the national amateur at Chevy Chase in August, and also the 78 this fine young fellow registered in his first round in the championship event at Five Farms? His feat of qualifying at the same age that Bobby Jones did in his first big amateur fling at Merion was one of the high spots of the local season.

Then there was Johnny Brawner, young week-end golfer from Columbia who came spinning over the stretch at Five Farms for a sub par 84 to become the lone District player in a group of eight to qualify for match play. A thirty-footer for a birdie two on the thirty-fifth and a brilliant chip shot from off the green for a birdie three on the final hole enabled Brawner to tie for thirty-second position with Willie Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y. Johnny went out the next morning and won the play off. A few minutes later he tackled the Canadian champion, Ross Somerville, and put up a noble battle before losing to the man who won the amateur championship. Brawner did himself proud.

Roger Peacock's victory in the District championship at Chevy Chase was outstanding. Not only did he outstrip the field by ten strokes and snatch the crown from Harry Pitt, sterling Manor player, but his 299 total was the best in any District event since George Voigt blazed the trail in 1926.

A keen observer of golf is this Dick Hubbard, left-handed player from Indian Spring. Hubbard took up golf four years ago, and has made remarkable strides as a southpaw player.

Dick romps about the golf course in company with another southpaw star, Sam Rice, of the Washington Base ball Club, and the two compose a formidable left-hand combination. Whenever they team up, amateurs as well as the pros hereabouts, admit before they start that the match is no runaway. For instance, the other day Rice and Hubbard opposed Louis Fuchs and Volney Burnett, two able players from the simon-pure ranks, and the match ended in a deadlock. They played the second nine first and then hit the first nine. Going to the ninth (the eighteenth in the match), Fuchs chipped in his second from 75 yards for a deuce to even matters. So close was the match that no combination enjoyed over a one up lead at any hole. Fuchs shot a 73; Burnett a 76; Rice a 75 and Hubbard a 79.

Ordinarily the par 4 thirteenth would be an unlucky hole on any man's course, but not at Indian Spring for Dick Hubbard. He has rifled birdies five times in as many rounds during the past two weeks.

A familiar figure at Indian Spring these frosty days is Parker Nolan, long-hitting amateur. Recently Nolan shot a 72, one shy of equaling par. Here is a golfer who really packs a wallop in his driver—one of the longest tee shot artists in this section.

Indian Spring Slowed Up By Cold.

The cold weather has kept a lot of the veterans away from every-day activity at Indian Spring. There is Arthur Urban. Urban has not been playing steadily for several weeks. The fact remains that he is one of the best players at Indian Spring. Recall that he lost in the finals of the club championship to Dr. Larry Otell, but he put up a great fight. Urban was far off in his driving game that day, and when a golfer is not properly attuned to clout his tee shots he finds himself faced with a tremendous handicap.

An up and coming golfer who shoots at Indian Spring is Dick Kreuzburg, a young student at Georgetown University. A tall, robust fellow, he plays consistently in the low seventies. Kreuzburg says he gets more pleasure out of playing his woods, but he certainly possesses a splendid iron game. Long, accurate tee shots seem to be his forte.

Ralph Beach, pro at the Suburban Country Club, has trumpeted a meeting of all professionals in the Middle Atlantic section Monday at noon at the Maryland Country Club. Much business of importance is expected to come up. Plans for future tournaments will be discussed.

Luther Steward, jr., young golfer from Congressional, who from tee to green plays a most consistent game, paid Sandy Armour, popular pro, a real tribute the other afternoon during the course of a fanning bee in the locker room.

"There is one thing I must say about Sandy, and I'm sure other golfers have noticed it too," Steward declared, "he certainly exercises splendid judgment on the course. While every good golfer misses his shots now and then and makes little mistakes, I must say that Alex" (he means Sandy) "possesses as fine a judgment on his selection of clubs as the next pro in the country."

Steward knows whereof he speaks. He plays with Sandy constantly, and is a great admirer of the veteran Scot. A former club champion, Steward lost his title this year to Page Hufty, former North and South titleholder, after a close match.

After wading through 17 holes, for a pretty good score, and then going to pieces on the home hole, is a mighty disappointing thing to happen to any golfer. Well, such is often the case at the Manor Golf Club, where the affable Al Treder rules as master of the links.

Treder can point out hundreds of instances where golfers with high hopes of beating par or turning in the best scores of their life, come to grief on the eighteenth at Manor according to Al, the hardest hole on the layout.

A dogleg to the right, about 395 yards, the hole offers many obstacles that challenge the best sharpshooter. To the right is out-of-bounds; to the left woods. Even though one secures a good drive, the second shot is played on ground sloping away. There are times when golfers attempt short cuts to get on the green by playing from the right-hand side of the fairway, but traps that cut into the green make shots from that side very difficult. The golfer thus must carry the trap if he hopes to get on via the short route.

Treder points out that playing your second shot from the left-hand side adds greatly to the distance. Very few get on in two, the pro says.

Treder has taken particular notice of the stories the golfers tell as to the direction their second shots go and where they land. Also from his own experience—and he knows practically every blade of grass on the course—that the shots travel either to the right of the green or go over. So the second shots really demand a lot of attention on the eighteenth.

The green here is rather flat, but unusually tricky—and the putter may take a notion to misbehave.

Kenwood's First Hole Tough One.

Just as the eighteenth at Manor will cause headaches at the finish, so will the first at Kenwood give you something to think about at the start. The initial at Kenwood, 458 yards, is a truly tough starting hole, judging by what hundreds of golfers in the District and nationally known pros have said. When you get your par 4 on this hole it certainly is well earned.

Horton Smith's birdie 3 at the first on his last round at Kenwood was a feat. Two beautiful wooden shots—his brassie second hit the top of the hill and dribbled onto the green within 8 feet of the cup—turned the trick.

The weather is no handicap to the foursome of James North, Dr. F. J. Brochard, Ralph Koontz and I. T. Donahoe. No matter how cold it is, this quartet must play golf, and they do it almost daily at Manor. The same holds true for some of the feminine talent. By way of mentioning a few of the women golfers who brave the cold—and who say they will play throughout the winter—are Mrs. J. T. Paul, Mrs. E. C. Scott, Mrs. J. W. Kramer and Mrs. T. N. Beavers.

"You can't get distance in cold weather," Al Treder will tell you. And it's true.

Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, recently elected second vice president by the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association, has put away her clubs until next spring. Mrs. Meckley last played in the tournament at the National Women's course two months ago, winning medal honors.

Ever since last spring Mrs. Meckley has been suffering from a sprained back, and it is remarkable how well she has played in tournaments and matches this season. Recently she had her tonsils removed, and her physician has advised her to keep off the golf course until next spring.

"I love the game so much I just can't bear the thought of waiting that long to play," Mrs. Meckley said. "However, I hope my back will be well enough to permit me to play in the spring."

Mrs. Meckley Has Three Good Rounds.

Mrs. Meckley turned in three shining rounds this past summer at Indian Spring, having played as low as 77, a new feminine record for her home course. On two other occasions she stroked around in 78 and 79. Whenever a woman golfer negotiates this tough Donald Ross layout in such figures, she has done a real job.

Mrs. Meckley covered herself with glory in qualifying for the national women's golf championship at Peabody, Mass., in September. Shooting an 88, she became the first woman from the District to get by the medal round since the former Mary McCain qualified in the national event 24 years ago. Mrs. Meckley made the grade where none other than the defending champion, Helen Hicks, failed. True, she lost in her first round match, but when it is considered that she bowed to none other than Virginia Van Wie, who crushed Glenna Collett Vare in the finals, Mrs. Meckley's showing was most creditable.

The broken wrist that Billy Dettweiler sustained three weeks ago while watching the football team practice, is almost entirely healed, and the young Manor star's physician has promised him that he can do a bit of practice putting during the Christmas holidays.

Billy says that he will never attempt to pick up a football when in the role of spectator. He happened to be standing on the field during a warm-up drill of the Georgetown Prep juniors. The pigskin came over in his direction. Billy went to pick it up. Ten yards away one of the players came in on a dead run and collided with Dettweiler, causing the fracture to the wrist of his right hand. Last Wednesday the cast was removed.

During the winter Billy plays considerable golf and basket ball, but the accident will prevent him from participating actively in either sport until March 1. The three-month layoff from his favorite pastime, golf, however, is not particularly pleasing to the young Georgetown Prep athlete. He will not be 15 until February 28.

Dave Thomson, the wee Scot from Washington Golf and Country Club, doesn't worry if it rains or snows when he wants to practice up on his putting. Thomson has a one-hole course in his sporty golf shop. It is not unusual, however, to see anywhere from two to four golfers trying their luck over the rubber green after a round of golf.

Al Houghton, Kenwood's magician of the links, speaking over Station WOL Tuesday night, ranked Gene Sarazen, Denny Shute, Olin Dutra, Ed Dudley and Walter Hagen in the order named as the five outstanding golfers of the 1932 season. Houghton also paid tribute to the brilliant showing made by Johnny Revolta, young Menominee, Mich., pro, who was beaten out by one stroke for first prize money in the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore championship at Coral Gables, Fla.

Incidentally, Houghton mentioned something about a $5,000 tournament at Kenwood next June.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1932. — S

MEMBERS OF DIPLOMATIC CORPS IN CHARMING POSES WITH THEIR CHILDREN

Official Capital Society Active in Entertaining

President and Mrs. Hoover Give First State Dinner; Diplomatic Reception Next Thursday; Viscount and Viscountess Astor Are Lionized.

THE past week has been a busy one for Capital society from the President and Mrs. Hoover on down the line. Last Thursday the Chief Executive and First Lady entertained at the first state dinner of the season in honor of the members of the Cabinet and their wives. The other guests mostly were from out-of-town. The usual brilliance of a state dinner attended the function, but there was no musicale following, as frequently marks the conclusion of the evening.

On Thursday evening of this week the President and Mrs. Hoover will entertain at the second state reception, this time in honor of the Diplomatic Corps, the most brilliant of all White House receptions, when beautiful gowns, magnificent jewels, and governmental decorations abound.

Wednesday morning, society turned out en masse for the first of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musicales, at the Mayflower, and were rewarded with a splendid concert by Miss Hallie Stiles, soprano, of the Opera Comique of Paris, and the Chicago Opera Company, and Mr. Edward Johnson, tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera. Later the artists were entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Townsend, and that evening, the Minister of Canada and Mrs. William Duncan Herridge gave a dinner for Mr. Johnson, who is a Canadian by birth.

Viscount and Viscountess Astor, who have been in Washington for a week visiting Senator and Mrs. David Aiken Reed, have been feted every moment since their arrival. The dynamic, Virginia-born, feminine member of Parliament, has been unsparing in dispensing her charm and time at various club gatherings as well as at formal dinners and intimate teas.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson entertained at dinner for Lord and Lady Astor Friday evening, when the ranking guests were the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay. The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams entertained in their honor Monday evening and on Tuesday Senator and Mrs. Reed gave a dinner for them. Tuesday afternoon the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington gave a tea for Lady Astor, at which she made an impromptu and amusing address, pithy with wise and sounds psycology, and later she met the members of the National Women's Press Club. On Thursday Lady Astor, with her husband, attended the luncheon given for them by Senator and Mrs. Reed at the Capitol, where the distinguished visitors spent most of that day. Later they were entertained at tea by Lady Lindsay. The members of the Congressional Club had the privilege and honor of receiving Lady Astor as their guest of honor Friday afternoon at their first "at home" of the season, when she again charmed her listeners with an informal talk.

In spite of the nearness of the Christmas holidays, and the usual rush of that season, society is undaunted. Tomorrow night the Washington Bachelors Cotillon will hold its first ball of the season at the Mayflower. Miss Gladys Szechenyi, debutante daughter of the Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi, will lead the cotillon with Mr. Herbert Hengster.

On Monday afternoon the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Prieto will entertain at a large reception at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Cintas, who will Payne, Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, Mrs. Robert U. Patterson and Mrs. Adolphus Watson, promises to be an unusually brilliant affair.

There will be a floor show at midnight, put on by some of the young society girls and their escorts. Among the dances will be the highland fling, by Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler and Lieut. R. R. Waller, U. S. N.; a Viennese waltz, by Miss Louise Tittmann and Mr. Marshall Dickerson; an Irish jig, by Miss Fenella Castanedo and Mr. John F. Cremen, jr.; a vocal solo, by Miss Jean Peeples; a sketch, "In a Dime-a-Dance Hall," by Mr. Creed Cardwell; a tap dance, by Miss Ethel Mae Taylor, and a tango, by Miss Helene Fortescue and Mr. Homer Tatum.

Mrs. A. Roniger Pierson entertained at a luncheon at Wardman Park on Thursday for eight guests.

Hoover Holiday Trip to Florida Would Dim New Year Gayeties

The probability that the President and Mrs. Hoover will go to Florida immediately after Christmas for a short holiday will mean the omitting of several of the most charming of the White House parties.

For Christmas has always been a season in which they divorced themselves as much as possible from their official roles to join with their family and friends in informal entertainments.

Besides the numerous small dinners and luncheons at the White House, there has always been a holiday dance for Mr. Allan Hoover, younger son of the Chief Executive and First Lady, and the children's party for their grandchildren, Peggy Anne, Peter and Joan Hoover, young family of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, jr., who have formerly made the trip from their home in California to be at the White House on Christmas Day.

The pending trip South will also mean the canceling of the New Year's Day reception, when the President and Mrs. Hoover receive the Diplomatic Corps and officials, and later in the day the public.

The custom has always been for the members of the corps, in full uniform, to pay their respects to the President on that morning, and later to proceed to the home of the Secretary of State, where they were either received at a reception, or invited to an informal breakfast. All other members of the Cabinet as well as the Supreme Court receive that day the members of their respective branches of the Government. Since the days of Secretary of State Philander Knox, when the Diplomatic Corps, former United States representatives in foreign countries, and members of the personnel of the State Department had grown to larger proportions, the New Year's Day breakfast has been held in the Pan American Union. That place was chosen because the Secretary of State is president of the governing board of the Pan American Union.

So now, that brilliant assemblage will not be held, if the President departs on his anticipated vacation. Instead, Mr. and Mrs. Stimson will see fit to receive the members of the Diplomatic Corps, who will be invited to an afternoon reception at Woodley, just as the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy and other Cabinet officers will receive the members of their divisions at their homes.

During the war, Mr. William Jennings Bryan, then Secretary of State, and Mr. Robert Lansing, later Secretary of State, received the diplomats at their homes rather than at the more formal function in the Pan American Union.

Miss Harris to Make Her Bow Today

Debutante to Wear Gown of 15th Century Florentine Period at Party.

Mrs. Russell Bennett will entertain at a reception this afternoon at her home, 2340 Massachusetts avenue, from 5 until 7 o'clock, when she will present her daughter, Miss Florence Harris, to society. Miss Harris is the daughter of Rear Admiral Frederick R. Harris, U. S. N.

The debutante will wear a gown of the fifteenth century Florentine period, fashioned of heavy white satin embroidered with a design of pale gold threads. The gown is cut on bias lines with a graceful train, and is made with long-fitted sleeves with three puffs at the shoulder, separated with bands of pearls. The square decolletage is also edged with pearls. She will carry a sheaf of calla lilies, tied with Della Robia blue ribbons.

Mrs. Bennett will wear a gown of deep sapphire-blue velvet fashioned on fitted lines with a long train. The full shoulder cape, lined with chiffon-lame in a pompadour pattern of old blue and faded rose, is edged with a wide band of blue fox.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Senora de Prieto, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy; Senora de Bello Codesido, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Victor Kauffmann, Countess Pumasoni-Biondi, Mrs. Henry H. Rousseau, Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney, Mrs. Edward Schultze, Mrs. Archibald F. Parsons, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. William Wheatley, Mrs. Henry C. Rowland, Mrs. Arthur Wallace Dunn, Mrs. Charles Trowbridge Tittman and Mrs. Blaine Mallan.

Assisting the debutante will be Miss Catherine DuBois, Miss Susan Rogers, Miss Diana Rowland, Miss Gladys Szechenyi, Miss Louise Tittman, Miss Ruth Tuckerman, Miss Priscilla Watson and Miss Helen Walker.

Reception to Introduce Two Sisters

Louise and Emma Tompkins Will Be Gowned Alike at Party Today.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hook Tompkins will entertain at a tea and reception this afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock, when they will present their daughters, Miss Louise Chappell Tompkins and Miss Emma Henry Tompkins, to society.

The two debutantes will be gowned alike in "heart of the lily" velvet gowns fashioned on Grecian lines, with short, full sleeves. They will carry shower bouquets of green and brown orchids and lilies of the valley.

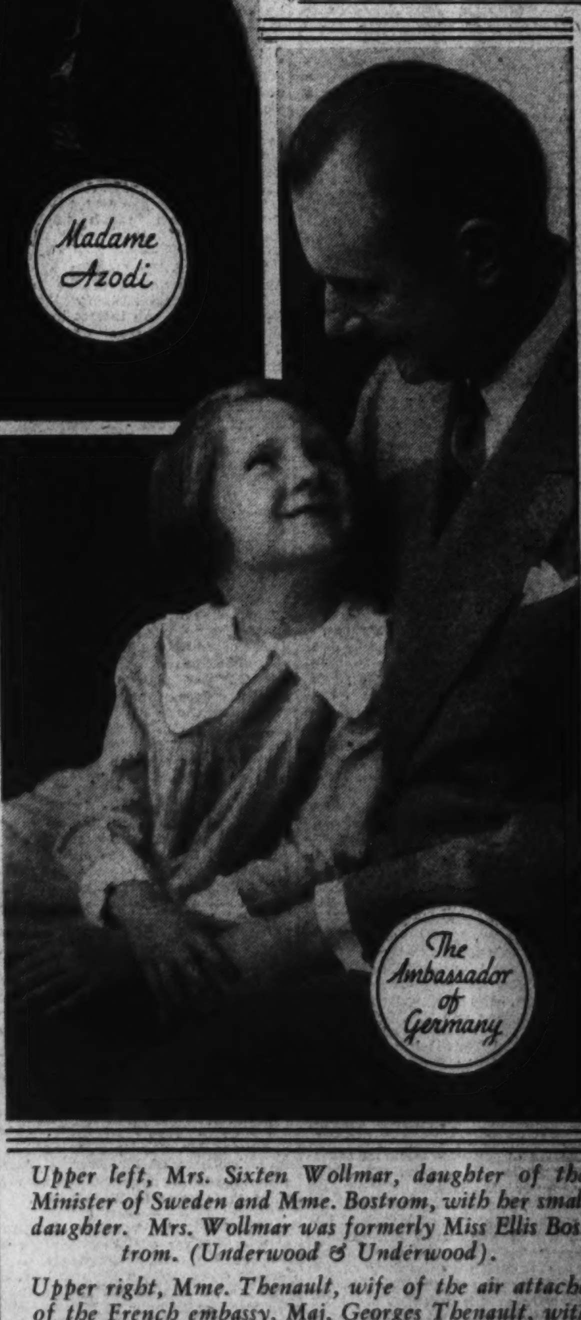
Assisting Mrs. Tompkins will be Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Brainard W. Parker, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. John W. Childress, Mrs. Mason Patrick, Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, Mrs. James Sherier, Mrs. Josiah Evans, jr., Mrs. Henry Gilbert, Mrs. James Slater Davidson, Mrs. William Tewksbury and Mrs. Francis Fair Gillan.

Assisting the debutantes will be Miss Julia Matheson, Miss Helen Tewksbury, Miss Jane Tewksbury, Miss Ethel Mae Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Sherier.

Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins will entertain at a buffet supper for the debutantes assisting, when there will be 50 guests.

Miss Elizabeth Sawtelle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, went to New York by airplane early last week, and spent the week-end in Newark, N. J. She was joined by her cousin, Miss Byrnina Clarke, of Ventnor, N. J., and will accompany her to Mexico City, on board the S. S. Orizabo. Miss Sawtelle expects to return to her home in Chevy Chase in time for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose will arrive in Washington tomorrow instead of today from Kansas City, Mo., and will reopen her apartment at the Mayflower for the season.



Upper left, Mrs. Sixten Wollmar, daughter of the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, with her small daughter. Mrs. Wollmar was formerly Miss Ellis Bostrom. (Underwood & Underwood).

Lower right, the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Friedrich W. Von Prittwitz und Gaffron, with his young daughter, Marisa. (Harris & Ewing).

Official Folk Start Formal Entertaining

leave shortly for Havana, where they will spend the Christmas holidays.

The Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, will entertain at dinner Tuesday evening in honor of the President and Mrs. Hoover. This dinner will be followed in close succession by dinners given by the members of the Cabinet in honor of the Chief Executive and First Lady.

The ladies of the Senate will hold their first luncheon on Tuesday at the Senate Office Building, when Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Speaker of the House and Vice President-elect, will be present.

The ladies of the Cabinet will hold their second official day at home on Wednesday and will not receive again until January 11.

Prof. Franco Bruno Averadi will be the guest of honor at the first formal meeting of the Italy-America Society on Friday evening at the Mayflower, when his subject will be "Famous Women of the Italian Renaissance."

The Air Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Sbernadori, popular young members of the Diplomatis Corps, have returned to their home on Wyoming avenue after an extensive tour of the country, when the former visited various air stations. During their trip they visited at North Island, the naval air base near San Diego, Calif., when they were the guests of Commander and Mrs. John Howard Hoover. Commander Hoover is in command of the post, and both he and Mrs. Hoover are well known in Washington, where their marriage took place some time ago. Mrs. Hoover is the daughter of Mrs. George Richard Smith and a sister of Miss Lucille Claire Smith, of Washington, who recently returned from a visit in California.

The residence of Commander and Mrs. Hoover is one of the most lovely near San Diego. It is a large stucco bungalow, with the popular red tile roof of many southern California homes, and is surrounded by beautiful gardens fringed with orange, lemon and fig trees, which are in charming contrast to the colorful California pepper trees which form a border around the outer gardens.

Many Will Attend Symphony Concert

A warm welcome is assured the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in its first concert of the season in Washington Tuesday afternoon at Constitution Hall, when a charming program will be given under a newcomer as conductor, Issay Dobrowen. A notable list of boxholders as season subscribers promises a brilliant short season.

Mrs. Hoover will attend if her engagements permit. The list of boxholders are Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Mrs. Charles J. Rhoads, Mrs. Russell Magna, Mrs. Hoover, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mrs. Frederic A. Keep, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, the Countess Szechenyi, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Calderon Carlisle, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. William D. Mitchess, Mrs. W. W. Galbraith, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Miss Bell Gurnee, Mrs. Chester Bolton, Mr. William Phelps Eno, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. James S. Parker and Mrs. David A. Reed.

The Washington Professional Chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma, the Alpha Pi Chapter at George Washington University, and the Alpha Rho Chapter at the University of Maryland entertained at a banquet last evening at the Dodge Hotel, the occasion being the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the fraternity. Among the guests at the banquet were Dr. H. E. Curtis, national historian and former national officer; A. F. Seivers, H. P. Holman, R. S. McBride, L. F. Trostel and B. H. Nicollet. Addresses were made by Dr. Curtis, Mr. M. M. Haring, Alpha Rho, and Mrs. K. S. Markley, Alpha Pi.

Alpha Chi Sigma is a national chemical professional fraternity and was founded at the University of Wisconsin on December 11, 1902. The local banquet held last night was only one of a number held throughout the United States to mark this occasion. Yesterday a granite boulder and marker, bearing the names of the founders, was unveiled at the University of Wisconsin with appropriate ceremonies. The fraternity now has 49 collegiate chapters and 25 professional chapters in the United States.

THE NEW Jelleff's
1216-1220 F STREET

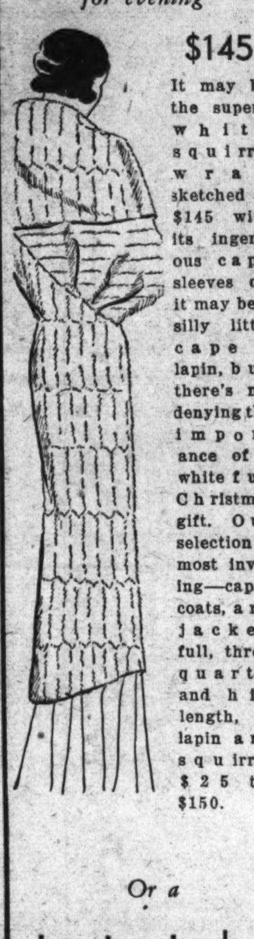
What could thrill her more than a

Gift of Fur at Christmas?

Why Not a

White Wrap

for evening



$145

It may be the superb white squirrel wrap sketched at $145 with its ingenious cape sleeves or it may be a silly little cape of lapin, but there's no denying the importance of a white fur Christmas gift. Our selection is most inviting—capes, coats, and jackets, full, three-quarter, and hip length, in lapin and squirrel, $25 to $150.

Or a

Lapin Jacket In Black or Brown

$29.50

A lapin jacket—with all its possibilities of making smart outfits—is an original gift idea, and most moderately priced at Jelleff's. See them in the new, slightly longer length that comes just below your hips. Some have the youthful modified johnny collar. In black and brown, $29.50.

FUR SALON, 3RD FLOOR

Or This

Natural Squirrel Coat

$145

Here's something that makes a really impressive gift, and yet, this year, at Jelleff's, may be had at a remarkable price! Fine Siberian natural squirrel, light in weight, and beautifully matched. Slightly fitted styles, with big pouch collars, and flared sleeves, $145.

Women's Unit Has Seminar Wednesday

Dinner Will Precede Opening of Conference on Social and Economic Work.

The opening of the seminar in social and economic planning to be sponsored by the education committee of the American Association of University Women will be preceded on Wednesday night by a dinner at 6:30 o'clock.

The honor guests will be the leaders in the seminar and will include Mr. Leifur Magnusson, who is chairman of the seminar and director, Washington Office, International Labor Organization; Dr. John Donaldson, George Washington University, author of "International Economic Relations;" Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, associate economist, Federal Farm Board and author of "Methods of Correlation Analyses;" Miss Katherine Ward Fisher, member of the Family Endowment Society; Dr. C. O. Hardy, Brookings Institution, author of "Forecasting Business Conditions;" Dr. D. O. Kinsman, American University, author of "Economics or the Science of Business;" Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, Brookings Institution, author of "Problems of Economic Planning;" Dr. Isador Lunin, Brookings Institution, author of "Miners' Wages and the Cost of Coal;" Dr. Martha MacLear, chairman of the education committee and vice president of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women; Dr. William F. Notz, Georgetown University, author of "Representative International Cartels, Combines and Trusts;" Miss Marie Obenaur, economic expert; Dr. John A. Ryan, director, department of social action, National Catholic Welfare Conference and author of "Distributive Justice;" Miss Ann Shoemaker, editor of Progressive Education; and Dr. Kathryn McHale, director of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. William John Cooper, president of the local branch, will preside at the dinner and introduce the speaker.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the seminar will follow, which is open to the public, with a discussion of "Wherefore Economic Planning."

Troubadour Show Given This Week

Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, Commissioner of the District of Columbia, heads the list of Washingtonians who are serving as sponsors of the annual Troubadour show, "Oh, Say, Can't You see?" which opens a four-night season at McKinley auditorium Wednesday at 8:30 o'clock, and with Mrs. Reichelderfer will be present at one of the presentations of the play.

Cowles, Mr. Walter C. Clephane, Mr. Robert Russ Kern, Mr. W. W. Stockberger and Mr. William T. Fryer are also included among the well-known residents of the Capital City who will attend the performances.

Miss Ruth Molyneaux, for the second year, will be the leading lady of the Troubadour show, and a group of talented co-eds at the university, including Miss Dorothy Heflebower, Miss Christine Spignul, Miss Ruth Warren, Miss Catherine Prichard, Miss Mary Phillips, Miss Jean Kirkwood, will be in charge of details connected with the matters of costume and dancing and what not. They are being assisted by Miss Cherie Seaman, Miss Ida Anderson, Miss Janet Young, Miss Virginia Hawkins, Miss Ruth McNary, Miss Marguerite Thomas, Miss Caroline Schreiner, Miss Jane Edwards and others.

Entre Nous Club Makes Comfort Bags for Soldiers.

The members of the Entre Nous Club, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president, met on Thursday in the home of Mrs. William Sault, on Sherman Circle, where the day was spent making comfort bags for the Walter Reed boys. At 1 p. m. a buffet luncheon was served by the hostess, with Mrs. Corwin assisting. The luncheon table was laid with a beautiful cloth and centered with a silver bowl of deep pink roses.

Mrs. Keyser served the salad and Mrs. James Underwood presided at the coffee urn. The beautiful crystal and silver pieces used in serving were made in Connecticut, the home State of Mrs. Sault.

The company included Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer, Mrs. Edward Dixon Hayes, Mrs. W. W. Badgley, Mrs. A. B. McManus, Mrs. O. H. Graves, Mrs. Ernest Hall, Mrs. Charles Dasher, Mrs. Otis J. Rodgers, Mrs. John Hansbury, Mrs. Miles Trowbridge, Mrs. James Underwood, Mrs. Orlando Smith, Mrs. William W. Scott, Mrs. L. P. Hendricks, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Corwin, Mrs. Sault and Mrs. Charles P Keyser.

Mrs. George Nordlinger and her small daughter, Joan, have returned from Baltimore, where they spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hecht.

Tomorrow evening a dinner will be given at the Congressional Country Club by the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Beta Sigma Omicron National Sorority in honor of the founding of the sorority on December 12, 1888, at the University of Missouri. Mrs. Robert Mason De Shazo will preside, and Mrs. Carl Giroux, Miss Veryl Schult and Miss Grace Sherman are in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. McKinley will be assisted by Mrs. James Murray, Miss Emilie Margaret White, Miss Catherine Hasseltine, Miss Maude Hudson, Miss Ruth Denham, Mrs. Margaret Gaddis Dutton, Miss Kathleen McClure, Miss Margaret McDonald, Miss Elizabeth Fuller, Miss Margaret Ayres, Mrs. Robert McFall.

Sorority to Dine on Founders' Day

The four chapters of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will observe Founders' Day, Thursday, with a dinner at the Woman's City Club. The celebration this year is a noteworthy one in Kappa annals as the dinner is also in honor of Miss Kathryn O'Laughlin, Delta Chapter, who was elected to the Seventy-third Congress representative from the Sixth District of Kansas. She is the first woman lawyer to achieve this honor.

Mrs. Edward Prentiss Costigan will be the principal speaker, and she will have as her subject the relief bill introduced in the last session of Congress by Senator Costigan.

The lists of guests include Senator Edward P. Costigan, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, Dean and Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, George Washington University Law School; Dean and Mrs. Johnson, National University Law School; Dean Grace Hays Riley and Maj. Riley, Washington College of Law.

Mrs. Helene Ducy Reed, Dean of Province 2, will preside. Miss Mary Russell Williams will sing, accompanied by Miss Gretchen Hood. Miss Julia Banks, dean of Eta Alumnae Chapter, is chairman of the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Claire Willitson, Miss Anna Boyle and the deans of the local student chapters.

Mrs. Rushmore Patterson has come from New York, where she has taken an apartment for the winter, to open her house on Massachusetts avenue for ten days, after which she will return to New York.

The junior group of the American Association of University Women of the Washington branch will hold a dinner-bridge on Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock for members of the junior group and their men friends.

Miss Edna Sheehy, a prominent soloist and a graduate of Boston Conservatory of Music, will be the honor guest. Miss Dorothy Field will be the hostess, assisted by Miss Marian Chapman and Miss Cynthia Crocker.

During the evening plans will be made for the organization of a glee club under the direction of Miss Sheehy and sponsored by Mrs. Martin A. Morrison of the program committee.

New Yorkers To Stage Ball Friday Night

Members of the New York congressional delegation will be guests of honor at the Christmas reception and dance of the New York State Society next Friday night in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. An opportunity will thus be afforded the members of the society to meet four new members in Congress from New York. These are Representative John J. Delaney, Representative Stephen A. Rudd, Representative Charles D. Dillard and Representative Walter G. Andrews.

It is anticipated that the society may have the privilege of listening to short addresses by Representative Bertrand H. Snell and Representative Christopher D. Sullivan.

The president of the society, Mr. William R. Vallance, will receive the guests, assisted by the following board members: Dr. W. J. Davis, Dr. Lamar Harris, Mr. William A. Carr, Miss Helen Brown, Mr. Grant R. Denniston, Mrs. C. F. Hammerly, Mr. James E. Black, Miss Margaret Harrison and Mr. Maurice E. Sands. Mr. Howard S. LeRoy is in charge of the entertainment.

One of Washington's most popular orchestras has been engaged to furnish music for the dancing from 9 to 12 p. m. A novelty feature of the evening will be the distribution to all those in attendance of very unusual and appropriate Christmas favors. These have already been obtained by Mr. C. F. Hammerly, chairman of the favor committee.

Due largely to the personal efforts of Mr. Maurice E. Sands, chairman of the membership committee, the society has started the season with a most encouraging enrollment. More than 100 New Yorkers have already responded to the call for members. The functions of the society have been largely attended and many interesting activities are being planned for the winter.

Members and their friends are cordially invited to attend this gala event and may secure guest or membership cards from the treasurer, Dr. W. J. Davis, 1404 H street northwest.

Society Planning Bridge Tournament

The All States Society will hold a bridge tournament during January to determine what State society has the champion auction bridge player. The winner will be presented a loving cup by a member of Congress to be announced at a later date. There will be awarded in addition fifteen other prizes for high scores.

The tournament will be strictly an amateur contest for the State championship of the District of Columbia. Bridge experts from many cities will be invited to attend and help arrange the contest. Mr. Elmer E. Field, president of the All States Society, is in charge of the affair.

Mr. Melvin Behrend entertained a party of friends at dinner last Sunday night at the Woodmont Country Club.

The Agnes Scott Club of Washington will meet for luncheon Saturday, in the Coffee Shop of the Willard Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kann have returned from an extended stay in Atlantic City and are at present at the Burlington Hotel.

A dinner was given last night at the Dodge Hotel in honor of Miss Eula B. Flynn, Miss Christina C. Wright and Mrs. Edith A. Barrett. Other guests in addition to the honorees were Miss Elizabeth E. Doerr, Miss Roberta Nichols, Miss Emma Jane McIntosh, Miss Ione Stanton, Miss Lucy A. Whitacre, Miss Jerry Robbins and Miss Edyth B. Holland.

Florida Resort Draws Big Colony of Washingtonians to Rest and Play.

Special to The Washington Post.

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 10.—After a motor trip from Washington, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Borassa are at the Pancoast Hotel to spend the winter. They have been coming here for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Webster, Washington, are spending their honeymoon at the Wofford Hotel, Miami Beach. They motored South a few days ago.

Maj. W. A. Pashley and Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Reck and small son, all of Washington, are spending the season at La Corona Apartments, Miami Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Warren and daughter, of Baltimore, are at the Hampton Court Apartments.

Baroness von Ascheberg, of Washington and New York, is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Masters, Baltimore, at their Miami Beach residence.

Prominent early season visitors to Miami Beach include Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chapin, Washington, who were guests at the Lincoln Hotel; Mr. George Ade, of Brook, Ind.; Mr. Thomas Taggart and Gov.-elect McNutt of Indiana, both of French Lick Springs.

Mr. Francis Whitten, Washington, was among the members of the exclusive Surf Club here for the informal opening Thursday, a month earlier than the usual opening date. The Committee of One Hundred dinner and the New Year's Eve ball will be the preliminary events of major social importance at the club this season. The dinner will be held on December 27 with Mr. P. T. Potts, Chicago, as host.

Col. and Mrs. J. W. McIntosh, of Washington and The Plains, Va., are occupying a winter home on North Meridian avenue, Miami Beach, after having concluded a visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Spurway on Jefferson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Darby, Washington, are among the early season arrivals at the Pancoast Hotel.

Dr. Joseph Spencer Kennard, New York, was speaker on Tuesday night before the Committee on One Hundred, addressing the group of wealthy winter residents on "Political Problems Under the Southern Cross." This was one of a series of talks on foreign countries being presented at weekly meetings of the organization. Dr. Kennard, who has been associated with the Government in economic work in the South Seas, is author of numerous books, the latest a history of the Italian theater.

Church Turkey Dinner to Be Held Thursday

The Sodality of St. Francis de Sales Church will give their annual turkey dinner, in the church auditorium, Twentieth street and Rhode Island avenue next Thursday, from 4:30 to 8:30 p. m. Proceeds will be devoted to church indebtedness.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR
ELECTROLYSIS
Hair Gone Forever
Before you use any depilatories, or the so-called devitalizing creams, read the article in Journal of A. M. A., vol. 96, No. 22, page 1868: "There was a loss of hair on the scalp, and hypertrichosis persisted on the upper lip and cheek." Some of these preparations are very dangerous and you should consult your physician before using them.
Superfluous hair and other facial blemishes permanently removed by our specialists, who have made a special study of hypertrichosis. We employ a method that is approved by the medical science.
Electrolysis and scalp treatments are supervised by our "Bacteriologists."

Dance Draws Large Crowd In Annapolis

Most of Society Folk Attend Party Given by Regiment of Midshipmen.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10.—Local society folk, or a great majority of them, passed the early part of this week resting from the round of functions given in Philadelphia last week-end, incident to the Army-Navy football game, but were out en masse tonight for the dance given by the regiment of midshipmen in Dahlgren Hall. And as usual, many out-of-town friends of the Middies, as well as officers and their families, were in the throng. The dance was the outstanding event of the week.

Midshipmen of the senior class will be hosts at a hop to be given next Saturday night, which will take the form of a yuletide dance, as all of the embryo naval officers will avail themselves of out-of-town leave for the holiday season that will begin on Friday of the following week. In the meantime, officers on duty at the station are preparing to do the honors at the annual New Year's Eve dance, at which the midshipmen until a few years ago were hosts, and that occasion will be marked by the usual interesting ceremony of ringing out the old and ringing in the new year, as midnight arrives.

Many of the social set last night attended the musical concert given in the great hall (McDowell Hall), St. John's College, by the Duchess de Richelieu, who has been visiting in Annapolis for some time. Many informal dinner parties preceded the concert. Mr. Harold Spencer, well known musician, was the piano accompanist for the duchess.

Mrs. Benson, widow of Rear Admiral William S. Benson, has closed her home in Washington, and will pass the winter with Miss Agnes Walton, 10 Francis street, Annapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bartlett Hayward are planning to close their country estate, Drawyah, on the Severn River, near Annapolis, within a few days, and will sail for Honolulu, where they will pass the remainder of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Marshall Jones, jr., gave a buffet supper Sunday night at their home on South River in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lawrence, of East Orange, N. J., and Lieut. and Mrs. H. Parke Needham, of Westwood, N J., brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Jones.

Lieut. and Mrs. Philip Welch, having completed a visit with Mrs. Welch's uncle, Mr Francis T. Marchand, in Annapolis, have gone to the West Coast

Mrs. Norris Entertains U. D. C. Chapter at Tea.

Mrs. Norris, wife of Prof. William B. Norris, entertained the members of William H. Murray Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at tea Friday afternoon at her home in Wardour, following the December meeting of the society, which was also held in her home.

Mrs. Reginald Hall, of Philadelphia, has been passing the last few weeks as the guest of Mrs. Herbert Stockwell, at Wardour.

Mrs. Dinger, wife of Capt. Henry C. Dinger, of the Navy, of Philadelphia, arrived here Thursday to pass some time with Mrs Carryl H. Bryan.

Mrs. Hamilton Gale and Mrs. Lemuel Stevens were hostesses at the meeting and social gathering of the Naval Academy Women's Club, held Monday. They were assisted by Mrs. H. B. Brumbaugh, Mrs. Chester Clement, Mrs. E. J. Davis, Mrs. W. A. Darden, Mrs. R. R. Gasser, Mrs. Eugene Mayer, Mrs. Ernest von Kleck, Mrs. Gordon D. Robinson, Mrs. W. K. Goodney and Mrs. J. B. Hefernan. Dr. Douglas H. Gordon, president of St. John's College, addressed the gathering.

Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph F. Dahlgren entertained Mrs. Mason P. Cusachs and her house guests, the Duchess de Richelieu and Mrs. J. Wilmer Riddle, of Philadelphia, mother of Mrs. Dahlgren, at dinner last night prior to the musical concert given by the duchess in the great hall at St. John's College.

Miss Bliss Schumann, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Roland W. Schumann, will give a tea tomorrow afternoon at the home of her parents, 49 Rodgers road, in honor of Miss Gertrude Faust, of Washington, who is her house guest over the week-end.

Allen-Stone Wedding Attendants Selected.

Miss Esther K. Stone, daughter of Commander Raymond Stone, retired, and Mrs. Stone, of Annapolis, whose marriage to Mr. duVal Allen, of New York and Litchfield, Conn., will take place next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Anne's Episcopal Church, has announced the attendants for the nuptials. Miss Elizabeth Gott, of Annapolis, will be maid of honor, and the other attendants will be Miss Adair Skipwith, Miss Isabella Hart, daughter of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy and Mrs. Thomas C. ATLANTIC COAST LINE HAS DE LUXE TRAINS

Florida Is Brought Hours Nearer by Service Commenced.

Good news for Washingtonians who tire of "taking to the tub" after November and crave bouyant surf or a quiet lake for bathing and water sports, and long for a few swings at a golf ball unhampered by Arctic woolens.

The Atlantic Coast Line has again reduced the travel time to all Florida.

The Miamian, beginning Thursday, will leave Washington at 3:20 p. m., reaching Jacksonville at 8:05 next morning and Miami at 4:30 p. m. One may leave Washington in midafternoon and play golf the following day at any resort between Savannah, Ga., and Miami—less than 23½ hours to Palm Beach and only 25 hours and 10 minutes to Miami.

Also For West Coast.

The Gulf Coast Limited performs identical services to central, south and west coast Florida, leaving Washington on first trip December 15 and reaching Orlando before lunch next day, Tampa at 2:45 p. m., St. Petersburg 3:35 p. m., Sarasota at 4:35 p. m., Sebring 2:55 p. m., and Fort Myers at 5 p. m. The trip through Florida is delightful—the Sarasota and south Florida cars passing through the St. Johns River Valley, via DeLand, Sanford, Winter Park and Orlando, a highly developed and beautiful section of the State. The St. Petersburg section runs via Gainesville, the university city; Ocala, near famous Silver Springs, and Leesburg, the fresh-water fishing capital of the South.

The Havana Special is continued in service with through sleeping cars for St. Petersburg, Tampa-Sarasota, Palm Beach, Miami and Key West, where shipside connection is made with the P. & O. S. S. for a marvelous daylight sail to Havana. Connection is also made at Miami with the Pan-American Airways for Havana, Nassau, West Indies, both coasts of South America, Mexico, Central America and Panama.

Miami in 24 Hours.

Then the world's first de luxe train begins its forty-sixth consecutive season January 3, with 7:45 p. m. departure from Washington and arrival at Miami just 24 hours later. Palm Beach and all other east coast resorts are reached at mid-day or early afternoon.

Augusta, Ga., and Charleston, S. C., are served by the Palmetto Limited with through sleeping cars leaving Washington at 7:50 p. m. and arriving next morning.

Brunswick, Ga., and famous Sea Island Beach nearby are served by all through trains to Nahunta, Ga., at convenient hours, thence by motor on paved roads to destination.

Announcement of special eighteen-day limit tickets sold daily to all Florida points at reduction of over 30 per cent from regular fares will be welcomed by the public. Also the shipment of automobiles in connection with passenger tickets remains in effect and cost is reduced 20 per cent—four tickets takes the car and two passengers.

Kiddies Golf Champions Established in Florida

Miami, Dec. 10.—The social whirl in Miami is developing into a veritable cyclone as the season progresses and smart women gather from all over the country to participate in the many attractions, both social and in sports, scheduled for the feminine contingent as part of the big winter program being presented by the Florida Year-Round Clubs, of which Henry L. Doherty, of New York, is president.

Among the events calculated to catch the feminine fancy are a Florida State kiddies golf championship at the Biltmore Country Club, a club invitation backgammon tournament and the finals in a eleven-city bridge tournament at the Miami Biltmore Hotel; the Grace Eames Doherty Christmas party for children at the Biltmore; a national Olympic stars aquatic meet; national horse and dog shows, a society circus and a host of golf events including the Miami Biltmore women's amateur golf championship tournament.

Ranking Tennis Stars Will Compete in Miami

Miami, Dec. 10.—If the old adage about the early worm still holds good, American amateur tennis stars should win the Davis Cup in a walk in 1933. At least, they are to have opportunity for a strenuous work-out here almost before the new year gets under way.

Arrangements have now been completed for the first annual Miami Biltmore All-South tennis championships, which will bring ranking American amateurs to the courts of the Miami Biltmore Country Club, January 23 to 29, in one of the first meets of the year. The meet is sanctioned by the Southern Lawn Tennis Association, and is an important part of the sports program, being sponsored by the Florida Year-Round Clubs, of which Henry L. Doherty is president. J. B. Maguire, tennis instructor at Vassar College and pro at the Westchester County Tennis Club in New York, is pro at the Miami Biltmore this year.

Miami Operating Auto Taxi Line

Aerial Service Established by Hotels to Year-Round Clubs.

Miami, Dec. 10.—Transportation in this resort is literally up in the air this season.

With opening of the Miami Biltmore Hotel on November 23, what probably is America's first hotel aerial taxi service went into operation. The aerial "taxi," provided by Henry L. Doherty, president of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, as part of an elaborate private transportation system, is a two-place autogyro which is now plying between the Miami Biltmore and Roney Plaza Hotels and the three units of the Year-Round Clubs. A six-passenger autogyro will go into service January 1.

Meantime, to solve completely the problems of resort transportation, the clubs are operating a Florida Year-Round Clubs special train between New York and Miami and a $100,000 fleet of aero cars or de luxe automobile trailers between hotels and clubs as a complement to the air service.

PROMENADE AT MIAMI BEACH SUN CLUB

The beach front promenade of the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun Club adjoining the Roney Plaza Hotel at Miami Beach. This section is preparing for one of its biggest years with a new three-point plan, and more than two score sports and society events are on the season program.

Orange Blossom Special Made Two Hours Faster

Seaboard Air Line Service Reveals Florida in Day Time, Affording View of Highland and Lake Region; Carolina and Georgia Resorts Open.

The Orange Blossom Special, only all-Pullman train to Florida this winter offering de luxe service, has been made almost two hours faster this winter.

Effective December 15, and continuing on daily schedule, the Orange Blossom Special will leave Washington at 3:10 p. m. and arrive in Miami the next afternoon at 5 o'clock, consuming 25 11-12 hours. It will be the fastest train ever operated to Tampa, arriving at that point the next day at 1:37 p. m. and at St. Petersburg at 3:35 p. m.

Officials of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, appreciating the fact that visitors to Florida desire to view the State in the daytime, scheduled this train, the leader of its fleet, to arrive at the border of the State in the morning. A daylight ride is thus afforded through the beautiful highland and lake region and arrive at Miami in time for dinner; Tampa in time for luncheon, and at St. Petersburg in the midafternoon.

The Orange Blossom Special is the only train—and the Seaboard the only railroad—operating over its own rails through to both East and West Coasts and central Florida points. Round-trip tickets may thus be purchased which permit visits to both coasts without additional charge or interchange with other lines. A circular route if desired.

The New York-Florida Limited, leaving Washington 11:59 p. m., with sleepers open in Washington for occupancy at 10 p. m., will continue in service. It serves all Florida resorts and cities, arriving at South Florida destinations early the second morning; it also serves Pinehurst with overnight service.

The Southern States special, leaving Washington at 2:20 p. m., will continue on its present schedule, serving the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Atlanta, Birmingham and the Southwest.

Pinehurst, N. C., is only 9 hours by train from Washington. It is located in the heart of the fragrant long-leaf pine country on the main line of the Seaboard Air Line Railway. Thousands of people stop over at this refined resort going to and from Florida. Pinehurst is essentially an outdoor resort because no one could stay indoors altogether in such glorious surroundings.

Camden, S. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Savannah, Ga. and Sea Island are now receiving a great influx of visitors. Stopovers are allowed at all of these resorts.

Visitors to Sea Island using the Seaboard Air Line Railway, should detrain at Thalmann, Ga., and use motor from that point. Automobiles are arranged for at time of ticket purchase.

A reduction in the form of a round-trip 18-day ticket is announced by the Seaboard Air Line Railway to all points in Florida; also in 23-day ticket to Havana. These tickets are now on sale daily, and save purchaser 25 per cent over the usual season ticket.

Reduction is also announced of 20 per cent in the handling of automobiles in fast train service. You can now ship your automobile to almost any place in the South for the cost of four tickets, which includes the passage of 2 persons.

Miami Planning Bridge Tourney

Finals in National Play to Be Held at Biltmore in January.

Miami, Dec. 10.—All roads may lead to Rome, but the most important bridge—speaking of cards—will lead to Miami this winter as a result of plans formulated by Shepard Barclay, of the noted bridge club bearing his name. Mr. Barclay has arranged bridge tournaments in eleven Northern cities, with finals to be played at the Miami Biltmore Hotel on January 16, 17 and 18, as part of the big winter program being presented by the Florida Year-Round Clubs, of which Henry L. Doherty, of New York, is president.

The eleven cities participating in the national tournament are New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Detroit and Miami.

The Miami Biltmore finals will be but one of the bridge features at that Florida resort during the winter season. Southern headquarters of the Shepard Barclay Bridge Club will be at the hotel, and local tourneys will be featured all winter. Even the Florida Year-Round Club special train running between New York and Miami on weekly schedule, will have a bridge instructor aboard, it was said.

1932 Beet Harvest Nearly Completed

Lovell, Wyo., (U.P.).—The 1932 beet harvest in the Lovell district was practically completed this week.

Approximately 90 per cent of the crop had been removed from the ground last week and only in small tracts scattered over the area were there any beets unharvested.

The yield was expected to average 15 tons an acre, the highest yield per acre in the history of the sugar beet industry in this section.

New Largo Anglers Club Plans National Contest

Miami, Dec. 10.—Tall fish tales are to be in season all winter long in Florida, where fish are often as large and colorful as the stories themselves. But when America's champion anglers gather at the Key Largo Anglers Club for a national fishing tournament, Monday to Sunday, under the auspices of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, trophies will be awarded on the size of the fish—not the tales.

The Year-Round Clubs, through their president, Henry L. Doherty, are presenting this event this year for the first time in recognition of the modern Waltonians, who year after year journey to the famous Key country, just south of here, to battle the elusive sailfish and others of Florida's prized game fish. The Key Largo Anglers Club, newest of Florida resorts, is a unit of the Florida Year-Round Clubs. The national anglers championship is part of the big program of sports and recreations being presented here this year by the Year-Round Clubs.

Tea at Gadsby's Tavern.

The American Legion Auxiliary of Alexandria Post, No. 24, will hold a service sale on Thursday next in historic Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m., with tea served from 3 to 5 in the afternoon.

Florida Clubs to Hold Horse and Dog Shows

Miami, Dec. 10.—Two brand new events are making their appearance on Florida's winter entertainment schedule this season for the first time. They are a national horse show, and a national dog show, under the auspices of the Miami Biltmore Kennel Club and the American Kennel Club. Both events, part of the big sports and society program of the new Florida Year-Around Clubs, will be held at the Miami Biltmore Country Club, a unit of the Year-Around organization.

More than 200 of America's finest show horses will appear in the saddle, hunter and jumper events in the horse show while more than 250 dogs of all breeds will be benched during the kennel club show. The horse show will be held February 16, 17 and 18, while the dog show will be an event of January 12, 13 and 14.

Minnesota Farms Are Valued at Two Billion

St. Paul, Minn. (U.P.).—A report of the Census Bureau today showed the total of farms in Minnesota as worth $2,125,093,278.

The average Minnesota farm, according to the report, was worth $11,471. Dairy farms comprise more than one-third of the farms of the State, according to the census bulletin.

Women Will Swim In Miami's Meet

Olympic Stars to Gather This Month in Biltmore Country Club.

Miami, Dec. 10.—The Olympic feud that raged among the women swimmers in California last summer, will be renewed again this winter in another sunny corner of the world, and for the benefit of all who like their swimming outside Jack Frost's bailiwick.

Georgia Coleman, Eleanor Holm, Lisa Lindstrom, Lenore Kight, Anna Mae Gorman, Joan McSheehy, Susan Robertson, Dorothea Dickinson, Helen Johns and other stars of the tank and spring board will gather here December 29, 30 and 31 in a National Olympic Stars Aquatic Meet at the Miami Biltmore Country Club, unit of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, of which Henry L. Doherty is president.

The big winter carnival to be held under the auspices of the Florida Year-Round Clubs and the Florida Association of the A. A. U. will constitute an important part of the Year-Round Clubs' sports program for Florida this season.

Left-Handed Golfers To Battle for Crown

Round of Gayeties Ready at Miami

Formal Opening of Roney Plaza Took Place Yesterday.

Special to The Washington Post.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 10.—Their attention divided between golf, water sports and bridge tournaments during the past week, members of the winter colony are anticipating the formal opening of the Roney Plaza Hotel today, and the beginning of a new round of gayeties. Edward B. Jouffret, ten years managing director of the Sevilla Biltmore in Havana, is again managing director at the Roney Plaza.

Coincident with the opening of the Roney Plaza, the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun Club, unit of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, of which Henry L. Doherty is president, will add new color to the widely varied resort calendar. While society planned a round of dinner, luncheon and cabana parties to mark the opening of the Roney Plaza, rod and reel enthusiasts made ready for opening of the National Anglers' Championship tomorrow at the Key Largo Anglers Club, another unit of the Year-Round Clubs.

Here to cast lines for prize winning denizens of Florida waters are a group of nationally known personalities, including Fontaine Fox, the cartoonist; John J. Floherty and John D. MacGregor, famous artists; Courtney Riley Cooper, noted animal story author; Donald Stillman, chronicler of rod and reel activities; Mrs. O. G. Grinnell, foremost woman deep sea angler in the country; James Derleux, Jack Eaton and Lynn Bogue Hunt, fish and animal artist. The anglers will be guests of Mr. Doherty at the Miami Biltmore Hotel during the contest, which will continue through December 18.

The Paradine Case

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, K. C., is asked by Sir Simon Flaquer, a noted English solicitor, to defend Mrs. Paradine, who has been arrested for the murder of her husband, who had been blinded in the war and had been decorated with the V. C. Sir Simon tells Keane that Mrs. Paradine is a beautiful Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degraduation in Copenhagen by an American diplomat, taken as a servant to America and later made her way to England. She'd married Maj. Paradine after the war. He agrees to handle the case and becomes immediately intensely interested in it.

Sir Malcolm is happily married to Gay, but when he calls on Mrs. Paradine at Holloway jail he feels the strange fascination of his beautiful client. He is worried because Lord Horfield might be named as judge of the trial and endeavors to be friendly to him. He and Gay give a little dinner party to which they ask Lord and Lady Horfield. After the party Sir Malcolm studies a photograph of William Marsh, Col Paradine's valet, and the idea occurs to him that the man who acted in so intimate a relation to his blind master might have had an opportunity to kill him. His plan of defense begins to take form in his mind.

"We know now which of the judges will try your case, Mrs. Paradine," he said.

"Who is it, please?"

"Lord Horfield."

Mrs. Paradine made no comment, sat still looking at Keane with her beautiful pale eyes.

"You know his name?"

"I've seen it now and then in the papers. But I don't know much about him. What sort of man is he, please?"

"He's a humorist and a cynic, a cynic with a lot of bitterness in him, I should think. I don't know whether he has a heart. He's got a first rate brain. He likes women, especially pretty women."

As he said the last words he looked at her but he didn't observe any change in her face, any quickening of interest, any sign of awakened coquetry.

"That should be a help to us," he said, as she said nothing. But there was little optimism in his voice. And then he added, yielding to his impulses:

"I would rather have had another judge for your case."

"Why?"

"There's something in Lord Horfield that I don't trust."

"But he will be there to do justice and you say he has a first-rate brain."

"Oh, his brain's all right."

"Isn't that the important thing?"

Keane leaned toward her then, as sometimes in passionate passages of a speech he leaned instinctively toward a jury, and, putting a finger to his forehead, said:

"I believe I have a pretty good brain, too. But d'you think in a big case, such as yours will be, only brain is needed for the obtaining of justice? There must be heart, too, the key which unlocks the door into humanity. And that's greater, and goes farther, than brain. But Lord Horfield doesn't think so."

Again the pessimistic tone had come into his voice.

"A judge like Lord Horfield doesn't encourage counsel to do his best, and I want to do my very best for you. I must do my very best and you must help me. We'll fight Lord Horfield together."

Directly he had said the last words he realized how extraordinary they must have sounded in her ears. Fighting a judge! She looked at him and her eyes were examining eyes. The blank look which sometimes made her face strange and unreadable was not in them then. She looked an extremely intelligent woman fully awakened and on the qui vive.

Was Mrs. Paradine, he wondered, the type of woman who would have a strong attraction for Horfield? Again he noticed, as so often before, the strange resemblance between her and his wife. Horfield admired Gay very much, too much. Keane hated his admiration for her, because he knew that it was mingled with an ugly and offensive desire. But it didn't fail to occur to the advocate's mind that the faint resemblance between Gay and Mrs. Paradine might be to Mrs. Paradine's advantage when the trial came on. That is if Horfield's keen eyes detected it.

Even now Keane wasn't sure where exactly it lay. For Gay and Mrs. Paradine were very unlike. Despite the marvelous fairness of Mrs. Paradine, who was much fairer than Gay, and who was slim like a wan, she was much less ethereal than Gay. Gay had often a far-away look in her eyes which reminded Keans of the sound of an echo, so like, yet so unlike the human voice which evokes it. Mrs. Paradine's eyes were never quite like that. There was a definiteness of this earth in them; they did not hint at remoteness, did not carry a man into the distances. Gay's expression charmed. It might even be said to purify. Mrs. Paradine's expression charmed, too, but not in the same way.

But there was a resemblance surely in the contours of the two faces, Gay's and Mrs. Paradine's, though Mrs. Paradine's was the larger, and the shapes of the heads, both beautifully formed, were alike, heads that were not foolishly flat behind, and that had brows in comparison with the round and small, yet not at all weak, chins.

"Why do you look at me in that way?" Mrs. Paradine said, startling Keane, who suddenly realized his carelessness.

Their eyes met then and he was moved to a perhaps greater carelessness.

"I was thinking that you and my wife somehow resemble each other."

"Do we?" she said.

And there seemed to him to be surprise, and something else, in her voice.

"In what way?" she added.

"I don't know exactly. But there is a resemblance, although you are very different from one another. You have something tremendously"—he sought for the right word—"tremendously definite in you that my wife hasn't got."

"I know. I am coarser in grain than she is."

"I didn't mean that!" he exclaimed, with heat.

"But isn't it so? I come from the people. I have been a servant. And I have the servant in me still."

She said it roughly, with a sort of exasperation. He felt passion behind the words. Gay could never speak at all like that. (He had a strange wish just then that she could.)

He got up abruptly. He wanted to stay, to hear more, to go into this matter and understand it more fully. His mind had suddenly gone to William Marsh, driven perhaps to him by her reiteration of the word "servant." He might have to go into this presently, later. But first he must see Sir Simon.

"I don't feel the servant in you," he said with great gentleness. "I feel only a woman whom I—admire, whom I intend to save."

He bent over the table by which they had been sitting.

"I'll save you!" he exclaimed fiercely. "I'll save you. But you must do as I tell you. Do you hear?"

She nodded, gazing up at him.

"If I can!" she murmured.

In Bewly place he had a difficult colloquy with Sir Simon, to whom he outlined the defense which his intense consideration of William Marsh had suggested to him. This theory of defense was an entirely new departure and came upon Sir Simon as a shock. Sir Simon's idea had been to dwell upon the absolute lack of any urgent motive for the murder of which Mrs. Paradine was accused. Mrs. Paradine had always shown admiration for, and great devotion to, her husband. There was no damning hint of a lover lurking in the background waiting for her release from bondage to a blind man. She had seemed a wholly devoted wife. A point which Sir Simon had often dwelt upon as telling in favor of the defense was the fact that Mrs. Paradine had only known Col. Paradine after he was blinded. It had not been a case of a woman who had loved a man when he was sound sticking to him in physical misfortune. If she had loved him—and it seemed that she had—she had loved him blind and only blind.

Sir Simon wished to present her not as a woman deliberately dedicating herself to self-sacrifice, having a sort of lust for it as many women undoubtedly have, but as an exceptional woman who had fallen in love not merely with a hero but with a hero's blindness. In this prosaic age—and he could be as prosaic as any one at times—he wished the defense to strike the romantic note.

"There's any amount of secret romance about," he said to Keane. "Even in a British jury. It's our business to tap it. We'll make them think that she loved his blindness, probably would never have fallen in love with him but for it. For—don't you see?—it secluded him, and she's a strongly possessive woman. She wanted some one to herself and she got a hero to herself. Self-sacrifice isn't enough for the efense. We'll go a step further. We'll make self-sacrifice joined up with self-interest, the self-interest which love can breed in a passionate woman. Then where the devil is there any motive for murder?"

"Then who is supposed to have committed the murder?"

Keane had put that question.

"Complete darkness, mystery. I've several times got off people accused of murder without ever fixing the crime on any one else. We can do it in this case, I believe, if we play our cards cleverly. If I could detect any one else as the criminal, of course I should use it for all it was worth. But the flat truth is that I can't."

Now Keane came with his suggestion that possibly William Marsh was the criminal.

"What's put that into your head?" said Sir Simon sharply. "Where do you find a scrap of evidence to back up that theory?"

"One minute, Sir Simon!" said Keane, in his most impressive manner. "What's been troubling me very much since I became interested professionally in this case has been the lack of backbone, the lack of spine in the defense we've been contemplating."

"Ah!"

"You've felt it, too, no doubt you must have felt it."

"Well, I should be very glad to get some stiffening into it, even if only some whalebone, if we could do it without casting about wildly, chasing the phantasmal. I like always to feel my feet on solid earth in any case I take up. Of course, long ago I considered this William Marsh very carefully. His position in the Paradine household obviously made it possible for him to murder Col. Paradine if he wished to. I didn't miss that. The veriest booby wouldn't have missed it. But, as I told you, seek as I would, I couldn't find a scrap of evidence against him, while everything I could find told against the notion you're putting forward now, at the eleventh hour, one might almost say, and in the man's favor. His devotion to his master is unquestioned, and, so far as I can see, unquestionable. Nobody connected with the two of them ever doubted it. Even Mrs. Paradine didn't doubt it, and doesn't doubt it now, in spite of Marsh's acute hostility to her. There's everything—everything dead against such a theory as you are putting to me. Oh, by the way, you didn't suggest it to Mrs. Paradine today, I hope, when you were with her?"

"Of course not. I shouldn't have dreamed of doing that before speaking to you about it."

"My dear fellow, I didn't suppose—you're always delightful to work with. But this damned case is rather upsetting, and as you say the defense does want stiffening. But I really can't see——"

"Has it never occurred to you that this William Marsh is a violently emotional man?"

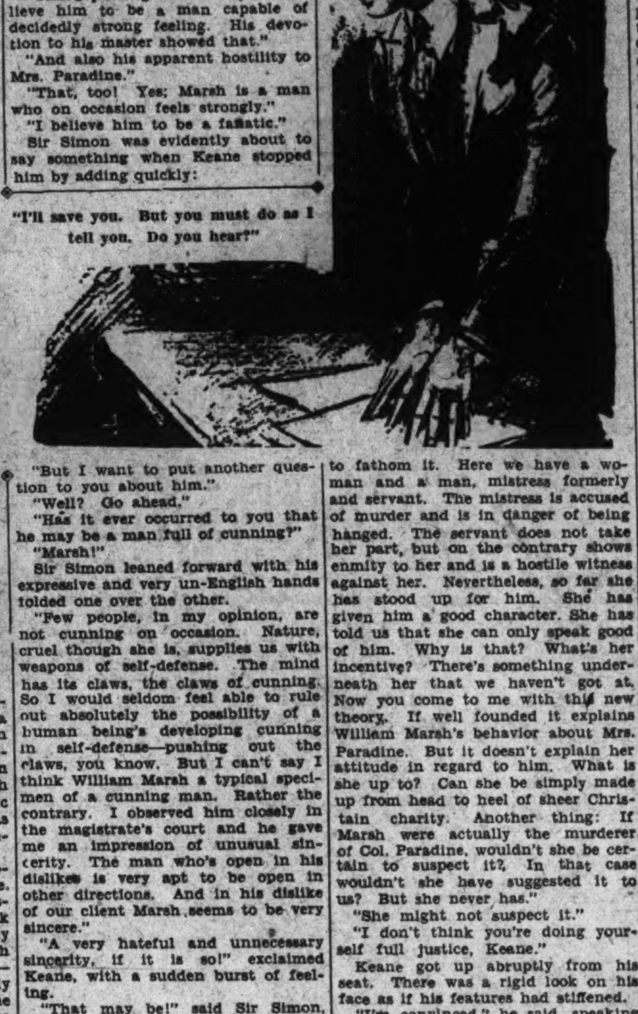
"That's putting it violently. I believe him to be a man capable of decidedly strong feeling. His devotion to his master showed that."

"And also his apparent hostility to Mrs. Paradine."

"That, too! Yes; Marsh is a man who on occasion feels strongly."

"I believe him to be a fanatic."

Sir Simon was evidently about to say something when Keane stopped him by adding quickly:



"I'll save you. But you must do as I tell you. Do you hear?"

"But I want to put another question to you about him."

"Well? Go ahead."

"Has it ever occurred to you that he may be a man full of cunning?"

"Marsh!"

Sir Simon leaned forward with his expressive and very un-English hands folded one over the other.

"Few people, in my opinion, are not cunning on occasion. Nature, cruel though she is, supplies us with weapons of self-defense. The mind has its claws, the claws of cunning. So I would seldom feel able to rule out absolutely the possibility of a human being's developing cunning in self-defense—pushing out the claws, you know. But I can't say I think William Marsh a typical specimen of a cunning man. Rather the contrary. I observed him closely in the magistrate's court and he gave me an impression of unusual sincerity. The man who's open in his dislikes is very apt to be open in other directions. And in his dislike of our client Marsh seems to be very sincere."

"A very hateful and unnecessary sincerity, if it is so!" exclaimed Keane, with a sudden burst of feeling.

"That may be!" said Sir Simon, quietly, and looking down at his hands. "But doesn't it rule out cunning? If——"

"It may be an assumption," interrupted Keane.

"That, of course, is possible. In fact, if there were anything in your theory of Marsh's guilt, dislike and suspicion of Mrs. Paradine would be the obvious line for him to take."

"Exactly! He would be trying to create prejudice against her in the minds of the jury in order to save his own skin."

"Well," said Sir Simon, with almost pugnacious definiteness, "I may be wrong, but I believe Marsh's dislike of our client is honest."

"I don't trust that fellow," said Keane. "I trust neither his appearance nor his manner."

"Mrs. Paradine speaks well of him."

"I know she does—to us. She has had as yet no occasion to speak of him before a judge and jury."

After a long pause, during which Sir Simon sat very still, apparently in profound thought, he looked up and said:

"What d'you think of Mrs. Paradine's attitude toward Marsh?"

"It's very difficult to comprehend," said Keane, morosely, staring before him.

"There's something between Mrs. Paradine and Marsh that I don't understand at all," said Sir Simon.

"Between them?" said Keane sharply.

"As I said. I have never been able to fathom it. Here we have a woman and a man, mistress formerly and servant. The mistress is accused of murder and is in danger of being hanged. The servant does not take her part, but on the contrary shows enmity to her and is a hostile witness against her. Nevertheless, so far she has stood up for him. She has given him a good character. She has told us that she can only speak good of him. Why is that? What's her incentive? There's something underneath her that we haven't got at. Now you come to me with this new theory. If well founded it explains William Marsh's behavior about Mrs. Paradine. But it doesn't explain her attitude in regard to him. What is she up to? Can she be simply made up from head to heel of sheer Christain charity. Another thing: If Marsh were actually the murderer of Col. Paradine, wouldn't she be certain to suspect it? In that case wouldn't she have suggested it to us? But she never has."

"She might not suspect it."

"I don't think you're doing yourself full justice, Keane."

Keane got up abruptly from his seat. There was a rigid look on his face as if his features had stiffened.

"I'm convinced," he said, speaking slowly, "that Mrs. Paradine had nothing to do with this murder. When you first briefed me, I confess I had my doubts, and they were very grave. But I have none now. It isn't so much a question with me of evidence or no evidence."

"No?" said Sir Simon from the table in a thin voice.

"No!" said Keane, on a deep heavy note. "Circumstances and psychology may often seem to be in opposition. When they are I'm inclined to distrust circumstances and trust to my flair—I think I have one—for getting to the truth of psychology. I've seen a good deal of Mrs. Paradine now. I've had a number of interviews with her. I've studied and observed her closely. And I've convinced myself that such a woman as she is couldn't have done what she's accused of. There is nothing criminal in her! One thing has specially struck me. I think it was the first thing that made me think she couldn't be the guilty woman."

School and College News

George Washington University.

The coming week will be an active one for George Washington University organizations, with major events scheduled in athletics, debate, dramatics, and other extra-curricular interests.

Members of the football squad will be honored at a banquet to be held at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the alumni and the university athletic department. More than 300 persons are expected to attend the banquet to show their appreciation of the achievement of this year's eleven which played the most difficult schedule in the history of intercollegiate football at the George Washington University with a record of six victories, one tie, and two defeats.

Speakers for the occasion will include a football coach of national prominence from outside of Washington as well as President Marvin, Coach Pixlee and other university officials. Election of next year's captain will take place at the banquet.

The George Washington University Troubadours will present their annual musical show at the McKinley High School auditorium on the evenings of December 14, 15, 16 and 17. The entire production, including book, music, costumes, and scenery, is the work of university students.

Friday night the annual international debate will take place under the auspices of the department of public speaking. The George Washington debators will meet a visiting team from Trinity College, Dublin. The question for debate is: "Resolved, That capitalism has broken down." The Irish team will uphold the affirmative. No decision will be rendered.

Catholic University.

Two prominent figures will appear before the university this coming week lecturing on St. Augustine and Philippine independence as a part of a series of public lectures being arranged by the Right Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of the university.

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former president of Cornell University, will lectures on Philippine independence in the auditorium of the Music Building at 8:15 p. m., Monday, and Prof. A. Souter, of King's College, University of Aberdeen, will lecture on St. Augustine.

The Christmas holidays will begin at noon on Saturday, December 17 and continue until Wednesday, January 4, at 8 a. m.

State groups are planning to hold reunions for undergraduates and alumni during the Christmas vacation in their home States. The Connecticut Club will have a dance on December 27, in Waverly Inn, at Cheshire, Conn., which will be a gathering of all the Connecticut students and the alumni of the State.

The second of a series of three meetings in observance of the sesquimillenium of the landing of St. Patrick in Ireland in 432 will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in the auditorium of the Music Building. Prof. Frederick Murphy will speak on "Early Irish Architecture" and "Some Modern Churches Dedicated to St. Patrick." The Rev. Dr. Patrick Browne will speak on "Irish Churches in the New World." The third meeting will be held Wednesday evening, when Dr. Patrick J. Lennox and Dr. Charles McCarthy will speak.

American University.

The Faculty Women's Club of American University gave a reception to Bishop and Mrs. Holt Hughes last night at the Women's Residence Hall. Bishop Hughes is the bishop of Washington area of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Those invited to meet Bishop and Mrs. Hughes were the trustees of the university, members of the Women's Guild of American University and the parents of the Washington students. Those in the receiving line were Dr. Jessie M. Ferguson, Bishop and Mrs. Hughes, Edwin Holt, Dr. and Mrs. Lucius C. Clark and Dr. and Mrs. George B. Woods. A program of music and readings was presented by Dr. Walter F. Shenton, Prof. Will Hutchins and Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Randall. The Faculty Women's Club was assisted in serving by some of the local students.

The Swagger Club entertained at an informal dance last night. Phi Sigma Beta's annual theater party will take place Friday, December 16.

Columbus University.

Arrangements for the Columbus University freshman prom which will be held December 17 in the New Shoreham Hotel are now being made by committees which were appointed last week.

On the floor committee are William Ham, chairman; Christopher Dineen, Michael Tardugno, James S. Schriver, William R. Root, Frederick J. Whelan, J. B. McKenzie, Richard Mattingly, Louis Lucas and C. Maurice Weidemeyer.

The dance committee includes William F. Goddard, chairman; Miss Mary Lusby, Robert A. Hughes, Paul F. Cooke, Francis Bradley, Miss Marie Robertson, Ralph Collins, Miss Winifred McCray, Philip Katzman, Timothy Quirk, Louis Lucas and C. Maurice Weidemeyer.

Senior students in the school of law were given three special lectures last week on legal research by Judge Nathan Cayton, of the District Municipal Court.

The lectures consisted mainly of practical discussions and demonstrations in the library of the university as to case analysis and the use of law books. Judge Cayton, who is judge of the moot court, gave this series of lectures in connection with that branch of the study of the law.

The Alpha Chi Upsilon Sorority has appointed a committee to make plans for a Christmas holiday party. Members of this committee are Katherine Burns, Ann Thatcher and Genevieve Finzel.

Washington College of Law.

The freshman class of the day division of Washington College of Law held an interesting debate on Wednesday morning. The subject was, "Resolved, That there should be a new Federal department of education and public health." The affirmative was represented by James R. Morris and Milton G. Carver and the negative by Edward N. DeRussy and Norman L. Penny. The decision was awarded to the negative side and Mr. DeRussy was voted the best speaker. The president of the class, Bowie Johnson, presided and introduced the speakers.

The second regular session of moot court was held yesterday afternoon, with Dr. Edward A. Mooers presiding. Motions were argued by the following senior counsel: Raymond C. Williams, John L. Woodward, Charles A. Willmuth, Noble S. Williams, Dwight F. Chase, Edward N. Cox, Joseph A. Cushman, Miss Mary E. Fowler, Miss Margaret Shea, Max W. Tucker and Ernest E. Salisbury.

In the debating class of the evening division held Saturday afternoon the subject, "Resolved, That grand juries should be abolished in the District of Columbia," was argued. The affirmative was represented by Stanley R. Lynn, Maurice Bermash and Miss Dorothy C. Dorian, while the negative was upheld by Melville B. Cox, Otto W. Strachan and Francis E. Perkins.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of Sigma Nu Phi legal fraternity held their semiannual initiation ceremonies at the college last evening, at which time Stephen H. Folk, John V. Hughes, Joseph A. O'Connell, Alfred E. Page, Ferdinand J. Walter, John E. Wicker, and Alton E. Wise were admitted to membership.

Epsilon Chapter, Kappa Beta Pi Legal Sorority, is joining with the other local chapters in celebration of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the sorority with a dinner to be held next Wednesday evening at the Women's City Club.

National University.

The National University Masonic Club held the regular meeting and elections Friday, December 2, 1932. Stanley E. Otto, editor in chief of the docket, 1933 and member of Sigma Nu Phi fraternity, was elected president. The other officers are: Charles R. Bell, vice president; Charles M. Schwab, secretary; R. R. Baum, treasurer; George Walter Smith, chaplain and almoner; Locke R. Humbert, marshal, and Melvin M. Scott, herald. These new officers will be installed at the ceremonial to be held January 18, 1933, at the Willard Hotel. Arrangements are being made for a dance during the month of February.

Plans for the winter term, to begin January 2, are being completed by officials of both the Law School and the School of Economics and Government. Another new course scheduled for the economics and government school yesterday was "constructive marketing" which Harry F. Campbell, professor of advertising, will present at 7:45 a. m. on Tuesdays and Fridays. In this course, Prof. Campbell will teach the adaptation of merchandise, service and selling to the actual behavior of the consumer as influenced by changing living conditions.

Trinity College.

Vocational guidance was the subject treated during the regular assembly period last week at Trinity by Miss Julia O'Neil, M. A., instructor of history at the college. She emphasized the importance of considering ability to do the work, openings for it and especially habits to be cultivated in order to succeed along the chosen line.

On Thursday evening at Trinty 85 members of the freshman class and the new students were received into the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary. This ceremony is held every year on the feast of the Immaculate Conception. A procession and the presentation of the new members was followed by benediction. Father Ignatius Smith, O. P., delivered the sermon; Miss Carol Swiney, of Bayonne, N. J., prefect of sodality, presented the new members.

Miss Margaret Wohnlich, of Baltimore, president of the International Relations Club at Trinity, and Miss Dora Kelly, of Port Chester, N. Y., left Thursday to attend the Middle Atlantic Conference of International Relations Clubs, held at Bucknell University, December 9 and 10. The Manchurian question and the international tariff problem were treated in general sessions and roundtable discussions by representatives of 30 colleges and universities.

Marjory Webster.

Miss Marjorie F. Webster, president of the school, will be assisted on her regular Sunday radio program over Station WMAL, at 8:15 o'clock tonight, by Janet Coon, Frances Brunt and Miriam Prettyman.

Try-outs for the Comus Club will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the studio room of the school. These try-outs are not limited to members of the school of speech, but are open to students in the physical education and secretarial departments also.

Georgetown University.

The annual debate for the Merrick Medal at Georgetown University will be held tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Gaston Hall between representative teams of the 102-year-old Philodemic Society.

The question is, "Resolved, That the United States should grant immediate independence to the Philippines," a subject now before the Senate Territories committee. John S. Leahy, jr., of St. Louis and Henry B. Herrick, of West Newton, Mass., will be on the affirmative side and Joseph G. Smith, of Pittsburgh, and John R. Slattery of Brighton, Mass., comprise the negative team.

The Rev. Patrick O'Gorman, S. J., headmaster of the Georgetown Preparatory School, Dr. William Boyd-Carpenter of the Foreign Service School and O. H. Perry Johnson, will serve as the judges of the debate.

All four young debaters have been members of former varsity debating teams at Georgetown. The Rev. John J. Toohey, S. J., debating coach at Georgetown for more than 20 years, is concluding arrangements for contests soon with the University of Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh University.

Under the chairmanship of George D. Crowley, '34, the Chicago Club of Georgetown is planning to give a dance for alumni in the Windy City during the Christmas holidays.

Southeastern University.

The annual Christmas party of the Alumni Association of Southeastern University will be held next Friday night at the Hay-Adams House. There will be cards, dancing and refreshments.

Arrangements are in charge of a committee of which Thomas S. Durham is chairman. All students of the University are invited.

Plans for the annual banquet of Southeastern University, to be held next March, were discussed at a meeting of all class officers last Wednesday. Dr. James A. Bell, head of the university, presided. Dean Joseph K. Moyer and Associate Dean Wayne Kendrick, both of the School of Accountancy, attended.

Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, in Florida, will speak on "Adventure in Common Sense Education" before the students of the Woodward School for Boys, affiliated with Southeastern, Tuesday morning at chapel.

Dr. Bell addressed the Parent-Teacher Association of the Blow School on character education for children at a meeting in the school last week.

The first regular hike arranged by the new Hiking Club of Southeastern will be held today under direction of Miss Marie Suter, president of the club. A 5-mile route has been mapped out. The club is an outgrowth of the university's "walking course," sponsored by Dr. Lyman Sexton, faculty medical adviser.

Strayer College.

Fifteen students of Strayer College were initiated by Sigma Eta Sigma, honor society, last Friday morning. Selection of members is based on scholastic achievement during the first semester, and every student who had earned the minimum of six honor credits was placed on the eligibility list.

Bynum Armfield, president; Marion DeBell, secretary, and Elgie G. Purvis, dean of the college, were in charge of the initiation.

Phi Theta Pi Fraternity held its regular semimonthly meeting last Thursday evening in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Richard Roezel, newly elected president, presided, and named the official committees for the ensuing year. John Robb, an honor graduate of McKinley High School, was named chapter correspondent of the fraternity to report news events to Strayer Topics, student publication.

Bar Quiz Course.

Dr. Herbert R. Grossman announces his quiz course in preparation for the Virginia bar examinations to be held this coming June 27 and 28 in Roanoke.

Dr. Grossman is professor of law at Southeastern University, and has successfully conducted these courses since 1923.

Jobless Get 30,000 Red Cross Garments

More than 30,000 articles of clothing were distributed to the unemployed of the city during November by the local chapter of the American Red Cross, it was stated in the organization's monthly report.

The greater part of the merchandise was ready made, but about 3,000 pieces of clothing were made by volunteer workers of the chapter. The organization issued an appeal yesterday to citizens to aid them in their work. Men's and boys' overalls, shirts, trousers and hose totaling 26,479 were received as a part of a shipment of ready made garments in exchange for raw cotton made available to the chapter by the Federal Farm Board.

Southern Relief Society Dedicates Picture Today

A portrait of Mrs. H. Wallace Witcover will be placed in the headquarters of the Southern Relief Society, 2727 Adams Mill road northwest, at 4 o'clock this afternoon at memorial services in her honor.

Mrs. Witcover, late president of the organization, devoted a great deal of time to the work of the society, and it was during her administration that the headquarters was obtained. The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of the Unitarian Church, will deliver an address.

Georgetown Law School To Hear H. J. Donnelly

Horace J. Donnelly, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, will address the faculty and student body of the Georgetown Law School tomorrow afternoon at 5:10 o'clock.

Mr. Donnelly's talk, on the legal work of his department, is one of a series being given at the school by prominent legal officers of the Government. He was graduated from the Georgetown school in 1909 and the year following obtained also a degree of master of law.

Montevideo—City of Beauty

By DARRELL PRESTON AUB.

The skyline of Buenos Aires is fading into the night as our comfortable little steamer carries us on to Montevideo.

We are on a cruise-tour which is circling South America. On February 10 we sailed from New York Harbor aboard the luxurious liner Santa Maria and for a month and a half we have been on our rambles. We sailed through the Panama Canal and visited the colorful cities at the eastern and western termini of the canal—Cristobal, Colon, Balboa and Panama City. Then golden days sped away on the wings of a gay shipboard life as our liner sailed down the west coast of South America, over the blue, calm waters of the Pacific. And often the strange and varied fish life of this region brings us to the ship's rail with exclamations of surprise.

The Santa Maria is a lovely ship, splendidly equipped, and affords us facilities for sports and entertainment of every kind. And our cruise is running so smoothly there is not a detail which has not been carefully thought out and planned in advance. Sightseeing, hotels, transportation connections, everything, is achieved without any effort on our part. All we have to do is enjoy ourselves; but no wonder, after all; this is the fourteenth season in which the travel company which is in charge is running such a cruise.

Highlights in Memory.

We think back over the route of our cruise so far, and these things our memories label as highlights:

The 30-mile sail up the Guayas River in Ecuador.

The famous, historic pre-Inca ruins at Chan-Chan.

Lima, capital of Peru, the colonial "City of the Kings."

The Guano Islands of the Pacific.

Valparaiso, chief seaport of the Pacific coast of South America.

Santiago, the beautiful capital of Chile.

Lota, the most beautiful park in all South America.

Valdivia, the Venice of South America.

The attractive Chilean lakes region.

Tronador, the astounding mountain of ice.

The crossing of the mighty Andes by autos at only 3,312 feet.

The Argentine National Park, with its enchanting lake, Nahuel Haupi.

The impressive train ride through the Patagonian pampas.

Buenos Aires, the Paris of South America.

The next morning, March 24, we land at Montevideo, the capital of Uruguay.

To most people Uruguay is barely more than a name, yet this interesting little state, the smallest in South America, possesses a great world-port which is one of the most important cities of the continent. Montevideo is famous throughout the Far South for its splendid avenues, its great public buildings and its fine harbor on "The River" as our sea captains called the Rio de la Plata. It enjoys also unusual attractions as a seaside resort. The plazas and parks, the Cathedral and Solis Theater, the animal cemetery at Villa Dolores, and the beautiful suburbs with residences set in spacious gardens are well worth visiting and show no traces of the historic nine years' siege by the Argentine forces, which won it the title of "New Troy."

How this city won its name is interesting. It is recorded that, in 1520, when Magellan, the Portuguese navigator, then in the service of Spain, visited the site later chosen for the city, one of his men, noting a hill so close to the site, exclaimed, "monte-vi-eu." That means, approximately, "the mountain is seen." Hence, "Montevideo."

An automobile drive covers the delightful seaside resorts of Pocitos, Ramirez and Carrrasco, including a visit to the marvelous marble structure of the National Congress. Then we return to Buenos Aires, where we board the steamship Western World. We find this ship magnificently equipped with every modern convenience for our comfort and safety. The staterooms are large and cool, the decks spacious, the service perfect. This ship was specially constructed for tropical sailing, and the sea breezes play refreshingly through its salons and cabins, no matter how near the equator we sail.

Bound for Santos.

We are bound for Santos, Brazil.

Amerigo Vespucci has said, "If Paradise exists on earth, it must be somewhere along the shores of Brazil."

Brazil is the largest of the South American nations; it exceeds in its vast area continental United States. It differs fundamentally from its neighbors in that it is Portuguese, rather than Spanish. Portugal settled it and developed it through two centuries until 100 years ago it became independent, and today its traditions and institutions are those of the mother country, as also is its language. Politically and commercially it is one of the predominant factors of South America.

Santos, the first city we shall visit, lies a few miles up a tidal river whose banks are lost in great mangrove swamps. It is the greatest coffee port in the world and one of the most notable ports on the Atlantic Coast of either South or North America. With its elaborate dock machinery and its thousands of stevedores hailing from every continent, it is a beehive of activity. Back from the waterfront, it is an attractive city of great age, with broad streets and bright plazas. It was founded by the Jesuits in 1553. The seashore resort Guaruja on an adjacent island, which we shall visit, has been called the most picturesque in South America. Near the white beach are pretty streets with chalets and Queen Anne cottages, hotels and a gay casino in a setting of tropical flowers.

Trip to Sao Paulo.

A short rail trip inland brings us to Sao Paulo. The 50 miles of railway which take us here are an astounding piece of engineering, that is reputed to be, mile for mile, the most expensive bit of railroad construction in the world. Over it comes Brazil's coffee crop at high freight charges and millions in earnings have been put back into the property in addition to very high dividends.

Sao Paulo itself, the second city in Brazil, is an interesting mingling of old and new. Wide, modern avenues cut across crowded colonial sections that date back for centuries, and the palaces of today's coffee millionaires are but little removed from the narrow streets of pioneer days. On the heights of Ypiranga, where the first Dom Pedro proclaimed independence from Portugal 100 years ago, is an elaborate palace-museum, regarded as one of the finest structures in Brazil. Of course we find the astounding Institute Boutantan, the "Snake Farm," of great interest. Here the eminent Dr. Vitale Brazil has collected hundreds of serpents from all over the country, and has devoted his life to finding antidotes for snake bites.

Rio Beautiful City.

Now we come to gay Rio. Rio de Janeiro has been called "the most beautiful city in the New World." Whether viewed from its harbor, from whose shore the bright houses clamber up the hillsides, or from mighty Corcovado, beneath whose shadows the streets cut down to the brilliant isle-studded waters, it has fair claim to the title. Lord Bruce once enthusiastically described Rio's harbor this way:

"Suppose the bottom of the Yosemite Valley, or that of the Valley of the Auronzo, in the Venetian Alps, filled with water, then the effect would be something like the Bay of Rio. Yet the superb vegetation would be wanting, and the views to far-away mountains, and the surge of the blue ocean outside the capes that guard the entrance. Other cities there are whose mountains rising around form noble background, but in Rio the mountains seem to be almost a part of the city, for it clings and laps around the spurs just as the sea laps around the capes that project into the bay."

Round the wide Guanabara Bay runs the famous Avenida Beira Mar—there is no boulevard to compare with it; none which combines such unforgettable views of sea and mountain, such well-ordered lines of palms and graceful lights, such entrancing glimpses of delicately tinted villas and palatial residences set in opulent gardens. Here, too, are the inviting open-air cafes, whose tables are set out upon the sidewalks, and which in the late afternoon and evening rival in gaiety the famous sidewalk cafes of Paris.

Among the various trips we shall include Sugar Loaf Mountain, 1,200 feet high, reached by an aerial cable car. From its summit a wonderful panoramic view of Guanabara Bay is obtained. Ascension to Corcovado, which means "the hunchback," is by cog railway.

Eight Days at Sea.

Completing our sojourn in Rio, and it's been a long, lovely visit of eleven days, we sail northward on the steamship American Legion. It is not necessary to describe this ship except to say that it is a sister to the Western World, and so we are again comfortable and happy on an ideal vessel.

Restful days at sea follow—eight days—until we reach Port of Spain, Trinidad, the last port on our cruise.

Lovely, tropical, flowering Trinidad is but a few miles from the north mainland of South America, yet it is British. In Port of Spain, the city, we find a strange mingling of English, Spanish and colored, and quite a number of Hindus. In fact, nearby is the Hindu village of St. James, where streets named after those in Bombay and Delhi disclose quaint shops that are treasure troves of beautiful silver and other native work. On the streets one encounters dark-eyed women with veils and silver bracelets on ankles and arms. A charming bit of the Orient here, piquant sauce for our spicy tour of Latin lands.

Our exploration of Trinidad keeps us busy till sailing time, for there is much to see here; lovely roads bordering cocoa, banana and sugar-cane plantations to be traversed, the splendid botanical gardens to be visited and, if time permits, a trip to the famous Pitch Lake, which supplies much of the world's asphalt and makes Trinidad self-supporting.

Four more days now, and the skyline of New York rises out of the sea. It's been a glorious cruise, and the best part of it is that it isn't really sailing until February 10!

ODD FACTORS BARED IN HEAT-PAINT TESTS

Whitewash Inside Glass Is Superior to Out; Red Cooler Than Green.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Whether the paint is put on the inside or the outside sometimes makes a big difference in how cool it will keep a house, the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers has been informed.

If a glass skylight is whitewashed on the inside it will cut out 50 per cent of the sun's heat, but whitewashed on the outside cuts out only 40 per cent. These statements were made by F. G. Hechler, professor of engineering research, and E. R. Queer, instructor in engineering research, both of Pennsylvania State College.

The superiority of white, nonmetallic paint as an exterior covering, to keep out heat is clearly demonstrated, they said. But the same kind of paint on the inside has a negligible effect on incoming heat.

The best interior insulator against heat is aluminum foil. A red color is cooler than green; that is it shuts out more heat if used as an outside, nonmetallic paint. White is the best color insulator in this paint.

These cooling values are true only when the wind is blowing not more than 10 miles an hour. Winds above that rate have so much cooling effect that they mostly wipe out the surfacing performances.

CALLING TO THE WAVES ON MIAMI BEACH

Winter winds forgotten under the caress of the Gulf Stream. The sun and the sand are suitable now at Miami Beach. These nine young women have heeded the call of the waves, leaving winter far to the northward.

New Uses Needed For Grain Crops

Foundry Supplies Organic Chemicals, Adhesives, Binders Suggested.

Chicago (A.P.).—If the chemist would help the farmer he must find new uses for grain aside from food, said Dr. W. B. Newkirk in addressing the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society.

It is the capacity of the stomach that limits profitable production of cereals, and "we are now eating about all the cereals we can," he said. Dr. Newkirk, chief technologist of the Corn Products Refining Co., advocated producing beers and seeking other uses than foods for grains.

"There has been no work of any value by either Government or State institutions which had for its purpose any industrial use for these cereal products," he said. "The greatest assistant Government or research institutions can give to the farmer is methods by which starch products are changed into industrial products, not foods, to be used and consumed in such lines as foundry supplies, adhesives, binders, organic chemicals, organic solvents and similar products."

Georgia Is Tracing History Of Transoconee Republic

Atlanta, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Georgia's lost republic has been found by history and romanticists have added luster to its traditions. The lost republic of Georgia was the Transoconee government that flourished only a few months in 1794. Elijah Clarke founded it and killed it as a matter of honor.

The government offered one of the first rebellions the United States faced. Clarke settled the republic after returning from an expedition against St. Augustine in 1794. Its exact location is not known, but he established Forts Advance and Defiance. Two other fortifications were erected, one probably near the present site of Milledgeville. Clarke invited settlers, and they rented lands from Indians and soon had an up and coming country.

The Federal Government realized the danger of the outlaw republic and tried by diplomacy to wreck it without offending Clarke, who was a hero and able to ally Indians and soldiers to his cause. Clarke dreamed of a great empire. The Secretary of War called upon Gov. Matthews of Georgia to do something to cause withdrawal of Clarke and his hordes from the republic. Matthews appealed to Clarke's men—adventurers who defied the laws of Spain and the United States and championed the rights of the Creek Indians.

The republic continued to flourish and Federal troops blockaded it and threatened war. Clarke asked his men if they were willing to surrender. They were not. So Clarke strengthened his forts and made ready to fight. But the United States sent an army of Clarke's comrades against him, men with whom he had fought. He couldn't fire on them. So he dipped the colors of his little government to the flag of Georgia. The torch was applied to his forts and his republic was laid waste. He then entered the service of Georgia and died a patriot.

History still is seeking information about the republic. Its glamour has just about been forgotten, and historians are determined to revive it.

Stars Seem Square In Photographs

Magnitudes So Indicated by System Devised in California.

Pasadena, Calif. (A.P.).—Stars photographed here by William H. Christie do not appear 5-pointed or even round. They appear square.

But neither cubists nor persons who believe the earth is flat should hail him as a convert. Mr. Christie photographs stars that way better to determine their magnitudes, or degrees of brightness.

He and other astronomers at the Carnegie Institutions' Mount Wilson Observatory have been making careful tests of a moving plate camera designed by him, and he said recently he is convinced it offers the most accurate photographic method of ascertaining magnitudes. "With this camera," he explained, "the star image is trailed up and down a photographic plate in a number of parallel lines so close together they blend into a uniform patch, the resultant image being square. The blackness, or density, of this image varies with the brightness of the star or other object under investigation."

Montgomery County League of Social Service Gives List of Opportunities for Christmas Aid

Year's Help Is Requested for Needy Cases in County.

The Montgomery County Social Service League has announced its annual list of Christmas opportunities for aiding poor and unfortunate families of the county to have a more happy Christmas. The opportunities, however, in accordance with the policy of the league, are based on a year of service instead of a sporadic gift or two at Christmas, and will enable many of those on the list to fight their way back to winning their own living.

Those for whom aid is asked are inflicted by social and economic conditions beyond their control, according to Miss Willie Greene Day, executive director. The money donated will be distributed free of charge through the league's personnel. Large or small gifts may be designated for any particular opportunity and will be applied to that particular one, if so requested.

It is hoped that the many organizations which, through their group efforts managed to take care of one or more opportunities last year, will again this year step into the breach and bring happiness to these unfortunates, Miss Day said. Checks should be mailed to the "Social Service League of Montgomery County, Maryland, Rockville, Md."

OPPORTUNITY NO. 1, $5 A WEEK; $260 A YEAR.

"Facing the Hardest Task."

Only a few short months ago Mr. James fell dead. Mrs. James was expecting a new baby; but no preparation had been made, for times were hard, and with one little boy, age 5, a complete invalid, and a second so young as to require constant attention, there was little surplus money or extra time to give to getting ready for the new arrival. The new baby has arrived but still there is no income, not even a shelter for the members of this family at present, so they are having to reside temporarily in a generous relative's home; but she is old and feeble and living on a small pension, so some other arrangement must be made. Will you assist now? Later the mother may be able to stand alone, but now friends must aid, or how can this mother accomplish her task?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 2, $35 A MONTH; $420 A YEAR.

"Mother Didn't Want Us."

Mr. Ellis is a farm laborer. His wife deserted him, leaving him a lovely little baby girl, only 9 months old, and another only 2 years old. Then there were two other children 6 and 8. Mr. Ellis loves his children and wants to keep them with him but what can he do when he only makes a small sum each month? Some one must help by assuming part of the responsibility if this little family is to be kept together. Is it not enough that these children should have to be reared without a mother? Can we not prevent their having to be separated from each other? We hope you will want to give them the security of being kept in a good boarding home where father can live too.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 3, $20 A MONTH; $240 A YEAR.

"What Will Become of Them?"

In a two-room shack near a deserted quarry lives a very old man with a much younger wife and their five small children. This past summer the old man carried water to men working on the road nearby, thus earning a small amount; but as winter came on this job was abolished and at the present an occasional day's work is his only source of income. In order that he may be placed on a work relief job, $20 a month must be supplied to pay for this created job. Will you help to give the old man work, thereby allowing him to keep his self-respect and feeling of adequacy; and most of all helping him to feed his family?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 4, $8.50 A MONTH; $102 A YEAR.

"Frail Little Bodies."

The picture of this family is distressing. Father has had tuberculosis and can only work occasionally. There are four little children ranging in years from 1 to 8. One of the youngest has tuberculosis at the present time. It is urgent that some provision be made to supply the family with the daily requirements of milk, food and clothing. This can only be done by outside help. Relatives are aiding, but they are not able to do it all. Will you do a bit, too?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 5, $15 A MONTH; $180 A YEAR.

"A Mentally Sick Husband and Two Children to Care For."

Mr. Moore is ill, both mentally and physically, and unable to work; his doctor says that his condition is not hopeful. Mrs. Moore must meet the burden of food, clothes, medical care and dental care for herself and the two children. A kind landlord is aiding by giving rent free, but there are so many, many other things needed. Mother is a good manager, and will stretch the dollars if you will help too.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 6, $15 A MONTH; $180 A YEAR.

"A Brave Mother Wants to Carry On in the Face of Tragedy."

Mrs. Walters lost her husband in the summer. His death was tragic, shattering the woman's poise and desire to carry on. But now that she has regained interest in her two little children, she wants to make a home for them. She is trying ever so hard, but the outlook is dark. There are no relatives who are able to assist Mrs. Walters and each month the rent must be met and hungry mouths must be fed. Fifteen dollars a month will enable this family to avoid actual suffering. Knowledge that the children will not go hungry will bring joy and happiness to the mother at the Christmas season and make possible real security and peace in the household.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 7, $13.50 A MONTH; $162 A YEAR.

"A Little Wanderer."

Mary is 11 years of age. Three years ago her mother died. Her father is in such poor health that he can not support her. He left her at a neighbor's house where she was mistreated because she was not wanted. The league found Mary there and learned that in three years' time she had lived in four homes. Several months ago she was placed with her present boarding mother. Her new mother is a kindly person and understands Mary's needs and wants. To be retained in her present surroundings will be her salvation; but it requires $13.50 a month to accomplish this.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 8, $5 A WEEK; $360 A YEAR.

"Getting Along Somehow."

Father is dead and mother is struggling desperately to keep her four little children with her, so that they may grow up knowing the happiness of having a home with mother and brothers and sisters. She takes in sewing and canvasses in the neighborhod to sell toilet articles. But in hard times toilet articles are luxuries and hard to sell. Mother's income is not sufficient to meet all the needs of her little family. The rent must be paid and wood and coal have to be bought, and besides young, growing bodies need so much food. But this brave mother feels that she can manage the other things if some kind friend will assist by helping with the food. Will you be this friend?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 9, $20 A MONTH; $240 A YEAR.

"Needs a New Start in Life."

Tommy has had to live with his grandmother, who is too elderly to give him proper supervision. Unfortunately, Tommy has gotten in with bad company, and recently was a Juvenile Court case. A child specialist advises that the boy's environment must be changed so that his contact with the neighborhood gang may be broken. The boy is good material; alert, energetic and capable; his need is for proper guidance and fresh environment, but there is no one in Tommy's family who can pay for placing Tommy in a new home. Twenty dollars a month will board the boy and give him a new start in life. Would you like to invest this sum and help to make a good citizen?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 10, $10 A MONTH; $120 A YEAR.

"At 15 and 16 They Shoulder Family Cares."

In a small, tumbled-down house lives Fanny and six dependent children. Fanny is doing everything she can to support her children, but her health is poor and her problems seem insurmountable unless assistance is given from the outside. The league has placed Fanny's two older daughters, ages 15 and 16, in small-wage homes, so that they can help, to some extent, but their earnings are exceedingly small and, unless the present income is supplemented, there will be real suffering in this group. Will you buy $10 worth of food one month or each month for this family?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 11, $5 A MONTH; $60 A YEAR.

"There Is No Time to Lose."

Ill health overtook Mr. Biggs recently and at the most inopportune time. A new baby is expected and there are already three to feed. Mr. Biggs feels he must hurry and go to work, but the doctor says this is impossible. He may have to receive continued medical assistance. At present this is being supplied by a philanthropic doctor; friends are taking him to and from the hospital. Mother is keeping cheerful to keep the father's spirits up, but she confides to the league worker that things seem very dark. Dire want in this family can be prevented only through material relief. Five dollars a month is a small sum, but it means the difference here between real suffering and a minimum of the necessities of life and health. Will you give this $5?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 12, $6 A WEEK; $312 A YEAR.

"A Job Will Make Life Easier."

The father of this family is an industrious and hard working man, but try as he may he can not find employment, and has had to be placed through the Emergency Work Bureau. He has a wife and new baby spurring him on, but it is difficult for his morale to stand the strain of long weeks of unemployment. Unless work can be provided, we fear for the happiness and health and stability of this group. Will you pay for this man's job? Six dollars a week will enable the Emergency Work Bureau to place him. It will enable him to keep his self-respect and love and confidence of his wife.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 13, $20 A MONTH; $240 A YEAR.

"Mary Ann Needs Your Help."

Mary Ann's mother is dead and her father has deserted her. For a year she was forced to live in the home of her sister, where her presence became a source of annoyance to her sister's husband. In order to prevent breaking up the sister's home and in order to give the child some security, she has been placed in a foster home. She loves her new home and new foster mother, and is brighter and happier than she has been for years. If she is to remain in this home $20 a month board is needed. What a wonderful opportunity for giving this makes.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 14, $20 A MONTH; $240 A YEAR.

"He Sacrificed His Health."

Mr. Jones isn't very old, but through overwork and exposure, he devolped tuberculosis and now he has been sent to the sanitarium to try to get well. It was discovered by x-rays that four of the children of this family are tuberculosis suspects now. The doctor ordered extra nourishing food and a special allowance of milk for them; but this is difficult for Mrs. Jones to supply because there is now no income in the family. It means that friends must come to the rescue. Will you help to supplement by aiding in meeting the budget? With your help these children may be nursed back to health.

Work Will Be Created in Many Instances for Willing Persons.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 15, $8 A MONTH; $96 A YEAR.

"They Were Faithful When They Were Young."

An old negro couple, after years of labor, have become too old and too incapacitated to do any work at all. They have no relatives upon whom they can rely in this time of their want and distress. The smallest possible sum that will keep body and soul together is $8 a month. Will you make living easier for this deserving old couple by helping to provide this sum?

OPPORTUNITY NO 16 $20 A MONTH; $240 A YEAR.

"That Sammy May Grow Up to Be a Useful Citizen."

Curly haired, blue eyed Sammy, age 3, needs a permanent home; but Sammy has no mother to give him this, and his father is not a responsible father. Recently the court gave Sammy's care over to the league. The league realizes that Sammy needs a good home, where the foster parents will make him feel that he is wanted and cared for. Would you like to help with Sammy's board?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 17, $16 A MONTH; $192 A YEAR.

"Laid Off."

For 20 years the father of this family worked for the railroad; but eighteen months ago he was laid off. Opportunities for work have been irregular since then, and bills have accumulated. Recently the mother in the family had a major operation, and months will elapse before she can recover sufficiently to be of help at home. The oldest child in the family is 17; she goes to high school and does all the housework after she comes home in the evening. The father can be given two days' work each week through the Emergency Work Bureau if $16 each month is provided. We know of no greater need than is felt in this case. Will you hedp for a week, or a month, or a year?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 18, $15 A MONTH; $180 A YEAR.

"Their Working Days Are Over."

Mr. and Mrs. Howard live alone. Both are too old to work, but in the prime of their lives they were useful county citizens. Now that old age has overtaken them, they have no one to whom they can look for the bare necessities of life. If the sum of $15 a month can be provided for the purchase of food, fuel, milk and medicine, comfort to some degree can be made possible for this old couple in their declining years; otherwise their last days may mean only suffering and heartache as they wait for the end.

OPPORTUNITY NO. 19, $4 A WEEK; $208 A YEAR.

"Elsie's Dad Gave to Make the World a Safe Place—What Will We Give Him in His Hour of Need?"

Elsie is 8. She has a father and mother who love her dearly and want to take good care of her. Her father is a former service man, industrious, capable and deserving, but he is unemployed and he has looked so long and so hard for a job that he is becoming discouraged. Aid must be given to support the father's morale, else Elsie and mother may have to wonder why father has changed so. A job can be supplied through the Emergency Work Bureau, but this job costs $4 per week, as the Emergency Work Bureau must pay for all created work, and only created work is available at the present time. Will you help this man who, in his early life, made a sacrifice to help all of us?

OPPORTUNITY NO. 20, $9 A MONTH; $108 A YEAR.

"Mother Can't Do It All Alone."

There are five little children in this family, ranging from three to thirteen years of age. The mother was widowed when the father died of tuberculosis several years ago. She now works as a domestic, paying a relative to keep her children. The mother's wages are $10 a week. Unless some help is given, it is impossible for her to meet the food and milk bills and guard her little brood against the Great White Plague. Nine dollars each month must be had to supplement the budget, if the children are safeguarded.

Old Stratford Orchard Lee Knew Will Be Replanted

Stratford, Va., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Apple trees will bloom again on the site of the old orchard which Robert Lee knew as a boy at Stratford.

The orchard site has been plowed and prepared for planting the fruit trees next spring, in keeping with the restoration of the home where the chieftain of the Confederate forces was born and spent his childhood.

After months of preliminary investigation, Supt. B. F. Cheatham said today, actual work has begun and "will be carried forward as rapidly as is consistent with accuracy and funds available."

In a sentence, Supt. Cheatham, who retired from the United States Army with the rank of major general, tells the purpose of the restoration.

"Our ultimate aim," he said, "is to reproduce here as nearly as may be, the plantation life of the pioneer, and to recreate a self-contained unit, complete with its mill, shops, looms, smokehouse, spring house, barn and granary, and with herds and flocks."

No changes will be made in either the house or garden, however, Gen. Cheatham said, "until exhaustive investigation and research have proven the historical accuracy of the change proposed, and nothing will be done to in any way modify the original work beyond necessary repairs."

The only work done on the house thus far, he pointed out, consisted of minor repairs to roof and chimneys.

Plans for the restoration of the detached kitchen, however, are rapidly nearing completion, with work to begin at an early date.

The Garden Club of Virginia, by authority of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, has undertaken the restoration of the garden and the grounds surrounding the house. After many months of "digging and probing" a definite plan has been submitted by the club and approved by the foundation. Work is now under way.

The ha-ha wall at the end of the garden has been completed, the brick side walls are nearly complete, as are the terraces. In addition it is expected that the ha-ha wall on the south side of the main house will be put in shortly.

STREETS ARE READY IN NEW SUBDIVISION

Completed After Delay Due to Rains; Building Will Start at Once.

After a delay due to the November rains, streets have been completed in the new residential park, Westmoreland Hills, being developed by the Loughborough Development Corporation.

The simultaneous opening of Westmoreland Circle at the juncture of Massachusetts avenue and the District line makes this section directly and quickly accessible from the downtown district. And now with the streets in readiness work can be started at once on a number of houses already contracted for.

In laying out the streets, great care was taken to follow winding natural lines that would do away with the monotony of the usual checkerboard layout. This use of curves in street planning enhances the individual appearance of a neighborhood and also discourages the nuisances of speeding and heavy traffic.

The fact that the houses face the street from many different angles encourages a variety of architecture. Unique expressions of the owners' personalities result with a pleasant lack of sameness. The esthetic standards insisted upon in the planning of each house further encourages this distinction of appearance. This, however, places no financial restrictions upon the houses, homes of modest price being not only permitted but welcomed.

Westmoreland Hills is taking full advantage of the fact that it overlooks Dalecarlia Federal Park. For every effort is being made to retain the natural beauty of the subdivision which is so in harmony with the adjacent park. The Dalecarlia Lake is well stocked with fish, affording sport for the angler in season.

All lots in Westmoreland Hills are marked off with an eye to preserving their entity. Many of them are situated on the tops of knolls commanding beautiful views. And no lot has less than a 70-foot frontage, thus preventing any suggestion of city cramping. Everywhere the unusual features of the terrain, such as streams, shrubbery, rustic ravines and rises, are preserved. The woods are spared except where they interfere with an abundance of sunlight.

This leaves a blend of russet trees parading against the amber autumn sunsets, and provides an atmosphere in which it is easy to envision gracious homes.

Eaton Will Lead Sales for Goss

Goss Realty Co. announces enlargement of its sales department and placement at the department's head of J. S. Eaton, of Eaton & Co., as well as his associates, Hamilton Smith and William B. Dortch, in addition to the sales force now connected with Goss Realty Co. Earl E. Goss, of the Goss Co., will also have associated with him Everett A. R. Searl, builder, now connected with Mr. Eaton's office.

Eight years ago Mr. Eaton left McKeever & Goss, when Mr. Goss was a member of that firm, opened his office under the name of Eaton & Co., and made many friends and sales. Now he is to return as head of the sales department of one of his former employers.

Mr. Eaton has specialized in Chevy Chase, D. C., and Maryland and suburban properties as well as city homes.

BIRON BROS. DISPLAY COMFORTABLE HOME

Studio Living Room, Gabled Roof and Brick Work Are Admirable.

Many persons are planning a visit today to a new group of homes just completed by Biron Bros. at Thirteenth and Sheridan streets northwest and featuring an exhibit house at 1387 Sheridan street northwest.

The exhibit home is one of a group of five. Its front elevation is particularly inspiring with its gabled roof, natural wood trim and variegated brick work. A concrete-floored porch with wooden balustrade is of sufficient size to serve as an open-air sitting room in the summer time.

A tudor, log-burning fireplace in a corner of the studio living room will be much appreciated by the home-loving visitor. This formal receiving room, with its beamed ceiling, is of excellent proportion with an adequate amount of wall space and electrical equipment to serve properly the interior decorating requirements of the housewife.

The step-up entrance to the dining room and corner stairs leading to the bedroom floor, break the usual monotony of a rectangular room. A breakfast nook, attractively placed between the dining room and the kitchen and a screened-in rear porch, complete the first-floor arrangement.

One group of dwellings erected by this well-known building firm some months ago, proved so popular that it was sold almost immediately after completion. One home of the latest group also has been sold.

Better Homes Show Attended by 95,000

Are people interested in new homes and in ideas for better homes? Over 95,000 persons attended the Buffalo Real Estate Board's recent Better Homes Show. This despite the fact that it rained three nights out of the week.

The previous year's attendance was 75,000. This year's peak crowd was 25,000, the largest ever to be assembled in the auditorium used. The number of exhibitors jumped from last year's 85 to this year's 97.

RECREATION ROOMS IN CAFRITZ HOMES

Fashionable Feature May Be Seen in Washington Post Model Residence.

Ever awake to all that is modern, popular and desirable in home construction, the Cafritz Organization, whose latest group of dwellings is exhibited at Fourth and Emerson streets northwest, has provided these with the fashionable recreation room so much sought after in residential buildings. This room is embodied in the sample house of this group. The Washington Post model home at 327 Emerson street northwest, furnished and decorated by P. J. Nee Co., Inc.

The recreation room is in the basement. It is completely finished in Oiltex, with heat and ventilation, and a charming fireplace. There are no obstructions in this room. It is an ideal place for den or entertaining.

The pleasant recreation room has a quality three-piece maple living-room suite upholstered with a very fine grade of tapestry. There are an interesting corner cabinet of maple wood and a drop-leaf occasional table of the same wood. The room is set off with a beautiful floor lamp of modern design.

The reception hall is handsomely furnished with an English walnut console table and mirror, and its floor is covered with a domestic Oriental rug of finest grade.

Has Chippendale Suite.

The living room reveals a two-piece carved Chippendale suite upholstered with friezette and English lounge chair, upholstered in a fine quality tapestry. Here the visitor will find a genuine mahogany Duncan Phyfe drop-end table, a genuine marble-top coffee table, a Gov. Winthrop mahogany secretary with mahogany Sheraton desk chair.

The delightful room is further beautified by an occasional Louis XVI chair upholstered in fine damask and by a large-sized Axminster rug in the new rust shade. There are some very fine floor and table lamps, with pretty silk shades to blend with the drapes, placed advantageously and conveniently in the room.

The dining room possesses an excellent seven-piece early American dinette suite, the chairs of which are upholstered with fine haircloth. The floor is laid with a handsome, large-sized Axminster rug of popular pattern.

Twin Beds in Room.

In the master bedroom is a six-piece, crotch-mahogany, twin-bed Sheraton suite, including an attractive boudoir chair and stool upholstered with damask. The beds are covered with silk spreads to blend with the drapes. A large-sized Axminster rug covers the floor, and there are boudoir and floor lamps, with shades harmonizing with the ensemble.

No less charming is the second bedroom, with its three-piece walnut Duncan Phyfe and early American suite, including a boudoir chair upholstered in silk damask. The silk spreads blend with the lovely drapes, a boudoir lamp and the rest of the furnishings. Here there is another fine quality Axminster rug of popular shade and pattern.

In the den there are what officials of the corporation describe as the finest studio couch that is made, a mahogany desk and chair, an artistic lamp and an Axminster rug of good quality on the floor.

The kitchen is of special interest. Bright and spacious in silver and green color scheme, the completeness and practical arrangement leave nothing to be desired in housekeeping convenience. The colored porcelain sink, 8 feet long, with double drain board; built-in Oxford cabinets, electric refrigerator, folding dinette set and console gas range appeal to the modern housewife, saving time and labor.

On the second floor there are three very large, bright rooms with large wardrobe closets, linen and cedar closets; two beautiful colored tile baths, one in green and one in blue, with built-in tub and shower, Venetian mirror medicine cabinets and chromium-plated fixtures.

These new Cafritz lifetime homes represent the utmost value for the money spent and excel in those com-

HOMES DISREGARD NEEDS OF CHILDREN

Closet Hooks, Electric Buttons Usually Placed Too High for Little Ones.

Too often the needs of children are overlooked in the design of houses, declares a practical mother. Closet hooks and electric buttons are placed too high for them. Lavatories are also too high.

Modern child-training demands that we encourage our children to be independent and to help themselves, even at the early age of 2 or 3 years. They must learn to hang up their own hats and coats and put them on.

With this challenge to designers of houses, Ruth Leigh, who terms herself an average housewife, gives in the American Architect a number of practical suggestions by which a house can be made to serve the needs of the young at all stages of their development.

"In planning a house for a family with children," she says, "I maintain that you must consider an entirely different set of living habits. For one thing, there's the questions of closets. Although intended for the use of both adults and children, most hall closets are adult affairs.

"When planning hall closets for homes with children may I suggest that architects include a row of low hooks for little coats and sweaters and a low shelf for hats, mittens, roller skates and school books? Also a special low shelf near the floor, with divided compartments, that will keep rubbers and overshoes in pairs. And, please, plenty of light in hall closets, so mothers won't have to grope blindly in the dark to meet the inevitable 'I did look in the hall closet, mother, and my rubbers simply aren't there.'

"In bedrooms, playrooms or nurseries for children we need shallow closets with shelves for keeping toys. Shelves in the ordinary clothes closet are for children to get at them. Since modern educators taboo the old-fashioned toy box, we must have shelves, and if they were built in a shallow closet so youngsters could get at their own toys and put them back it would be a tremendous help.

"May I suggest, for children's rooms, an electric light switch at the door, placed low, so children can reach it?

"When planning a bathroom off the children's room, a low toilet and low lavatory are particularly useful in encouraging self-help and independence Otherwise a bathroom of adult proportions becomes cluttered with foot stools, baby-toilet seat contraptions or little ladders."

forts and conveniences which make for hominess and happiness. The personal attention and direct supervision of the Cafritz Organization in every detail of design and construction assure the buyer of enduring satisfaction.

Much Money Saved.

Through volume of construction, large financial resources, tremendous purchasing power and, in addition, decreased cost of construction, the Cafritz Organization enables the purchaser to save hundreds of dollars, thereby getting a better home for less money. Officials of the company remind that it is this policy of sharing savings with the purchaser that has made the Cafritz lifetime homes the best buy in the city.

These homes at Fourth and Emerson streets northwest, with their high elevation, the wide street and open court effects of their residential square, are healthful places to live in. Then, too, they are very close to the beautiful Grant and Sherman circles, and just one block from transportation and school.

Many new and novel features have been incorporated in these homes. They include the new step-down living room, a smart innovation, offering a distinctive treatment for attractive furnishings. You go down two steps into this room, which is below the general first-floor level. The dining room is raised and adjoins the living room.

Radiation Is Concealed.

All of these homes have concealed radiation, giving additional wall space for placing of furniture. Numerous other features in these charming homes include many electrical outlets and radio outlet, bronze screens and metal weather stripping throughout. The bright and dry cellars contain double laundry trays, instantaneous hot-water heater, Red Jacket heating plant and toilet.

Modern in detail, these homes are of the colonial, red tapestry brick, with mansard roofs, three wide covered porches, breakfast porch and sleeping porch, fully screened. They are on large sodded lots, 142 feet deep and have detached garages. These have "over-the-top" doors and are easy to get in or out of. A child can easily operate these counterbalance sliding doors. The paved street and alley improvements are paid for by the Cafritz organization.

3,000 Homes Built.

With more than 3,000 Cafritz lifetime homes built and sold to satisfied purchasers, officials of the organization state that this is, without a doubt, the greatest home value ever offered by it. The record proves the confidence the buying public has in the sound construction of the Cafritz home.

That it is easy to own one of these exceptional home values is apparent when one realizes that cash payments are as low as $500. The large cash payment in the days gone by permitted only the well to do to own their homes. Today home ownership under this cash-payment plan is available to the man of average means with the monthly payments to meet the individual requirements of the buyer.

At the price of only $9,250 you can now live in a luxurious home within reach of your moderate income.

Police Method Exhibit Plans Are Abandoned

St. Louis (U.P.).—Plans for a comprehensive exhibit of modern police methods of administering criminal justice, to have been a part of the Chicago World's Fair, have been abandoned, according to Joseph A. Gerk, former president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Plans for the exhibit were made in 1930, while Gerk was president of the association. Gerk said the fair commission had been advised it would not be possible to supply the exhibit because no means had been found to raise the funds to finance it.

"WOULDN'T BE WITHOUT ALL Gas convenience"

"Two years ago we bought this house from W. C. and A. N. Miller, the builders. They had advertised it as an all-Gas-Convenience house. 'Convenience is right! After experiencing the wonderful comfort and freedom of automatic gas heat, and automatic gas water heater, and a modern gas range, we wouldn't be without these all-gas conveniences.

(Signed) WM. W. BRIDE,
4763 Indian Lane.

There are thousands in Washington who agree with Mr. Bride, who is Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia. They have bought homes advertised by leading builders as All-Gas-Convenience homes, and now, after living in them, are delighted with their purchases. They find the comfort, cleanliness, ease of gas appliances everything the builder claimed and more. They know now that when the builder installed gas he was thinking of their permanent convenience and satisfaction.

MODERNIZE with Gas

Modern gas appliances in a home are a sign of a conscientious builder interested in satisfied customers. And they are a sign, too, of a home in which comfort and convenience reign supreme.

Stocks Refuse to Follow Up Friday's Buoyant Advance

Prices Drop Three-Tenths in Day's Turnover of 482,705 Shares.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Stocks interrupted a week of improvement with a slight setback today, but the market was dull as ever and the average loss was of minor proportions on a turnover of 482,705 shares.

Developments in the debt situation during market hours were comprised chiefly of reports that Great Britain and France were discussing the matter of reservations which might be strung to their settlements. Meanwhile, the pound was rising 3 cents, a net gain of about 7 cents for this week, and francs were slipping to a new low, just a hair's breadth under the theoretical gold point at which some metal has already been shipped.

Stock trading faced the uncertainty of what the Steel Corporation would show in its monthly tonnage report, since the figures did not appear until closing time. Steel shares were inclined to heaviness, especially United States Steel preferred, which apparently anticipated no favorable change in the back log statistics.

American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, American Tobacco B and American Can lost a point net, otherwise changes by market leaders were mostly limited to minor fractions. Stocks of the two leading electrical companies firmed, posssibly because both now contain "melons" in the form of the radio distribution. Rails were a trifle easy with industrials and utilities. Car loadings for the post-holiday week ended December 3 jumped 53,579, but the decrease from 1931 was larger than occurred in the previous week.

Break-up of the world copper conference had been anticipated for several days. Its chief immediate aftermath was a weakening of red metal quotations abroad. The price dipped under 5 cents and, although domestic levels held unchanged, there was much uncertainty as to just what would happen in markets generally. Tariff situations, it is pointed out, have somewhat changed marketing problems in the past year.

Railroad news promises to be prominent over the near term. Not only will the national transportation committee's report be forthcoming before the winter is over but a new wage agreement will have to be reached and the Interstate Commerce Commission will pass on today's request for an extension of the freight surcharges that expire March 31. These charges this year have been applied to loans by the Railroad Credit Corporation.

Copper Price Cut As Meeting Fails

Export Market Drops to 4.925 Cents as Buying Stagnates.

New York, Dec. 10 A.P.).—Developments in the copper trade traceable to the unsuccessful outcome of the international conference of producers were reflected today only in the export market, where the price dropped to 4.925 cents a pound, against a former level of slightly above 5 cents.

It was reported that buying came to a standstill abroad on the news of the conference break-up. The domestic price is holding around 5 cents, and some interests in the trade are of the opinion that the existing import tariff will serve to keep the market here from following any substantial decline abroad.

Domestic producers, it is asserted, are adhering to the 1932 production rate for next year, and are willing to cooperate in keeping production below consumption.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

What the Stock Market Did

	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	166	296
Declines	149	129
Unchanged	139	123
Total issues traded	454	548

Stocks.

The week of improvement was interrupted as stocks abandoned Friday's cheerful advance and lost .3 point. The short day's turnover was 482,705 shares. Uncertainities in industry and in the outcome of earnings reports figured in most of the declines. Utility and rail losses were fractional.

Bonds.

High-grade foreign and domestic loans showed quiet strength and the market gained .2 point. The turnover, $5,318,000, was the largest short-session sale since early in October. Heaviest trading was in French 7s, which advanced to 120.

Curb.

The rate of dealing slowed down, but previous advances were retained. Sales for the half day increased to 80,000 shares, compared with 70,000 last Saturday. Utility issues were under moderate pressure. Oils held steady. There was some activity in gold stocks.

Wheat.

Brisk price upturns followed reports of irreparable damages to the domestic winter wheat crops. Lively speculative buying sent the market up ¾ to 1 cent. Other grains joined the advance. December wheat sold at 45⅞ to 46 cents.

Cotton.

Reactions followed an early rally, and some losses were recorded on realizing and Southern selling. March closed at 5.87, with the general market 1 point down to 2 up. Liverpool cables attributed steadiness of that market to covering and trade calling.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the Stock Exchange was stagnant. Strength in sterling exchange, which closed at $3.25¾, helped maintain firmness in British funds which, however, ended below the best. International issues were firmer on favorable Wall street reports and the market closed irregular.

Berlin—The boerse had a quiet session and closed firm.

Paris—After opening hesitant, prices on the bourse became firmer. Led by international issues, which were favorably influenced by firmness in Wall street, prices advanced generally. The closing was firm.

U. S. TREASURY RECEIPTS.

(Associated Press.)

Treasury receipts for December 8 were $7,724,671.08; expenditures, $20,089,573.58; balance, $536,616,495.62. Customs duties for eight days of December were $6,183,323.23.

CURB HOLDS PROFITS IN SLOWER TRADING

Utilities Suffered Heaviest as Dealing Mounts to 80,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The pace of trading slowed down on the curb market today, prices holding steadily to their recent gains. Transfers approximated 80,000 shares against 70,000 last Saturday.

The utilities were under moderate pressure, although price changes were confined to narrow fractions. Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric and American Superpower, dipped slightly. Cities Service was steady. United Light & Power "A" gained a fraction. American Superpower Second Preferred, ordinarily a quiet performer, was driven down 6 points in fairly heavy selling. The First Preferred moved up about 2.

Cord Corporation gained more than a point in moderately active buying, presumably based on expectation that motor stocks might respond favorably to the usual expressions of optimism over the forthcoming automobile shows.

Deere pushed through 10 for a gain of about a point, reflecting the better performance of Chicago wheat. Swift issues were steady. A. O. Smith jumped 2 in quiet dealings.

The oils displayed a steady undertone, Standard of Indiana and Gulf edging up a small fraction each. Aluminum was up slightly. Newmont was steady. There was some churning in the gold stocks, but little public following was attracted.

Willys-Overland Plant Will Increase Workers

Toledo, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The Willys-Overland Company announced today that it expects to have 4,600 men at work in its plant by January 1.

The company will start production on its 1933 line of cars and half-ton trucks Wednesday. There are now 1,600 men at work and J. A. Sheldon, works manager, said this number will be increased gradually to 4,600.

Raw Silks Close Firm.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Raw silk futures closed firm; sales 190 bales. December, 1.46B; March, 1.46B; May, 1.46B.

Removal of Exchange Curbs Need of Trade, Banker Says

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—In a review of international conditions, issued today, the banking firm of J. Henry Schroder & Co., expresses the opinion that the removal of exchange restrictions, now operative in about thirty-five countries, is essential for a restoration of trade.

Pointing out that the problem should be solved by the forthcoming world economic conference, the review raises the point that if credit could be granted by a consortium of central banks, for the purpose of freeing trade from exchange restrictions "their use could not fail to stimulate trade and there general and concerted adoption would rob them of the terrors still roused on the continent and elsewhere by the recollections of the fate of the German mark and the Austrian crown in the period of unrestrained inflation."

"Exchange restrictions," it is added, "while imposed in order to give an artificial appearance of strength to the currencies of the countries that indulge them, are quite ineffective from this point of view because they deceive nobody, but are most unfortunately effective in checking trade and making all economic intercourse difficult."

Whether the removal of restrictions of monetary transfers can be carried out by a process of devaluation of currencies, or by a provision of credits by the chief central banks, the review holds that drastic steps to correct the situation are necessary.

"If ever there was an occasion for bold measures," it concludes, "surely the present time stands out as demanding them. With markets glutted, producers facing ruin and consumers unable to buy because the stream of trade has ceased to flow, the world's business arrangements are discredited. But it can not be believed that this state of things will be allowed to endure indefinitely."

Pound Advances; Franc Drops Again

Paris Money Declines to New 1932 Low; Gold Outgo Blamed.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The British pound sterling and the French franc ran in opposite directions in foreign exchange competition today, the former rallying 3 cents to a cable rate of $3.26⅓, while the latter dropped 1-16 of a point to 3.90⅝ cents, a new 1932 low.

The franc rate was just below the point where it is theoretically profitable to ship gold from Paris to New York. There were unconfirmed rumors that gold shipments were either under way or contemplated. Financial circles were of the opinion that, unless the franc rallies soon, a heavy gold movement toward the United States may be expected. The weakness of the franc was attributed in some quarters to the knowledge that the French budget may be disturbed by a growing deficit and that the republic's foreign trade, handicapped by new British tariffs, has been failing to show any marked improvement.

Dealers believed that the recovery of sterling was due principally to short covering due to British hopes of a possible debt revision downward after payment of the war loan installment next Thursday. There was little if any evidence of support from the Bank of England control. The Canadian dollar and Scandinavian exchanges moved up in sympathy with the pound and the German mark and Dutch guilder were slightly higher. Japanese yen eased moderately.

Alcohol Yield Cut 19,063,433 Gallons

Industries' Lighter Demand Blamed; Wine Output Also Declines.

(Associated Press.)

A decline of 19,063,433 gallons in the amount of industrial alcohol produced in this country in the fiscal year 1932, was reported yesterday by Dr. J. M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol.

In his annual report the commissioner said production of alcohol totaled 146,950,912 gallons. He attributed the decrease from the year before to lessened demand by industries using alcohol as raw material, and to the bureau's policy of limiting production to the country's requirements. The cereal beverage producers turned out 85,741,598 gallons, a drop of 11,501,930 from 1931.

Six whisky distilleries operating under permit, produced 1,711,028 gallons, a drop of 724,602, while two rum distilleries produced 1,097,777 taxable gallons. The commissioner said there now are 14,480,929 taxable gallons of distilled spirits in warehouses, and wine in storage on June 30 totaled 18,659,481 gallons. Wine production in twelve months totaled 5,210,453 gallons, a drop of 1,448,400.

BONDS SENT HIGHER IN FIRMER MARKETS

Prices Gain Two-Tenths as Half-Day Sales Rise to $5,318,000.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The quiet strength of highest grade domestic and foreign loans was the feature of today's brief bond market.

It was also the most active Saturday session since early in October, sales totaling $5,318,000, par value. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate issue was up two-tenths of a point.

The day's heaviest trading was in French government 7s, which advanced to 120, equaling their high for the year. French 7½s gained 1½ points to 127⅜, another new 1932 top, on a few transactions. Firmness was also displayed by loans of Australia, Great Britain, Poland, Berlin, Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark and Canada. The Argentines and Japanese were rather heavy. The Germans were irregular.

There were few important changes in the secondary domestic groups, freight car loadings and the unfilled tonnage figures of U. S. Steel were about in line with expectations. The foreign debt situation apparently was without any pronounced influence.

New high levels for the year were attained by American Telephone collateral 5s, Columbus Railway Power & Light 5½s, Pacific Telephone first 5s and Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s. Small gains were recorded by bonds of Detroit Edison, Brooklyn Union Gas, Childs Co., National Steel, Portland General Electric, Paramount Publix, Shell Union Oil, Texas Corporation, U. S. Rubber and Western Union. Bush Terminal Building 5s jumped 4½ points.

The rails were not especially enthusiastic, although the majority were able to retain moderate advances with a few last-minute rallies. The debt improvement was shown by some liens of Boston & Maine, Alleghany Corporation, Erie, M-K-T, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Southern and Union Pacific.

The United States Government list was barely steady and, outside of Treasury 3s and 3⅛s, was somewhat dull. The latter loans were up fractionally.

Sinking Fund Spending Opposed in Argentina

Buenos Aires, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Opposition to proposals by political party leaders for partial suspension of the government's sinking fund payments today was voiced editorially by La Prensa, leading Argentine newspaper.

The money thus saved, said the editorial, would doubtlessly be employed in public works, "therefore the procedure would not lighten public expenditure" and "would simply be a fraudulent use of funds for electorial purposes."

Michigan Auto Factories Recall 12,000 Workers

Detroit, Dec. 10 A.P.).—Work on new model production by a number of Michigan automobile plants has resulted in the recalling of approximately 12,000 workers. Some of these already have begun work, while others will report during the next week or ten days.

The Cadillac Motor Car Co. announced the recalling of 3,250 men; the Hudson Motor Car Co. will bring back 4,200; the Olds Motor Works and the Fisher Body Co., 4,000, while smaller numbers have been notified to return by other plants.

The Hudson Motor Car Co. said its production schedule called for the expenditure of $12,000,000 on materials and parts.

Two Closed Banks Will Pay Dividends

New York State Official Plans Christmas Present for Depositors.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Superintendent of Banks Joseph A. Broderick announed today a Christmas present he hopes to give depositors in the closed Globe Bank & Trust Co. and the Bank of Europe Co.

He said he had petitioned the Supreme Court for approval to pay dividends of 10 per cent to depositors in the two banks and added that the dividends are to be paid, if possible, before Christmas. If the dividend payment is approved 27,000 depositors in the Globe Bank & Trust Co. will receive $400,000, and 18,000 depositors in the Bank of Europe Co. will get $900,000.

This dividend will make 80 per cent of deposits paid or made available to depositors of the Globe Bank & Trust and 60 per cent to depositors of the Bank of Europe.

WHEAT VALUES GAIN ON LIVELIER BUYING

Lasting Damage to Winter Crop Also Is Factor; Other Grains Up.

Chicago, Dec 10 (A.P.).—Brisk upturns in grain values today went hand in hand with lively speculative buying and with authoritative assertions of irrepassable damage to domestic winter wheat.

Reports that President-elect Roosevelt would demand abolition of the Farm Board contributed impetus to buying of wheat and other grains. Another stimulating factor was announcement that the new Argentine wheat crop was officially estimated at 232,000,000 bushels, compared with private forecasts heretofore that ranged as high as 280,000,000.

Wheat closed firm at almost the day's top, ¾ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish; corn, ¼ to ⅝ up; oats, ⅛ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 20 cents.

Winter Wheat Loss.

Sharp notice by wheat traders was taken of a statement by a leading crop expert that regardless of favorable weather no recovery of injured domestic winter wheat could be expected next spring over large sections Southwest and that only partial recovery could be had over still larger sections. The prospect, he said, pointed to severe damage. It was explained that recoveries came only to crops that had a good root growth, but that this season the plants which showed poorly had inferior roots, and their condition was aggravated by the rigors of low temperature.

Advice current today indicated that only light snows had fallen in dry sections of winter wheat territory Southwest and that drought and lack of protection from cold was largely unrelieved. Meanwhile, traders were stirred by a sudden advance in rye quotations, a result of purchase orders from the Northwest. The orders were associated with reports that enactment of farm allotment measures, omitting an excise tax on rye, would bring about enlarged use of rye as a bread-making material. In some cases, rye advanced to more than 5½ cents above Wednesday's finish.

Corn and oats moved up with wheat and as a result of curtailed receipts of corn. The country refuses to sell corn at present levels.

Provisions responded to firmness of the hog market.

COTTON RALLY CUT BY SOUTHERN SALES

March Closes at 5.87 as Prices Stand 1 Point Down to 2 Up.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—An early advance in cotton today was followed by reactions on week-end realizing and Southern selling.

March contracts, which had sold up to 5.98 on the early demand or 13 points net higher and 45 points above the low of Thursday, declined to 5.87 and closed at that figure. The final tone was barely steady with prices net 1 point lower to 2 points higher.

Overnight buying orders attracted by the steadiness of yesterday were reported in the market at the start. Opening 7 to 12 points higher, active months sold about 10 to 13 points net higher with January advancing to 5.86 and May to 6.08. Houses with continental and Japanese connections were buyers and there was a scattering trade demand.

Prices eased in the late trading on Southern hedging and week-end realizing. January sold off to 5.75 and May to 5.98. Closing quotations were at or within a point of the lows.

Liverpool cables attributed the steadiness of that market to covering and trade calling promoted by the advance in Alexandria. Egyptian cotton futures in the Alexandria market were 26 to 38 points higher. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 178,756 bales against 196,069 last year.

CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows:

Total surplus and undivided profits, $902,622,100 (unchanged).

Total net demand deposits (average), $42,870,000 (decrease).

Time deposits (average), $6,099,000 (decrease).

Clearings week ended today, $2,693,272,996.

GOODS MARKETS.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Sales of cotton goods for the week were quite full, but prices were very low on finished and unfinished lines. Wool goods mills are supplied with business through January to the extent of 55 per cent average capacity, according to trade reports here. Rayon production is closely sold through January. Burlaps are steady and quiet.

BANKS TAKING OVER VARIED TRADE LINES

Most Any Business Found in Hands of Finance Institutions.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Most any bank these days is likely to be found in most any business.

The bankers call it handling "going assets." What happens is this: A corporation defaults and the bank is forced to take it over in foreclosure; a business man dies without a logical successor and the bank finds itself in charge of a trust which includes the business; a widow is unable to manage a concern left by her husband and the bank takes it in voluntary trust, or the creditors of a concern force it into bankruptcy and the bank becomes a receiver.

So many bankers go around worrying about waking up tomorrow and finding a fishmarket on their hands.

Bank Gets Theater.

The City Bank Farmers Trust has just taken over, in foreclosure, the Hippodrome—home of the spectacle show which has lately been devoted to vaudeville and motion pictures. The Irying Trust Co. is running, as trustee in bankruptcy, the United Cigar chain.

The Chicago Title & Trust Co. operates 45 motion-picture theaters in and around that city. It is familiarly known as the C. T. & T. circuit.

The officers of the First National Bank of Memphis, Tenn., direct the policy of an old New England, dyed-in-the-wool Republican newspaper.

Chain of Shoe Stores.

The First National Bank of Atlanta, Ga., was left with a large chain of shoe stores on its hands in 1929. The Fulton National Bank in the same city found itself manager of a large apartment hotel and was fortunate enough to have a former hotel manager on its staff of officers.

The late Col. Griffith J. Griffith, of Los Angeles, left money to build an observatory and hall of science and a Greek theater in Los Angeles' Griffith Park. His will gave the job to the Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles.

The Merchants Bank & Trust Co. of Jackson, Miss., took over a delta plantation of many thousand acres and got along well with its tenant farmers—who liked the idea of partnership with a bank.

Bancorporation Votes To Cut Capital Stock

Minneapolis, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Northwest Bancorporation stockholders today voted approval of a directors' plan to reduce the authorized capital stock to $2,000,000 from $5,000,000 and shares to no par from $50.

Setting aside a reserve of $14,000,000 for contingencies was approved also.

Crude Rubber Closes Steady.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed quiet and steady. December, 3.24; January, 3.25 nominal; March, 3.31 bid. Smoked ribbed, spot, closed 3.25 nominal.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Steel prices unchanged.

SINGER BOARD VOTES USUAL $2 DIVIDEND

National Steel Also Will Pay Regular Return; Fox Films Lose.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Singer Manufacturing Co. today voted a regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share, payable December 31, to stock of record December 10.

Swift & Co. today reported for the year ended October 29 net loss of $5,337,789. In the preceding fiscal year the company had net income of $8,235,301, which included $7,558,308 profit on sale of capital assets.

Directors of National Steel Corporation today declared a regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a share, payable December 30 to stock of record December 20.

The Fox Film Corporation and wholly owned subsidiary, controlled or affiliatel companies today reported for the 39 weeks ended September 24 net loss of $9,474,336, compared with net loss of $2,851,996 for the 39 weeks ended September 26, 1931.

Directors of Novadel-Agene Corporation today increased the annual dividend basis of the common stock to $5 from $4 by declaring a quarterly payment of $1.25, payable January 2 to stock of record December 21. The company controls American and Canadian patent rights on two processes for bleaching and maturing cereal products.

Federated Metals Corporation, which has merged with American Smelting & Refining Co., today declared a liquidating dividend of $14 a share on the common stock, payable on or after December 12. The payment is being made out of proceeds from disposal of American smelting bonds received by Federated in the recent sale.

Inventories of the corporation will be sold in the next two years, and proceeds therefrom, it was said, would yield additional liquidating dividends.

Directors of the Northern Securities Co. today reduced the semiannual dividend to $2.50 payable January 9 to stock of record December 15. This is the second reduction since June when the company declared a semiannual payment of $3 against $4.50 previously.

Directors of the Safeway Stores Corporation today declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a common share, thus reducing the disbursement on the stock from a $5 to a $3 annual basis. The dividend is payable January 1 to stock of record December 19.

Orders for Steel 28,737 Tons Less

Total in November Reaches 1,968,301; Reduction Expected in Street.

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation decreased 28,739 tons in November to a total of 1,968,301 tons, the corporation announced today. In the three preceding months the backlog showed small gains, but prior to August, the corporation reported sixteen consecutive monthly decreases.

Wall street had looked for some reduction in November because of estimates of lowered mill activity and widening evidence of a considerable drop in demand for steel products from the autumn peak level.

The upturn from August through October amounted to 30,738 tons.

COMMITTEEMAN

EDWARD C. BALTZ, Appointed a committeeman of the United States Building & Loan League.

CONTRACTS AWARDED TOTAL $7,029,200

Middle Atlantic States Report $2,000,000 Drop in November.

Construction contracts awarded in the Middle Atlantic States during the period from November 1 through November 15, 1932, totaled $7,029,200, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. During the first half of October a total of $9,072,000 was reported while in the corresponding period of November, 1931, a contract volume of $11,182,800 was reported.

Construction undertakings during October in the Middle Atlantic area were larger than those reported for September, but showed a decline from October, 1931. October awards totaled $15,444,900, as compared with $12,755,900 for September and $42,460,300 for October of last year. Gains over September were shown in each of the four major construction classifications, except public works, for which a decline was reported.

October residential building contracts totaled $4,618,600 as compared with $3,694,700 in September and $8,107,600 in October of last year. The gain in October residential awards continues the improvement noted in our bulletin for September.

For the elapsed period of 1932 this district produced a contract total of $197,415,900, as against a total of $318,647,400 for the corresponding ten months of 1931. Losses from last year were sustained in each of the four major construction classes, the smallest relative decline occurring in nonresidential building, while public utilities showed the largest relative loss. In the case of nonresidential work contracted for during the first ten months of 1932, public buildings accounting for more than 40 per cent of the total, showed a contract volume almost twice as large as that reported for the same period of 1931.

October awards for construction showed gains over September in Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia; all other States in the territory reported losses from September. The District of Columbia was alone to show a gain over October, 1931. In Maryland and Virginia gains were shown over September in commercial building. In eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, and Maryland increases over September were shown for factory building, chiefly due to modernization. Increases over September were scored for one and two-family houses in southern New Jersey, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia.

Of the principal cities in the territory October contracts for construction of all classes showed gains over September in Reading, Trenton, Baltimore, Washington and Norfolk. Gains over October, 1931, were shown in Scranton, Baltimore and Washington. Larger contracts for small house construction were reported as contrasted with the September record for Scranton, Camden, Trenton, Baltimore, Washington and Norfolk.

WIN IN LETTER CONTEST

Three women in the Washington area were announced as winners in the national letter contest conducted by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. in the United States, embracing more than 500 principal cities. The prizes awarded to the successful entrants were Westinghouse refrigerators. John J. Boobar, of the Edgar Morris Sales Co., presented certificates entitling winners to the refrigerators. LOAN LEAGUE NAMES TWO CAPITAL MEN

C. C. James and E. C. Baltz to Be Valuable Aids on Committees.

By THOMAS CAHILL.

In the appointment of C. Clinton James and Edward C. Baltz, local building and loan association officials, to important committees of the national organization, Ward B. Whitlock, Springfield, Ill., president of the United States Building and Loan League, is to be congratulated on his wise selections.

Both local appointees have had long experience in the affairs of the District of Columbia Council of Building and Loan Associations and the national body.

Mr. James, an official of the Columbia Permanent Building Association, is a past president of the national league, national legislative committee chairman and a director of the national organization. He has been appointed a member of the committee on mortgage foreclosure, redemption procedure and cost.

Perpetual Building Official.

Montgomery Democrats Thanked by Roosevelt

Members of the Roosevelt-Garner-Tydings-Lewis Club of Montgomery County were thanked for their efforts and good wishes in the recent campaign in a letter received from President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt by J. Bond Smith, of Takoma Park, Md., president of the club. The letter also thanked them for a telegram of congratulation sent the victor just after election.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote that the enthusiastic telegram touched him deeply and stated: "It is my earnest wish that I may always deserve the confidence which you have shown in me."

Dental Society to Hear Noted New York Doctor

Nationally known as an authority on dental procedure, Dr. Irving R. Hardy, of New York City, will be the chief speaker at the meeting of the District of Columbia Dental Society in George Washington University Tuesday at 8 p. m. "Aids to Esthetic Denture Construction" will be discussed.

A special lecturer at Tufts College, Boston, Dr. Hardy has spoken on the same subject before the national conference of the American Dental Association.

Astronomer Claims Stars Much Closer Than Figured

Dr. Williams Explains Haze of Gases Throws Color Table Out of Gear; Estimates Actual Distance One-Third of Theoretical.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The stars are not so far away as has been figured and the island universe of which the earth is a part seems to be only half as large as has been estimated, says Dr. Evan Gwyn Williams, Cambridge, England, astronomer.

He presented evidence that astronomers have been looking through a galactic haze, which just made the things in the sky seem more distant than they really are.

Before the Journal Club of the Mount Wilson Observatory he disclosed results of studies he has made for the past year as a commonwealth fellow from the British Solar Observatory at Cambridge.

Carrying out a new method for study of star temperatures evolved at Greenwich Observatory, he found evidence that some stars are only one-third as far as the observed color would indicate.

This, he said, developed evidence that estimates of distance based on previous color-index systems were quite exaggerated, due to some residual gases, perhaps chiefly calcium gas, between the earth and the stars.

In other words, astronomers have been looking at the stars through somewhat the same sort of haze that makes the sun appear red at sunset, and, therefore, have not been observing the stars in their true color. This galactic haze, acting as an absorbing factor, would make a white star appear yellow.

"The estimate of the diameter of the Milky Way galaxy, the island universe of which our earth is a part, has been of the order of 150,000 light years, but now that figure probably will have to be cut in half," he said.

A light year, yard stick for astronomers, being six million million miles, the Milky Way island universe might be figured as 125,000 times six million million miles across.

MANUFACTURER WANTS DISTRIBUTOR

Exclusive franchise for District of Columbia. Permanent income that should run into thousands of dollars per annum. Must be prepared to make cash investment and have proven record and good character. Write full details. Box 41, Washington Post.

Attention, Automobile Salesmen

Be sure to tune in on WRC at 11 a. m., Monday, December 12, for an announcement of great interest to all automobile salesmen will be made by America's Leading Manufacturer. If interested after hearing this program go to any dealer in or near Washington for further details.

MEN—STEADY WORK

We will hire 6 men at once who live in Washington, train them thoroughly at our local branch at our expense, and employ them immediately in permanent positions, full time.

Married men preferred, as these positions are responsible and we require no investment or deposit—but you must be reputable, and able to learn this work as taught. This is steady, profitable sales work, but our method of putting the prospect into the market for our invention is so unusual that you must be trained in it. While learning, new men must be satisfied on earning of $35 to $45 per week, but later can increase this substantially. Previous experience not important because our method is so unusual, but applicants must be willing to work hard and study to qualify for the higher incomes. Apply Monday morning, 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., at 201 Denrike Building, 1010 Vermont ave. nw.

Film Luminaries in Pairs Dominate Local Screens

AN ECHO FROM THE PAST AND SEVERAL PAT PAIRS

By NELSON B. BELL

PRECISELY what year it was would not matter, even if it could be summoned from a hazy memory.

The distinct—in fact, mildly vivid—recollection is that the letter reached the dramatic desk during the period of its incumbency by the late Ralph A. Graves, kindliest of men and most compassionate of critics, who was adjured by a sensitive and an earnest young English ingenue with the old Columbia Players to "temper justice with mercy" and so make smoother the path of an ambitious, youthful and conscientious actress, who, in the ardent pursuit of her career, had imagined herself too harshly reprimanded for a trivial lapse in characterization or some other minor dereliction in the performance of her professional duties.

The communication, I remember, led, as such things so often do in this most incorrigible of all the occupations, to an acquaintanceship that expanded into relationships of cordial friendliness as the Columbia season wore on, with understanding helpfulness accruing to both sides.

Perhaps it is solely for the reminiscent purposes of these Sabbath reveries that this circumstance has lingered so providentially in mind!

* * * *

FOR in the intervening years Miss Violet Heming has played many parts and written a fine record of achievement in the American theater. As a corollary of an actress' primary obligation to create a gallery of believable portraits for the stage, this sterling actress, who comes to the National tomorrow night with Roger Pryor in John Van Druten's "There's Always Juliet," second of the American Theater Society's subscription plays for the current season, has found time and opportunity to play what she believes to be the most comprehensive group of famous personages of theaterdom of any of her contemporary stars on Broadway.

For example, in "Within the Law" she played the role of Mary Turner, made famous by Jane Cowl in 1912, which dates the Bayard Veiller play almost in another generation. Then, too, Miss Heming has enacted the role of Mrs. Dane in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," one of the parts with which the name of Margaret Anglin is most brilliantly associated. Her first record-making role was as Wendy in "Peter Pan," the Barrie fantasy popularized in this country by Maude Adams.

As Lydia Languish, leading lady in the revival of "The Rivals," Miss Heming had as her distinguished predecessor Julia Marlowe. As Avonia Bunn, in a revival of "Trelawney of the Wells," she assumed the role identified with Elizabeth Tyree in an older day when that able actress was a great favorite with Broadway audiences. Another part actresses adore is that of Genevra in "The Jest," in which Miss Heming appeared opposite Basil Sydney in a revival of several years ago.

Time and a high tide of worthy vehicles have not had to wait for Miss Heming since those remote days when to a beautiful and competent young stock actress all critical pens seemed barbed!

* * * *

VIOLET HEMING, you should care to know, was born in Leeds, England, and is the daughter of Alfred Heming, a theatrical manager and producer. Her mother, Mabel Allen, was the original Glory Quayle in Hall Caine's "The Christian," in England, a part created in this country by Viola Allen.

Back still further, however, go Miss Heming's theatrical antecedents; back to John Heming, one of the owners of the old Globe Theater in London and partner of Henry Condell, who published the first folio of Shakespeare's works.

Miss Heming made her first stage appearance at the age of 7, when she was carried on for a performance of "The Bohemian Girl," given by the Mannes Opera Company, and sat contentedly on his knee while the gypsy king sang his aria. At fourteen, she essayed her first leading part as Rebecca in "Rebecca, of Sunnybrook Farm."

In the maturity of her gracious and ingratiating art, Miss Heming has appeared as leading woman with George Arliss in "Disraeli" and has scored decisively in "Loose Ends," "Spring Cleaning," "Sonya," "Three Faces East," "Jealousy," "This Thing Called Love, "Let Us Be Gay" (on the Pacific Coast) and "Ladies All."

Her career also has embraced frequent forays into the films and occasional excursions into vaudeville, when the two-a-day still survived as an institutionalized form of public entertainment.

In spite of the great part which the stage has played in her life, Violet Heming, so Mr. Vince McKnight, her avant courier, informs me, has wide interests in the fields of art, literature and sports.

She excels, it seems, in swimming and diving and is fond of walking, even in the rain, a result, no doubt, of her early English training. She is a good motorist and a splendid golfer.

In addition to all of which, she is known, also, among her friends as a musician. She is an insatiable reader and has developed interesting theories on criticism, an eventuation which ought not to have been difficult for Ralph and me to forecast away back there in the days when the world was young!

* * * *

OF Mr. Pryor it seems hardly necessary to speak at length, so frequent have been his recent visits. An alumnus of a stock experience a little later than Miss Heming's in Washington, he, too, has gone on to greater things and a measure of footlighted glory.

Since his days as leading man with Mr. Cochran's National Theater Players, Roger Pryor has taken on the stature as an actor that his resident work here so eloquently presaged. Vivid in the minds of many local theatergoers is his spirited performance in that sprightly

Jean Harlow, appearing this week with Clark Gable in "Red Dust"—Palace.

HOW FRENCH FIGHT CRIME BASIS OF A MYSTERY HIT

Crime in America could be reduced 15 per cent in a year; in five years could be cut in half, if America only would adopt police systems followed in many European countries, particularly that of the French Surete.

The claim is made by L. E. Anselme, who for twelve years was a member of the Surete and who, in fact, helped organize much of its system.

Through the offices of Henri Didot, French consul in Los Angeles, Mr. Anselme was retained by RKO-Radio as technical director of "Secrets of the French Police," now at RKO-Keith's.

Anselme explained his conviction to Edward Sutherland, director of the picture, and to members of the cast, including Gwili Andre, Frank Morgan and John Warburton:

"In France the Surete is equipped and organized to act at once, right now, without a second's delay in any possible emergency," Anselme declares. "There we had an amazingly complete system of registry and records. Instantly we could produce a card bearing the complete physical description, Bertillon measurements and the life history of any citizen of France or visitor to that country. Every one is known. Every one's record is known. And their friends and associates are listed.

"Those are not criminal records, as the term is applied. Call it instead a registry system. And those records are available, at once, to the police and civil officials in all bureaus scattered over the country.

"Of what practical use is this system? It means everything in solving a crime, catching a criminal or finding a missing person. Crimes are solved by clews left by humans and by information supplied by humans. There is no mystery in detective work. The modern scientific criminologist is, first of all, a man patient under an ordeal of detail, a minute searching for facts, an elimination bit by bit until the one little fact remains, the fact which is the key to the search. Human beings supply those facts.

"It stands to reason that any police department with records of but 2,000 persons out of 50,000, as in an American city, is a handicapped department. The system of the Surete is not so handicapped."

In addition to the "French Police" feature, RKO-Keith's is also presenting, as a special added attraction, "The Isle of Desire," filmed in the South Sea Islands. Clothes are unknown to the natives, with the women noted for their physical charms. The picture, however, is not given over entirely to this phase, there being many unexpected thrills of adventure in the story.

A Tom Howard one-reel subject, "The Acid Test;" a Krazy Kat Cartoon and the Pathe News round out the current program at the Fifteenth street theater.

A Comedy-Romance Supported by Ace Vaudeville Turns

Based on an original story by Barry Conners and Philip Klein, directed by Raoul Walsh and with the featured roles played by Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy, "Me and My Gal," the new new Fox comedy-romance, is now the attraction at Loew's Fox Theater, in connection with a vaudeville presentation, headed by Molly Picon, and including as an added attraction, James Kirkwood in a comedy skit.

"Me and My Gal" tells a dramatic and at the same time a humorous story of a fresh young detective attached to the radio car squad who falls in love with a flip young girl, who is cashier in a restaurant. Their romance, growing out of a flirtation, flourishes and eventually leads to the capture of a murderer for whom a reward of $10,000 is offered, a neat little sum with which to start housekeeping.

Spencer Tracy won acclaim for his portrayal of "Killer Mears," in "The Last Mile," when it played on the New York stage. He made his screen debut in "Up the River," and has since played featured roles in "Quick Millions," "Disorderly Conduct," "Young America," "Society Girl," "The Painted Woman" and "She Wanted a Millionaire," in which he was also cofeatured with Miss Bennett.

Joan Bennett is one of the famous Bennett family, whose father, mother and sisters have been and are now in the movies. Some of her recent pictures are "She Wanted a Millionaire," "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," "Careless Lady," "Week Ends Only" and "Wild Girl."

In "Me and My Gal," you will see some of the silent film stars in important roles. One in particular is George Walsh, as the killer, who makes a sensational escape. Afterward he and his gangsters rob a bank and the killer is brought to justice by Tracy.

Molly Picon, who is direct from European triumphs, is considered "incomparable." She is the favorite of the Yiddish and English stages in a new cycle of songs and character studies. James Kirkwood, a distinguished stage and screen star, is also on the same bill. He has appeared in many Broadway successes and the most recent of his films are "Devil's Holiday," "Worldly Gossip," "The Spoilers," "Holy Terror" and "Over the Hill." Kirkwood, being a stage star, knows what will please an audience, and has prepared a skit which is called "The Extra Man."

Others on the program are the Lee Gails, a group of six, in a dancing, singing and accordion act; Billy Farrell and Dad entertaining in a comedy dancing act, and Mangen Internationals, presenting "Sensational Gymnasts."

Phil Lampkin, conductor of the Loew's Fox concert orchestra, will offer as his overture, Franz Lehar's "Pantasie."

Another Film Tale Of Island Life on Ocean Garden Spot

The current screen offering at Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater is "Goona-Goona," the sensational and widely discussed picture, which has received enthusiastic praise from audiences wherever shown. It is a story of passionate, primitive love on a pagan island in the languorous Java Sea, showing how "goona-goona," the love drug, brings tragedy in inflaming the passions.

With a setting on a magic isle in the South Seas to the east of Java, and enacted by the well-formed and beautiful natives, "Goona-Goona" proves that there is something new under the sun. From its title to the last fadeout, it is said to be weird and exotic. "Goona-goona," meaning love drug, is familiar to most of the natives, and is the basis of the story. The spectator also views the panoramic magnificence of the island, the half-clad women, the temple dancers and the odd traditions and customs. The picture is not a travelogue, but a dramatic story full of action and suspense.

The picture concerns a prince of high caste, madly in love with the bride of a coolie. To break the nobleman's code is to court death. With passion fanned by the love powder administered to the native girl by an unscrupulous woman of the upper class, the factional strife becomes bitter between the coolie and the prince.

Two new Vitaphone short subjects, "Out of the Past," presenting views of unforgettable events and personalities, including Charlie Chaplin, Jack Dempsey and Douglas Fairbanks; "The Run Around," a two-reel comedy starring the Broadway funster, William Demarest, and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News complete the program.

In "Goona-Goona the producers, Andre Roosevelt and Armand Denis, have portrayed a wonder race in their native land.

The women are beautiful. They have supple, well-made bodies. Indeed, these savage folk are naive, simple and innocent. The men, too, are well proportioned, a perfect type of athlete.

For four years Roosevelt and Denis trained them for the dramatic story, a story with a vision and magnificence which makes it one of the great attractions of the season.

Roosevelt, a cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt, is a scholarly explorer, who has produced pictures in various parts of the world. Denis, research engineer for the Eastman Kodak Co., has been an adventurer all his life.

When the two settled on a South Sea island they had no intention of making a motion picture, but they were so taken up with the primitive beauty of the magic island, the lithe figures of the natives and their finely formed faces that they decided to remain and bring back to civilization the real story of a glorious people.

Gable and Harlow Shrewdly Cast in Jungle Romance

One of the most eagerly anticipated productions of the new movie season is now the attraction at Loew's Palace Theater, with the costarring of Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "Red Dust," filmization of the Wilson Collison play.

In "Red Dust," the locale is the picturesque region of Cochin, China, with Gable playing a hardened plantation foreman, who has forced himself to become completely brutalized in an effort to remain superior to his environment of deadly fever, tropical heat and treacherous natives.

To Miss Harlow falls the role of Vantine, born to the tropics, hard-boiled, perfectly at home on the plantation and equal in strength and animal pugnacity to the men.

Much of the advance praise of "Red Dust" emphasizes the perfect casting of this picture, Gable being perfectly fitted as the brutal rubber plantation overseer, who is constantly engaged in vicious fights with his subordinates, and thinks nothing of giving the coquettish Miss Harlow a slap across the face. Miss Harlow, likewise, is said to have a role which is even more made-to-order than her recent effective portrayal in "Red-Headed Woman."

The "other woman" of the dramatic triangle is played by Mary Astor. Gene Raymond is seen as Gable's rival and the remainder of the cast is made up of Donald Crisp, Tully Marshall, Forrester Harvey and Willie Fung.

And, on the same bill, there will be a Charlie Chase comedy entitled "Now We'll Tell One," a cartoon by that famous comedian, Mickey Mouse, "Klondike Kid," and the Metrotone news flashes.

A FAMOUS NEWS STORY IS MADE INTO A TENSE PLAY

"THE MATCH KING," First National's terrific dramatization of the incredible career of the prince of charlatans, who used women ruthlessly while he crashed the fortunes and shattered the hopes of millions, is the current screen offering at Warner Bros.' Earle Theater. Sid Gary, golden-voiced barytone, of radio fame, offering a new program of song hits, heads the stage portion of the program.

Adapted from the novel by Einar Thorvaldson, "The Match King" tells the story of a financial genius who is absolutely unscrupulous with women. He makes love to them and then, by his very fascination, forces them to his own ends.

Warren William plays the role of the ruthless Don Juan, with Lili Damita playing a role which is said to be a thinly disguised impersonation of a very well-known European-born actress for whom the late financial baron is popularly supposed to have had a romantic attachment which caused his downfall. Others in the cast are Glenda Farrell, Juliette Compton, Claire Dodd, Hardie Albright, John Wray and Harold Huber.

Sid Gary, who headlines the stage program, is the popular radio star who succeeded Mort Downey on the Camel Hour and was featured on Ziegfeld's Chrysler Radio Hour for thirteen weeks. In his barytone voice he will render a program of current song hits which he made popular on the air. Other acts are George Weist and Ray Stanton, Broadway comedians, in a music-comedy revue; Paul Kirkland in a novelty offering combining thrills and comedy; Dawn Sisters and Paul Cadieux in a dance spectacle, and Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies.

"Hey, Hey, Westerner," the third of the colorful Vitaphone musical shorts, with a cast headed by Eddie Nugent, Mae Madison, Georgia Shea, Sheila Terry, Otto Hoffman and many others; the new issue of the Graham McNamee newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude round out the program.

Although Lili Damita was not unwilling to play the vaguely disguised famous Swedish screen actress role in "The Match King," opposite Warren William, she played it with certain reservations.

Damita threw out many of the costumes designed originally to suggest the great Swedish star. Others, which gave the same general effect, without being such close imitations, were designed.

"I am not tall, not what you call 'lank'" Damita told Orry-Kelly, the Warner Bros.-First National designer. "I am not flat chested, so," demonstrating, "and my feet are small."

Chic Sale Without The Chin Whiskers Reveals True Self

"Stranger in Town," the Warner Bros. picture which is the current attraction at Loew's Columbia Theater, has in the cast, which bespeaks excellent entertainment, "Chic" Sale, Ann Dvorak, David Manners, Noah Beery and Raymond Hatton.

For the first time in his career, Sale will be seen as he really appears off screen, minus whiskers and white wig. The opening sequences of a "Stranger in Town," show him in the covered-wagon days as a young man, when he starts the town which later supports his general store, and in which he becomes the leading citizen.

Ann Dvorak, who is playing the part of Sale's granddaughter, is the sensational screen "find" of the year. This young actress, who started as a chorus girl in musical pictures, has climbed rapidly with each succeeding picture, beginning with "Sky Devils" and "Scarface," and later with "The Crowd Roars," "The Strange Love of Molly Louvain," and now portraying a leading role in "Stranger in Town."

David Manners, who has appeared in leading roles in "Journey's End," "The Last Flight," "The Millionaire," "Dracula" and "Man Wanted," carries a very important role in this feature as the juvenile lead, opposite Miss Dvorak.

This story of competition between "Chic's" country store and a chain store which opens in his town, affords him an excellent opportunity to deliver the finest characterization he has yet done on the screen. His is a fighting role; a fight of a pioneer against two irresistible forces.

Two Washington Favorites Here in Clever Comedy

A John Van Druten Play for National Starting Tomorrow

"There's Always Juliet," the latest comedy by John Van Druten, the brilliant young English dramatist, will be the welcome attraction at the National Theater, for the week commencing tomorrow evening, as the second subscription play of the American Theater Society. Violet Heming and Roger Pryor are the costars of the occasion.

"There's Always Juliet" is but one of the many fine plays by Van Druten to find favor with audiences both here and abroad, others being "Young Woodley," "After All," "London Wall," "Diversion" and "Return of the Soldier."

Of them all "Young Woodley," some seasons ago, and "There's Always Juliet," both last season and this, occasioned the most applause.

Van Druten's latest piece, "There's Always Juliet," contains the same freshness of viewpoint, authenticity in characterization, insight into life and living that have marked his numerous other works; besides, it is more plentifully sprinkled with laughter, adorned with gaysomeness.

The setting of the play is present-day London; its persons, young folks alert, self-contained, aggressive in the manner of youth of today. With one exception, they are all Britishers, the exception being a young American architect sojourning abroad. It is he who falls madly, tempestuously in love with a bright young London girl whom he casually meets at a cocktail party; she instantly shares his passion. There is no reason in their love at the start—it is headlong, precipitous.

The exceedingly amusing complications of the play have to do with their meeting the flaunting perplexities that swiftly arise, with their setting their house of love in order.

Mr. Van Druten's dialogue is rangy, pungent; his situations interesting, amusingly plausible.

Miss Heming and Mr. Pryor play the two leading parts; play them expertly, pertly, ever eagle-eyed for fun. There are other impersonations of fine quality by Lillian Brennard Tonge and John Graham Spacey.

"There's Always Juliet" is a delicious compound of fetching comedy sequences and delicately nuanced impersonations.

A New Conductor In First Concert By Philharmonic

To greet a new and young Russian conductor, to welcome again the cherished New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, are privileges granted to Washington when this famous orchestra gives the first of a series of three concerts on Tuesday afternoon at 4:30, at Constitution Hall, under the auspices of the T Arthur Smith bureau.

Issay Dobrowen, as conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony, made his debut in New York only last week. He was extolled highly for his fine dramatic fire, for his insight into his music, and also for a certain fidelity to tradition that was sane and gratifying. Young, but 38, Dobrowen won ovation after ovation at Carnegie Hall, and his program here will present two of the compositions of that momentous debut.

The Handel "Concerto Grosso," D minor, for string orchestra (No. 10) opens the program, followed by that intensely dramatic work of Richard Strauss, "Death and Transfiguration," one of his most exalted tone-poems, and closing with the Tschaikowsky great fifth symphony for which, in New York, Debrowen was "rapturously" applauded.

But the Philharmonic-Symphony itself brings to such scores so individual a wealth in all the inner voices, that to hear it again is always a delight. Toscanini and Bruno Walter are to conduct the later concerts.

Workshop Plays.

Drama directors and members of all drama groups in the city are invited by the Community Center Department, to be present at the second program of one-act plays to be presented in true "workshop" fashion, at Roosevelt Auditorium, Fifteenth and Webster streets, Tuesday evening, December 20, by "The Workshop," directed by Ruth Harsha McKenzie.

The plays will be presented without any attempt at scenery, props costumes, makeup or lighting, merely as classroom presentations.

The public is invited to be present.

Curley Club.

After extended rehearsals for the past six weeks, the Curley Club Players will present the farce comedy, "Leave It To Me," in St. Paul's Auditorium, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, Tuesday evening, December 13, at 8:15 o'clock. Proceeds from the performance will be applied to the scholarship fund of the organization.

At the conclusion of the presentations, an orchestra will furnish music for dancing until midnight.

MOLLY PICON, most popular of the younger stars of the Yiddish theater in New York, who this week will reveal her abundant talents as a feature of the stage bill at Loew's Fox.

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Those two bombastic chroniclers of the literary world, Gene Fowler and Ben Hecht, apply their microscope to the episodic life at Coney Island in their risque comedy, "The Great Magoo."

At times they approach the blistering, profane atmosphere of "The Front Page," and there are moments when they almost achieve the intermingled plot action of a boardwalk "Grand Hotel." It is an interesting play, but it is hardly excellent enough drama to survive the stringent competition of current Broadway.

More interesting than the play is the story of the collaboration of Fowler, who came down from the hills of Denver to become one of this country's major journalists and novelists, and Hecht, who emerged from Chicago's Loop district to acquire the same honors.

Both are graduates of the hardy, colorful type of journalism depicted in "The Frant Page," and they are writers who see and accept life as existence unadorned by any of the perfections the Puritans would give it.

THEIR characters in "The Great Magoo" are human sinners who have, underneath, a few noble qualities to atone for their misdeeds. They do not attempt to make them heroes or villains—merely men and women afflicted with the usual human frailties.

The play moves swiftly from a Coney Island sideshow to the boardwalk at night, then walks into cheap hall bedrooms, slinks into a garish, red-plushed drawing room and back again to a smelly rooming house.

It is the story of love that comes to two people who have been very much seared by life, but it is true love, nevertheless. The boy is a sideshow barker who is overly fond of the rolling of dice, the gin bottle and a blonde hula-hula dancer. The dancer, deeply in love with the boy, deserts both him and her Coney Island show when she is given a chance in a Broadway show.

THE play runs along at a whirlwind speed for a scene, and then drops back to a limping gate. But, there is one scene which should become one of the classics of the Broadway stage.

In a bedroom in a Coney Island hotel, a red-headed girl sits before a window. She can not move from there for her sweetheart, a flag-pole sitter, is perched on a building across the way and he keeps his spyglass trained on her because he suspects, quite rightly, that she is unfaithful to him.

The sideshow barker, bent upon winning her caresses, crawls on his hands and knees into the room and from this position woos the girl. Fortunately a fog sweeps up from the ocean, blinding the flagpole sitter and young love triumphs.

The show has been handsomely and gaudily produced by Billy Rose and he has cast it with a set of admirable actors. Paul Kelly and Clare Carlton are excellent in the leading roles, but it is red-headed Dennie Moore, sister of ice-skating Joe Moore, who runs away with most of the performing honors.

AN ECHO FROM THE PAST

and pungent comedy, "Up Pops the Devil," with which, if we have our data on straight, the Belasco Theater closed its season a year ago last spring.

His more immediate claim upon the interested attention of judicious amusement seekers, however, may be said to rest upon the degree to which his portrayal of the role of Alvin Roberts, the columnist, in "Blessed Event," on the stage, surpassed the interpretation of the same part which Lee Tracy subsequently brought to the screen.

Or was it merely that Mr. Pryor got here first?

* * * *

IN the cinema exhibits on view this week there is a peculiarly predominant mating of masculine and feminine talents, to lend twofold voltage to the fables unfolded by the miraculous shadows that have found the power of speech.

Running down—or up—the list one will encounter Jean Harlow and Clark Gable, Lili Damita and Warren William, Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy, Ann Dvorak and David Manners and Gwili Andre and Frank Morgan.

What Balinese matinee idol may be employed to balance the equatorial allurements of the dusky beauty who administers the drug of love in "Goona Goona," this department wouldn't know.

The point merely is that the first-run screens this week are so abundantly fortified with competence and capability that they ought to afford a little lively competition even for the gaudy seductions of the early Christmas bargain counters!

COMING TO LOCAL STAGES

ONCE again Washingtonians will be afforded an opportunity to hear the rousing student chorus singing the "Stein Song," for "The Student Prince" has been booked into the National Theater for four performances only, beginning December 26, with a Wednesday matinee.

This ever-delightful operetta is based on the story "Old Heidelberg," which Richard Mansfield produced nearly 30 years ago. Sigmund Romberg is responsible for the musical score which is as fresh and delightful today as when the operetta was first produced eight years ago.

A new tenor will be heard as the Prince this season, Allan Jones, who comes to the musical stage from the concert platform and operatic stage. Gertrude Lang, who was heard here last season as Kathie, is again singing this role, and George Hassell, who created the role of Lutz in the original production, will be seen again as the mirth provoking valet.

YEARS have increased rather than dimmed the luster of the delicate, haunting melodies of "Blossom Time," the charming operetta which will be heard at the National Theater for three days only beginning December 29, with a Saturday matinee.

This delightful music play of the romance of the famous composer, Schubert gains in appeal with the passing of the years, especially as an excellent singing company has always appeared in it. This 11-year-old masterpiece has been played and sung not once but several times in practically every city and town in the U. S. and yet it is as warmly welcomed today as when it first swept across the country on a cyclonic wave of appreciative applause.

Conductor Kindler Combines Symphony And Choral Groups

Approximately 100 Washington singers will combine with the National Symphony Orchestra at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Constitution Hall to present the deathless music of Bach. One of the greatest works of the "father of music" will be given—the cantata, "Sleepers, Awake."

In the past, Washington has seldom had the opportunity to hear grand-scale vocal-orchestral works, inasmuch as the necessary close contact between orchestra and choral group was impossible. Until last year, Washington had neither a symphony orchestra nor an adequately developed and organized vocal organization. Now there are both.

The beneficial effects of a year's seasoning and practice of the Washington Choral Society and the steady rise of the orchestra's merit will, it is predicted, make today's presentation even more successful than last year's initial performance of the two groups.

Erna Pielke, a young contralto of extraordinary talent, is also featured on the program, which is as follows:

Overture in D major .... Bach
Cantata, "Sleepers, Awake" .... Bach
(Washington Choral Society)
"Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla .... Wagner
Prelude to third act, Tristan and Isolde .... Wagner
Traume (Study to Tristan) .... Wagner
(Sung by Erna Pielke)
Mon Coeur Souvre a ta Voix .... Saint-Saens
(Sung by Erna Pielke)
Suite from "Carmen" .... Bizet
Introduction
Aragonaise
Prelude to second act
Prelude to first act

The Washington singers who will sing solo parts in the cantata are Mrs. Ruby Potter, soprano; Dr. George E. Anderson, tenor, and Maj. Charles Trowbridge Tittman, bass. All are well known locally.

Conductor Hans Kindler returned last Wednesday from a 'cello concert tour, and since Thursday the orchestra, under Kindler's baton, and the choral society, under the direction of Mrs. Louis Foster, have been putting the finishing touches on the work to be presented today.

The next concert to be given by the orchestra will be the children's concert on December 17, at 11 a. m., in Central High School Auditorium. An unusual treat is in store for the District youngsters on this day, as Dr. Kindler has arranged that the first half of the program will be played by one of the finest children's orchestras in the country—the Student Orchestra of Wilmington, Del.

Following is the program:

Water Music Suite .... Handel
Bouree and Horn Pipe (strings only) .... Handel
(Played by the Junior Orchestra)
Air de Ballet .... Gluck
(Played by Junior and Senior Orchestras)
Three Harp Trios—
(a) Piece by unknown composer
(transcribed by Salzedo)
(b) Pavane .... Rameau
(c) Russian Folk Song
(transcribed by Salzedo)
Demonstration of high and low wood wind instruments—
Il Sopra .... Bartilotti
(English horn solo by Mr. Paolucci)
Entrance of the Little Fauns .... Pierne
(National Symphony Orchestra)
"Holy Night" (Everybody sing)
"Polonaise" .... Tschaikowsky
(National Symphony Orchestra)

Opera Season.

The announcement made last Sunday of a season of operas at the National Theater in this city, beginning January 15, is meeting with enthusiastic interest in the Capital City. The repertoire is practically settled by Matestro Alfredo Salmaggi, and the company of principals is being engaged for the season, which will comprise six Sunday evening performances, opening with a double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

For the second Sunday evening, January 22, "La Traviata," opera in four acts by Giuseppe Verdi, will be given.

Chaliapin Returns To the Capital in Concert Tomorrow

Feodor Chaliapin, critically acclaimed as the greatest basso of this generation and one of the most colossal figures modern opera and concert have produced, will be heard once again in the Capital at Constitution Hall tomorrow afternoon, December 12, at 4:30 o'clock, when he will be presented as the second attraction of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's artists series of afternoon concerts at that auditorium. This will mark Chaliapin's first Washington appearance in approximately four years.

The great Russian basso, who will be assisted by John Corigliano, violinist, comes to this city direct from sensational triumphs in Chicago, where he packed the great Orchestra Hall to capacity and made it necessary, for the first time in two seasons, to place chairs upon the stage.

Although some of Chaliapin's songs are in English, others are in Russian and in French, and it is customary for Chaliapin to assist his audience to appreciate the mood and theme of his songs by distributing song texts. No longer, however, does he sing merely those songs which appeal to his mood of the moment. Today finds Chaliapin a much more disciplined and effective concert artist with a generous repertoire with which he is wholly familiar.

Among the songs Chaliapin has selected for his Washington concert—and one gathers from the reviews of his Chicago concert that Chaliapin is most generous with encores—are to be found such bits of characteristic Chaliapin vocalism as Mephisto's "Song of the Flea," by Moussorgsky; Leporello's aria from Mozart's "Don Juan;" the perennial "Volga Boat Song," sung in a manner that is said to be inimitably Chaliapin's own; Arensky's "The Minstrel," a descriptive bit of novelty in Dargomizhsky's "The Old Corporal;" Koeneman's "King and Peasant," Glinka's "Doubt" with Mr. Corigliano furnishing an exquisite violin obbligato; Moussorgsky's "Trepak" and many others.

Mr. Corigliano's program is expected, also, to elicit warm critical praise and admiration. It includes the Tartini-Kreisler "Fugue" in A major, the allegro moderato movement from Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," Phil Scott's "Lotus Land," Kreisler's "Tambourine Chinois" and the Novacek number, "Movo Perpetuo."

Troubadour Revue Makes Appearance Wednesday, Dec. 14

Fifteen potential song hits will be introduced to Washington audiences at McKinley Auditorium, beginning Wednesday evening of the coming week, December 14, when the Troubadours of George Washington University present for the first time on any stage, their brand-new 1932 musical comedy revue, "Oh Say, Can't You See?" written and composed by Daniel Currie Beattie prominent among the undergraduates and president of the "Troubadour" organization.

The annual show, beginning at 8:30 each evening, will be given December 14, 15, 16 and 17, and the melodious song and dance numbers will punctuate a real plot, which actually holds out until the final curtain. Ruth Molyneaux, in the role of Rebecca Adams, the heroine of the show, will sing the theme song, "Oh Say, Can't You See?" and it will be reprised by practically all principals of the cast at one time or another in the two peppy acts.

Joe Danzansky, comedian par excellence of Troubadour history, will be heard in what is considered to be a sure-fire hit, "Am I Right, or Am I Right?" and Audrey Edmonds, as Julia, will sing one of Dan Beattie's own favorites, "Because It's You, Just You." There will be other songs of ballad and the romantic types, to be sung by Craig Morris, leading tenor of the organization, and there will be, moreover, specialty numbers, one of which is "My Man Is Gone Away," to be sung by Nell Griffith.

Katherine Kramer, daughter of the first assistant superintendent of schools, and one of the exceedingly popular Troubadour girls, will be heard in whistling solos, as her special contribution to the success of "Oh Say, Can't You See?"

Flies to Town to Enroll in Brooke School of Drama

One of Clifford Brooke's most enthusiastic aspirants for stage training in his new school of the drama is Miss Ann DePriest, who came by air from Newark, N. J., yesterday, enrolled in the academy and returned the same day. Miss DePriest is flying hostess with the Eastern Air Transport, Inc., at Newark. She explained that she is taking a leave of absence from her position for the ten weeks required for her to attend the school. Her reason for flying, she said, was because she wanted to be sure to get her enrollment in before the limit fixed for the student body was reached.

S. E. Cochran, associated with Mr. Brooke in the academy, states that the site of the school will be selected within a few days and that the location will be excellently suited to the purposes of the institution.

Burton Holmes in Final Traveltalk Tours on Budget!

Burton Holmes is to close his current season of pictured traveltalks at the National Theater this afternoon, when he will present his newest impressions of travel through Central Europe as he found it during an extensive motor tour last summer.

Under the title, "Doing Europe on a Budget," Mr. Holmes will attempt to show that the best things in life are free.

The screen journey is to embrace several regions of Central Europe that have never before been visited by the Holmes tourists. The round of sightseeing begins with the life aboard that fastest of the ocean liners, the Europa; the arrival at the port of Bremen and the rail journey to Linz, the picturesque capital of upper Austria.

This is followed by a most complete tour of what is now the Austrian Republic, showing the unsurpassed scenic beauty of the country, its towering old castles and the intimate daily life and industries of its people. Thence the tour is continued to Bavaria and that glorious region of Koenigs-see; to Switzerland, and then to Nice on the Riviera, whence the famous Route des Alps is followed to Grenoble, that former grand old capital of the provence of Dauphine.

After this there is to follow an effective picturization of Aux-les-Bains and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. Finally, we are to visit Hungary, to see the sights of Budapest and to continue then to Sarajevo, where the tragedy of the World War had its beginning.

The illustrations, both in color and motion, are all new, and were made by Mr. Holmes himself during this past summer.

Janet Richards.

Miss Janet Richards at her weekly review tomorrow morning of the outstanding developments in the world's work for the past week, will speak first of the high lights in the President's message and the press reactions thereto; also of the evidence, if any, of the "lame duck" session to cooperate with the Executive, as suggested, in the effort to solve our present national problems.

The failure of "repeal" and why; the inwardness of the "hunger march," and important phases of foreign affairs will also be considered.

These talks on "Political History in the Making" are given every Monday morning at 11 o'clock in the red parlor of the Willard Hotel.

An Old Favorite At the National Saturday, Dec. 17

Children, and adults too, are preparing to welcome some of their best story book friends in "Huckleberry Finn," the second play of the Children's Theater series at the National Theater, Saturday morning. Perhaps not all of them know that the characters of that famous story were nearly all drawn from life, and that, in Mark Twain's own words, "most of the adventures recorded in this book actually occurred."

The character of Tom Sawyer was based almost entirely on Mark Twain himself. The original of Huck Finn was a ragamuffin, Tom Blankenship, who lived with his father and brother in an old building back of the Clemens home in Hannibal, Mo. The father was a shiftless character; young Ben, the eldest son, was a doubtful person with certain good qualities; and Tom, or Huck, was just a waif, kind-hearted and free as a rabbit. He never had to go to school, and he answered to no one for his actions. His knowledge of the woods and the river made him a valuable companion, and the fact that his company was forbidden made him essential to every boy in Hannibal.

Local Manager Is A Thrice-Honored New York Visitor

Leonard B. Schloss, managing director of Glen Echo Park, had triple honors conferred upon him last week in New York City.

He was elected for a three-year term as trustee of the American Museum of Public Recreation in New York, which houses every amusement device yet conceived, such as working models of thrillers, the original coach of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb, &c. This collection is free to the public.

Mr. Schloss was also elected president of the American Association of Pools and Beaches, and for the eighth time, a director in the National Association of Amusement Parks.

These organizations have been holding a convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, formulating plans of the season of 1933.

Glen Echo Park is a member of both the American Association of Pools and Beaches and the National Association of Amusement Parks.

A Bit of Comedy From the Pen of Whimsical Milne

"To Have the Honour," the new (to Washington) play from the witty and whimsical pen of A. A. Milne, which the Columbia Players are rehearsing between laughs for production at Wardman Park Theater on December 20 and 21, has principally to do with two very charming people—Jennifer Bulger, widow of Gen. Bulger, C. B., whom she thinks died on the Indian front, and Prince Michael of Neo-Slovonia, a little, seacoast-less, buffer state somewhere in the right-hand bottom corner of the map.

Just to add piquancy to the affair, Gen. Bulger's grave has never been exactly located, and—although Prince Michael's kingdom, its customs, decorations, costumes, even literature are an open book to him, its great Nobel-prize winning author, Tushkin, is strangely missing from the best-stocked libraries and bookstores. Moreover, the Prince calls Mrs. Bulger, Jenny!

These two delightful leading roles will be played by Aurora Poston, director of the Players, and S. Allen Foster, of London, who remembers the famous English actor, Sir Gerald du Maurier as the prince, when the play was first produced at Wyndham's Theater, London, in 1924.

Gayety Heralds a Smart Comedienne

Starting with today's matinee, the attraction at the Gayety will be the new female comedy sensation of burlesque, Miss "Buster" Phillips.

This talented young woman is a female comedy knockout.

The incoming attraction will be the "Auto Girls," all high-geared and up to date, displaying perfect bodies.

The extra nights are proving very popular. Monday night is "country store," Wednesday night is gift night and Friday is the knockout of the week, presenting the old reliable amateur night.

WITH DISTRICT MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra comes to us again, in its first of three concerts, on Tuesday afternoon, at 4:30, at Constitution Hall. Again we have this great orchestra under a new and, we are told, vital and fascinating baton, wielded by a youthful spirit in the young Russian Issay Dobrowen.

Molded by different intellects, various temperaments, that add zest to our hearing of the orchestra, one recalls those deep-voiced wood-winds of this group of artists, the wealth of tone that has always been stirringly rich and which Doborwen may use to the fullest with the fine dramatic program he has chosen.

We read that his orchestra "sobs and sings" beneath his baton. Yet, none the less, he has shown lucidity in Beethoven (though we do not hear it on Tuesday), and he expresses a certain sincere love for the pure line of his music. Dobrowen will be an enticing new experience. The Philharmonic-Symphony—with later concerts under Toscanini and Bruno Walter, both giants of the great world of orchestral music—come as a realization of what the best art of the orchestra may create.

During the week the United States Marine Band and Orchestra, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, will present concerts in the auditorium at the Marine Barracks on the following dates: Monday, band concert at 3 p. m.; Wednesday, orchestra concert at 8 p. m.; Thursday, broadcast, "The Shut-in Dream Hour," 11:30 a. m.; Friday, orchestra concert at 3 p. m.

On Thursday at 2:30 p. m. the United States Marine Band will participate in the ceremonies of the laying of the corner stone of the new Department of Labor.

An organ recital will be given in the Memorial Chapel, Walter Reed General Hospital, by Edith B. Athey, organist, Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church, assisted by Elsa Louise Raner, concert violinist, at 4 p. m.

The program will include: Organ, "Christmas" (Foote); violin, "Walter's Prize Song" (Die Meistersinger) (Wagner); organ (a) "Christmas Musette" (Mailly), (b) "Andante Seraphique" (Debat-Ponson), (c) "Shepherds in the Fields" (Birth of Christ) (Malling), (d) "In Dulci Jubilo" (Bach), (e) "March of the Magi" (Dubois); violin (a) "Adagio" (Ries), (b) "The Old Refrain" (arranged by Kreisler); organ, "Hallelujah Chorus" (The Messiah) (Handel). This program will be broadcast to the patients in the hospital.

Miss Athey gave a similar recital at Walter Reed just about a year ago.

Miss Raner is an artist pupil of Leopold Auer and is well known as a concert artist and for her lecture recitals.

The Washington Aumnae Club of Mu Phi Epsilon Sorority will meet tomorrow evening at the residence of Miss Hazel Gibson Wood, 1401 Girard street northwest. A program of Christmas music will be featured.

The Musical Artists of America, under the direction of Mrs. H. M. Tipton, of California, announce three interesting concerts for the holiday season. The first of these will be given on Wednesday morning at the Willard Hotel with Mary Calkins Briggs, violinist, and Gladys Stevenson as artists.

Miss Briggs, who made her debut in 1930 with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, is a pupil of Leopold Auer. She won a violin fellowship at the Julliard Graduate School of Music in New York, where she studied composition with Rubin Goldmark, chamber music with Hans Letz, and played in an orchestra with Albert Stoessel.

Miss Stevenson, gifted young pianist, who has appeared as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, is an artist of note. She possesses a fine concert style, and critics predict a bright future for her in the concert world.

A new choral group in Washington, the Students Choral Society, made its debut this season in a program at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A. headquarters, Monday night. A large audience attended and seemed genuinely interested in the music and its presentation by these young singers.

The Students Choral Society is made up of young soloists who rehearse choral works that are unusual under the direction of LeRoy Lewis. Although some of the members of the group are of professional rating, many are student soloists and the choral work is presented upon an amateur rather than professional basis.

Mabel Daniels' "Exultate Deo" opened the program. It is an exacting and well-written work with some very sustained passages of high notes for the sopranos and a really stirring climax. It was well sung. "The Omnipotence," by Schubert, gave a nice contrast, and Thelma Rice, the soloist, showed poise and thorough preparedness in her work.

Mendelssohn's "Lord, How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me?" is one of the most exacting choral tests, and these young people emerged from its intricacies very nicely, with Raymond Pigott's singing of the solo part unusually satisfying. Franz Bornschein, of Baltimore, contributed "The Singers" for women's chorus. This was done once before by many in this group. Cornelia Harkness was ill. Her substitute, Minnie Volkmann, and Verna Richie interpreted their solos with verve and sureness. Most colorful of the entire program was Lily Strickland's "From a Sufi's Tent," with its Oriental background, and it proved an especially effective finale last night. Catherine Toomey showed the most dramatic value in her reading of the contralto solo part. Charles Wood also put more color into his interpretation than is customary in a cantata reading. Mary Owen, soprano, and Harry Myers, tenor, both showed good tone quality, but gave little originality to their interpretations. Mrs. Carl Chindblom was an unusually good accompanist for all the numbers.

The members of the society participating included: Cornelia Harkness, Mary Owen, Minnie Volkmann, Marie Powell, Thelma Rice, Elizabeth Chamblin, Charlotte Hagan, Nancy Kuykendall, Marion McCarthy, Virginia Cooper, Sue McLeish, Verna Richie, Catharine Toomey, Rebecca Crawford, Elizabeth Kerr, Louise Hoover, Harry Meyers, Raymond Pigott, John Cullen, Charles Wood, Watson Ahlenfeld and Hans Lehrer.

The program at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musical morning at the Mayflower on Wednesday will be as follows:

Partita E minor, allegro, adagio ma non tanto, praeludium E major (Bach), Mr. Kochanski; organ prelude in G minor (Bach-Siloti), caprice (Scarlatti), Miss Novaes; andante et rondo (Mozart), Mr. Kochanski; impromptu in F sharp (Chopin), third ballade (Chopin), Miss Novaes; serenata e tarantella (Pergolesi-Strawinsky); habanera (Ravel), "La vida breve (Falla-Kreisler), Mr. Kochanski; children's scenes (Octavo Pinto), "Corre-corre" (running, running), "Roda-Roda" (ring around the rosy), "Marcha soldadinho" (march little soldier), "Dorme Nene" (sleep my doll), "Salta-Salta" (jumping, jumping); evacuation (Albeniz); navarra (Albeniz), Miss Novaes. Mr. Pierre Luboshutz at the piano for Mr. Kochanski.

Elsa Louise Raner, well-known concert violinist and teacher, has moved to her new apartment at 1430 Belmont street northwest, and resumed teaching there. Miss Raner is a member of the local committee which is arranging for the convention of the Music Teachers National Association.

The Lovette Choral Club, through its president, Mrs. Marietta Brumbaugh, announces the establishment of the Gillett Membership Fund, which grants four paid-up yearly memberships in the club and covers the cost of music also. Mrs. Alfred S. Gillett, local composer and patron of music, has requested the director, Eva Whitford Lovette, to hold auditions immediately in order to select the four women singers.

A busy holiday season is facing this choral organization. Besides several carol programs at public institutions at Christmas time, the club will sing at the University Women's Club on the 19th of this month under the sponsorship of Mrs. Martin A. Morrison. A radio appearance and a program before the Zonta Club are also scheduled. The members recently voted to affiliate with the Federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. Winifred Lakeman, whose entry into Washington music circles was comparatively recent, has become the club accompanist the serve during the two months' absence of Elsie Cranmer, who is ill.

Mrs. Camilo Osias, wife of the junior resident commissioner, from the Philippines, will give a vocal program in native costume at the Congressional Club, Sixteenth and U streets northwest, on Friday. She will be assisted in the duets and at the piano by Eva Whitford Lovette.

Estelle Hunt Dean, soprano, will be guest soloist on Maxim Lowe's concert orchestra, directed by R. Da Costa from 7 to 9 p. m., from the lower lounge of the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Dean's program will include "Spirt Flower" by Campbell Tipton, "Since First I Met Thee," Rubenstein; "Little Mother o' Mine," Burleigh.

Maxim Lowe's music will be heard Sunday evening in the lounge of 2400 Sixteenth street, from 7 to 9 The guest soloist who will assist the orchestra is Miss Henriette Kern, of Baltimore. Miss Kern's program will consist of a group of three numbers, "Ava Maria," by Gounod; "Neapolitana," by Gustav Klemm, and "Yours Is My Heart Alone," by Franz Lehar.

Nathaniel Shilkret's tone poem "Skyward," picturing Commander Byrd's epic flight to France, will be a feature of the concert to be played by the U. S. Navy Band, Lieut. Charles Benter leader, Wednesday night at the Band Auditorium, Navy Yard.

Musician William Cameron will present a solo for harp, the "Wooden Shoe Dance" by Rogers. Other notable numbers on this program are the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" and Ravel's "Bolero."

Following the great success of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H. M. S. Pinafore" as given by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group of Washington last summer at the Sylvan Theater, and again in October at Central High School Auditorium, the Community Center Department which sponsored the production on both occasions will offer "The Mikado" in January by the same group of popular young Washington singers under Miss Wentworth's direction.

This opera will also be given at Central High School Auditorium, and a date has been tentatively selected by Mrs. E. K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, immediately after January 15, subject to possible change in case the First Lady in the Land, who attended "Pinafore" and who has been invited to be the guest of honor at "The Mikado," should suggest a different date in keeping with her many engagements and official duties.

The National Capitol Choir, under the direction of Dr. Albert W. Harned, will sing as its first anthem, "Let All the World Sing," by Noble, at the morning services of the Universalist National Memorial Church. The second anthem will be of particular interest to Washington music lovers. It is "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," by Dorothy Radde Emery, well-known local composer. This is the first time that this anthem has been sung in Washington. Dr. Harned will play as his organ prelude, "Invocation," and as his postlude "Sortie in G Major," both by Rogers.

Miss Maud Sewall, organist at the Church of the Holy City," will play the prelude music next Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock when the religious drama committee of the Washington Federation of Churches presents "The Nativity," in that church as the first of three presentations of this fifteenth century miracle play. Frederick S. Stitt, organist at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will play the organ prelude for the evening presentation at 8 o'clock and on Tuesday evening, December 20, at 8 o'clock when the drama is given, for the third time, at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Paul Whitney Fishbaugh will render the opening program of music.

Dr. Robert Howe Harmon, director of music at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will direct the male chorus of sixteen voices, in singing the Gregorian chants, next Sunday which are a feature of the miracle play. Other well-known male choral groups will be heard in the chants at the two other presentations.

The chants are "Gloria in Excelsis," "Omnes de Saba," "Puer Natus est Nobis," "Adorate Deum" and "Hodie Christus Natus est," to be sung in the form not used in the church of the present day.

The musical background for "The Other Wise Man," as arranged for the first presentation in 1925 by Katherine Riggs, concert harpist, and director of music for this annual yuletide legend-drama, will, this season, be more deeply inspirational and impressive than ever before. Miss Riggs has added a number of traditional compositions for this season's presentations on December 26, 27, 28 and 29, at Luther Place Memorial Church, and in addition to the old Hebrew and Oriental numbers which she, herself, will play on the harp, there will be beautiful and meaningful solo numbers to be sung, as characters in the drama, by Mary Apple, contralto; Christine Irish, soprano, and Helen Burton, mezzo-soprano.

Mary Izant Couch, pianist, will describe and play some of the compositions to be given by the National Symphony Orchestra at its next concert at the Women's City Club Thursday night. Her performance will be the third of a series of "Adventures in Music" planned by the music section of the club for its monthly music appreciation hour.

The program this evening will include "Air from Overture in D Major," by Bach; "Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla," from "Rheingold," and selections from third act of "Tristan and Isolde," by Wagner, and "Concert Transcription," from the opera "Carmen" of Bizet, as arranged by Moszkowski.

Two very pleasing anthems will be presented by the a capella choir, Ruby Smith Stahl director, at the First Congregational Church, today. One, "Worship," by Shaw, expresses the brotherhood of man and the other, "Were You There?" by Burleigh, is a very inspiring spiritual. Robert Griffin, tenor, will sing "O, Come to My Heart," by Ambrose. Paul De Long Gable, organist, will play the following: "Last Dream of the Virgin" (Massenet), "Andante" from "William Tell" (Rossini), "March of the Priests" (Rossini), "Traumerei" (Schumann), "Lamento" (Saint-George), "Monastery Bells" (Lefebrure-Wely), "Allegro" (Milligan).

The solo quartet of the Church of the Epiphany, Lillian Latham, soprano; Nancy Williamson, contralto; Kroom Bagranoff, tenor; Ambrose Durkin, bass; under the direction of Adolph Torovsky, will be the assisting artists for a concert presented by the students orchestra of St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., on Tuesday.

Frances Gutelius, well known to Washington musical circles as an accomplished pianist, will have charge of the music hour from 5 to 6 o'clock at Friendship House today. Miss Gutelius will give a lecture recital—a program of unusual interest.

Gertrude Lyons, lyric-soprano, and Martha Woolley, alto, will give a program of Christmas carols in duet form with Gertrude Dyre as piano soloist and accampanist, before the District of Columbia Chapter of the Daughters of 1812 on Wednesday at the monthly meeting to be held in the national headquarters, at 1461 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Duets will be: "I Came Upon the Midnight Clear" (Balfe, arranged by Parks); "The Virgin's Slumber Song" (Max Reger), Gesu Bambino; "The Infant Jesus," by Pietro A. Yon; also solo, "An Old English Lullaby" (arranged by Lidgey); Cathedral chimes with melody of "Silent Night, Holy Night," by Gertrude Dyre, will be heard.

The program for the Sunday music hour at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, today, at 5 o'clock, will be one of international Christmas music. Mrs. M. L. Coule, of the Americanization School, has arranged the program which will include German, English and Italian songs and instrumental selections.

Mr. Emanuel Zetlin, violinist, and Dorothy Neff Tyler, soprano, of the faculty of the Washington College of Music, will present the program on Friday at the Morning Music Club. Their program includes the Handel sonata in B major, the Bach Chanconne for violin alone and excerpts from the Korngold suite, "Viel Larmen um Nichts," "The Orphan" (Paul Juon), a lullaby for a modern baby by Frederic Delius and a Brahms-Joachim Hungarian dance; vocal numbers, "Voi che Sapete" (Mozart), a Marcello aria, "The Stornello" (Pietro Cimaro), and a group of old English and contemporary American songs.

Mr. Zetlin is first violinist of the newly formed Guarnerius Quartet of Philadelphia, the personnel of which includes David Madison, second violin, who is one of the leaders of the first violin section of the Philadelphia Orchestra; Samuel Lifshey, viola, first solo viola of the same orchestra, and William Van den Burg, cello, first solo cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra. The quartet is so named because of the ownership of two exceptional Guarnerius violins. They have appeared twice recently with Leopold Stokowski in programs under the auspices of the women's committee of the Philadelphia Orchestra and last Sunday they were heard at the home of Mrs. Coleman Dupont in Wilmington, Del., under the same auspices.

Vote Boxes Crowded By Oversized Ballots

Fort Worth, Tex. (U.P.)—Ballot boxes were really "stuffed" at many Texas polling places November 8 because of the unusual size of the ballots.

Tarrant County's ballot measured 27 by 20 inches. Bigger slots were cut into the boxes in order to accommodate them. The "billboard ballots" required wider tables and writing shelves than ever used before in Tom Green County. Other counties ordered a complete change of voting equipment to facilitate voting and counting.

1909 Grocery Account Reveals Old Costs

Waukesha, Wis. (U.P.)—A statement of a grocery account for August, 1909, found in a store here throws light on what the average family paid for necessities nearly a quarter century ago.

The bil included:

One pound of butter, .30; 1 pound of lard, .15; 2 pounds of green beans, .10; box of matches, .05; four ears of sweet corn, .06; half dozen oranges, .15; package of tobacco, .05; 1 gallon of oil, .12; 1 pound of tomatoes, .08; one-half peck of potatoes, .13; 1 mop stick, .10.

Rockies Still Young, Geologist Announces

Butte, Mont. (U.P.)—The Rocky Mountains are mere youngsters in age when compared to other portions of the earth's surface, a geological survey of northwestern Montana by Dr. C. H. Clapp, president of the University of Montana, has revealed.

The Rockies were formed during the late Mesozoic Age, when life had advanced to the reptilian stage, and giant dinosaurs were beginning to hold fantastic sway over the region, Dr. Clapp said.

Scientists Studying Abnormal Lungs

Burlington, Vt. (U.P.)—Two similar cases of abnormal lung development are being studied in the research laboratory of histology and embryology at University of Vermont.

One is the case of a new-born baby and the other of a child 8 months old. Each case had an extra or accesory lobe of lung tissue, not connected with the lung itself, which could receive no air from the windpipe. Through the studies it is hoped to determine the causes of such abnormal development.

ART AND ARTISTS

By VYLLA POE WILSON

A HIGH testimony of the leaven of artistic appreciation and things artistic in the dizzy whirl of modern life in a national capital is seen in the popularity of current art exhibits in Washington. While practically every one who was invited attended the private view of the thirteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings last Saturday at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, they have returned frequently this week really to study the pictures and get a real view of the scope and characteristics of current American art. Reports from other cities and exhibitions testify that the number of persons attending the show really looking, studying and appreciating it and returning to see some more are more this year than ever before. Perhaps times of stress and anxiety mold national character and set people on the road to higher things.

Those who stood long before the first picture by George Luks, of New York, of an old woman pencil vender feeding a black cat from a blue bowl, "The Woman With Black Cat," will be pleased to know that this picture has been purchased during the week as part of the permanent exhibition of the Corcoran Gallery of Art." Mr. Luks, who is always so interested in his subjects, enhanced the enjoyment of those who admired this picture by stories of the woman model herself, a real New York plutocrat, a vender of pencils on the streets, who takes pride in the fact that year after year sa she plies her trade she never has to repleish her bundle of pencils. Once young and beautiful and on the stage, this woman understands the psychology of human beings. Quarters and dollar bills rain in her box instead of pennies as the "young bloods" of New York, escorting their fair ladies, come out of fashionable theaters and cafes. Mr. Luks has achieved much in putting the black cat in this picture, not just a dead black object, as black things are so often in pictures. He has borrowed from the masters of the days of Leonardo da Vinci, who painted in studios with walls painted black but open to the blue skies. This reflection of blue on the black has given us a black cat in this picture. Its real vividness and sheen makes it not the least of the triumphs of this modern American master of the art of oil painting.

Washington artists and art lovers are much interested in the 128th annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, which will open on January 29 and close March 19. A number of Washington artists will enter pictures in this show.

RECENT paintings by Alice L. L. Ferguson, work by members of the Danville Art Club, and decorative landscapes by Grace Treadwell are attracting visitors to the Art League of Washington at 2111 Bancroft place, for two weeks' exhibit, until Thursday. Washington art circles have long been interested in the unusual painting of Mrs. Ferguson, and in her first local one-man show they are seeing varied types of her work. International in subject matter, she has seemingly painted all over the world, and her travels and experiences in many other kinds of activity have given her a breadth and spaciousness in painting. For instance, "The High Pyrennes" and "Sandia Mountains" show the lofty expanse of mountain range tops, where they trust into cloud forms.

Most of the Western paintings, "The Mission," "Desert Sanatorium," "Tucson," and others, start with a flat plain of desert expanse, detailed sometimes with sage brush and cacti, and then grow back in perspective to mountains in the distance. It is obvious that Mrs. Ferguson loves and understands mountains, and she paints them rugged, worn down and others rocky cliffs and others covered with trees and snow. Some are misty thin shapes off in the atmosphere, others are heavily, thickly painted dramatic silhouettes against stormy skies.

"A Swiss Valley" is refreshing in its opalescent and almost iridescent color.

Members of the Danville Art Club all show work that is quiet and complacent, in a group show of landscapes, portraits and still lifes.

Eleven members form the group and show from one to four paintings each. Developing remarkably as a group, they are beginning to show their work in places outside Danville, first in Richmond, and now at the Art League in this city. Probably the best work in the show is a well composed landscape by Eunice Clay Pritchett, with an old monarch of a tree cutting sharply into the placid design of fields and hills. It is called the best because it is the freshest, most alive and has good color. "Going to Market," a portrait of an old woman, with two geese, is a richly painted, colorful work.

Carson Sutherlin Davenport, of New York, and formerly a Danville artist, sends two water colors of the Maine school of painting. Rather humorously and Orientally designed, the water colors are perhaps a little too stylized and cleverly composed for lasting enjoyment. One of his paintings, "Virginia Rock Quarry," is fluidly and richly painted, with heavy flowing washes. The other, "Eastport Shanty," is sharply defined and more commercial in design.

"The Coolie Coat," by Clara Lea Cousins, shows a very Occidental person dressed up in Oriental clothes. A fine chance to caricature the absurdity of dressing a rather heavy Nordic girl in exquisite Chinese colors and fragile designs are missed. "Jackie," a portrait of a serious young lady, is unpleasant in its strained pose. Obviously a learned and careful painter, Miss Cousins could do much better with a little more attention to the posing of her models.

Several flower paintings are careful, colorful pictures. Elizabeth Carter's "Zinnias" make a fine decoration, and the flowers are richly modeled. Leone B. Lumpkin's "Iris Study" and the three paintings by Helene Hall Jennings in still life are handsome pieces that are well organized and pleasing in color. Two interesting still lifes, in low-keyed color, by Frances Gregory, have a good plasticity and quality in both form and color.

Harriet Fitzgerald shows two landscapes and a portrait. Rather stark and unusual in conception, her landscapes are tops of bulidings seen through the upper branches of naked trees. There is airy quality in the two paintings that would be enhanced if they were more tastefully framed. A warmly painted portrait, in interesting brush work, with a fine restraint in color, completes her section.

In an introduction to the catalogue of the work of Grace Treadwell, Grant Code, a member of the Board of Advisors of the Art League, says that "in the decorative landscapes of Grace Treadwell, the forms of rock and earth are felt as dynamic movements shaping the experience of the wanderer out of doors. The texture of vegetation or other surface, the rush and twist of air, the modulation of depth and color, the impact of warm light, the opposition of light and shadow are experienced as human emotions rather than as the mere physical properties of external objects." Happily and cheerfully done, in bright casual colors, the decorations are individual organizations of pleasing line, details and shapes. With traditional Bermuda subjects, old churches, beaches, and palms, Mrs. Treadwell achieves warm, exciting work, suitable for home decoration. At times a little naive, the minute watercolors twist, curve, curl, and revolve within themselves, especially in the garden and jungle sketches. Delightful and painted with a lot of zest, they should be welcome additions to a home.

UNTIL December 23 the Howard University Gallery of Art will have on exhibition a very fine showing of Japanese woodcuts from Moronobu to Hiroshige. These prints are loaned to the gallery by different individuals who are members of the Friends of Art.

Each of the prints is a masterpiece of photographic reproduction from the original. Even the effects of time, such as slight blemishes due to folds in the paper or to a smudge on the surface of the original, are so accurately shown that it is practically impossible to distinguish these prints from the originals.

All of the greatest Japanese artists are represented by characteristic examples of their skill. One of the most striking of all of the prints is a triptych done by Utamaro I (1753-1806). A Tokugawa princess descends from a magnificent black-lacquered coach in the presence of six court-ladies and a lady's maid while two of the ladies introduce to her a young poet. He, overcome, with awe, has sunk upon his knees as he presents the beautiful princess with a poem.

The annual exhibition of oils, water colors, drawings, etchings and sculpture by members of the Arts Club will go on view today, the show opening with a tea in the clubrooms at 4:30. This exhibition will continue until January 6.

FRIDAY a special exhibition of ceramics by Carl Walters will open at the Downtown Gallery in New York, and will run concurrently with the sixth annual exhibition of the American Print Makers until the end of this month.

In the works to be shown will be included bowls, vases, plates, glass panels, and a group of Mr. Walter's unique polychrome sculpture in ceramic—animals, birds and figures—examples of which are in many important private collections and museums.

The Museum of Modern Art in New York announced today that more than 50,000 people have visited the exhibition of American painting and sculpture which opened at the museum on November 2. The exhibition, which fills three floors of the museum, will continue on view until January 29.

Concurrently, the exhibition, "The Art of the Common Man in America," which opened on November 30, will continue until January 15. The hours of the museum are from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. on week days and from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. on Sundays.

The exhibition of American painting and sculpture contains 119 paintings and 31 pieces of sculpture, 150 works of art in all. It covers the last 70 years of American art, the period from 1862-1932. Among the exhibits on view are such famous masterpieces as Whistler's "Portrait of the Artist's Mother," Winslow Homer's "Eight Bells," Homer Martin's "Harp of the Winds," Ryder's "Macbeth and the Witches," Eakins' "Pathetic Song," loaned by the Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington; Blakelock's "Moonlight," Inness' "Lake Albano," loaned by the Duncan Phillips Memorial Gallery, Washington, and Duveneck's "Whistling Boy" and many other masterpieces.

BOOKS AND THEIR AUTHORS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE publication recently of the fact that Arnold Bennett, the English essayist and novelist, had a yearly income of $75,000 earned through his pen has aroused a controversy over literary fortunes.

That Alexandre Dumas had an income averaging $100,000 earned through his genius and that alone is a well-known fact. One year he made $200,000. On the other hand, Sir Walter Scott earned prodigious sums by his writing, but most of it went to pay publishing losses and debts incurred by a too elaborate scale of living.

Modern writers, even the most successful ones, are regarded as particularly fortunate if they make $50,000 per year, and the general average for the topnotchers would seem to be nearer $25,000 yearly than the larger figure.

In these days of depression, it is an open secret that editors and publishers are pleading this as an alibi to cut down the high prices formerly offered to writers with big names.

A new picture is given of the Beveridge, once a United States senator, who presented a revealing book on John Marshall to the American reading public in Claude G. Bowers' monumental book.

Mr. Bowers has come to be regarded as one of the chief historians of American celebrities, and in writing of Beveridge he has appeared within the orbit of a generation yet remembered by those living, instead of dealing with early nineteenth-century characters.

This is well, because the present and what might be called the immediate past, need discrimination in their delineation, and for this task Mr. Bowers is eminently fitted. The period covered is from 1898 to 1924, a time which thrilled with two wars in which the United States participated, and the always exciting years of a new century. And, as one critic has written, "Mr. Bowers' book preserves for all time the inspiring record of a great American citizen."

The story of Tristan and Isolde has been told in poetry and music, but it remained for John Erskine, literary critic and author, to outline it in vivid prose. Therefore his new book, "Tristan and Isolde: Restoring Palamede," by John Erskine (Bobbs, Merrill Co., Indianapolis), comes to one with a fine expectancy of something out of the ordinary.

Nor is one disappointed as he gets deeper and deeper into the attractive volume. The story is an absorbing one, whether sung in measured words, musical measures or vigorous prose. It is the most recent of a series written by Prof. Erskine about classical figures told in up-to-date manner, somewhat like playing Hamlet in evening clothes, as it were.

Palamede, according to Mr. Erskine, and there is no reason to doubt his word, suffers from an unrequited love for the lovely Isolde, whose death love song is the epitome of all love.

Palamede was in search of the eternal flower of true love, and he cared not whither he journeyed on this quest. He was an Arab and he had listened to the tale of a Christian captive who told him of Merlin and his enchanted forest, fair maidens who lived therein but for love.

So he comes to King Mark's castle of Tintagel. There he found the clash of arms for which his ardent young soul had yearned and love in the form of the Princess Isolde, daughter of King Angus of Ireland. Just at that time she was somewhat occupied with the task of keeping a husband complacent and her lover, Tristan, eager for her to cut loose and run away with him. One might think from this that Isolde was fully occupied. But no; when the handsome, idealistic Palamede came nigh, she found she could spare a few thoughts for one who dreamed of her alone.

In his original style, Mr. Erskine has given us a glimpse of the Lady Brangain, who appears to have loved Palamede not wisely but too well for her own peace and comfort. He, alas, had eyes for none save Isolde, although he enjoyed the companionship of Brangain and cherished her advice save when it conflicted with his heart's desire.

Perhaps that was the reason that toward the end of the story Palamede finds that while Isolde is the one he had loved, Brangain, the faithful, the true, was the one that he had missed.

After he sails for the Holy Land the faithful Brangain rushes up, too late to accompany him. When told whither he had gone she called out, "Where is the Holy Land? Get me a horse." There the story ends. But how we wish we could know whether Brangain ever saw Palamede again, and whether they married and lived happily ever after or she retired to a nunnery, bereft of love forever.

Good work, Mr. Erskine!

WITH AUTHORS HERE AND ELSEWHERE.

John Masefield will come to America next month at the age of 57 on his second visit to the land of the free and the home of the brave. The first time he visited the United States he was only 25 years old, a young sailor. Among the odd jobs he picked up was that of barkeeper. He is coming back a little too soon to see many engaged in his old occupation. Coincident with his coming will be published two new volumes, "A Tale of Troy" and "Recent Prose."

The National Home Library Foundation, publishers of the Jacket Library, with headquarters in Washington, has dedicated its special edition of "Tom Sawyer," by Mark Twain, to Will Rogers. The edition will be distributed on a nonprofit-making basis to the schools of the Nation at 10 cents a copy. The dedication to Will Rogers describes him as a "genial philosopher and keen critic, who has like his great predecessor brought laughter and joy to millions."

Flying over Mount Everest is no mere child's play, according to Richard Halliburton, who has just tried that feat and tells about it in his book, "In the Flying Carpet." In Mr. Halliburton's opinion it would take an airplane with less than a 25,000 foot ceiling for the job. In describing to his readers what happened to him when he tried it, Mr. Halliburton writes:

"Thinner and thinner the vegetation grew as the foothill ridges of Mount Everest ascending the stairs, and thinner grew the air as we climbed above them. But the stairs were climbing faster than the Flying Carpet. Though we pushed up to 17,000 feet, the ridges pursued us. Through a tremendous effort and a light load we struggled to 18,000, 2,000 feet higher than the Carpet had even been before. The engine was being forced to its utmost revolution, but even so we were just hanging on by our teeth. This—18,000 feet—was our absolute ceiling. Not one more inch could we gain."

Golf is looking up in distant Siam. A copy of Alexander Morrison's new book, "New Way to Better Golf," was recently ordered by his royal highness, Prince Anuvatana Chaturont, of Bangkok, Siam.

Timely, indeed, is the publication of Frank H. Simond's new book, "Can America Stay at Home?" Mr. Simonds spends so much time in the National Capital looking up data for his books that he might almost be called a Washington author. The present book contains an analysis of American foreign policy, from Wilson to Hoover. In his discussion of debts Mr. Simonds throws much illumination on a subject frequently talked about nowadays, but about which the average person is poorly informed.

Isa Glenn, the novelist, got a shock the other day when she received a letter from a certain Spencer Mapes in reference to Miss Glenn's use of that name in "East of Eden." Miss Glenn had thought the name strictly a figment of her imagination. Lo, the possessor of it turned up in the form of a complacent New Yorker who only expressed his surprise at finding himself in a novel. There was no harm intended or done on either side, but Miss Glenn threatens to use only Biblical names in her next volume.

W. Somerset Maugham, the popular novelist, was asked recently by an anxious mother about the technique of novel writing for the benefit of a literary-minded son.

"From my own practice," wrote the novelist in reply, "it seems to me that each novel must be written in an entirely different fashion, and so far as I am concerned, each way is in a way no more than an experiment. Each subject means a different treatment, a different attitude and even a different manner of writing. The only rule I know which is always valid is to stick to your point like grim death."

Wordsworth's lake country, the home of the Herries, that wildly romantic and passionate family who people the pages of Hugh Walpole's great series of novels, "Rogue Herries," "Judith Paris" and "The Fortress," which was recently published by Doubleday-Doran, is also the home of their creator. Many years ago Hugh Walpole fell in love with the lake district and decided that it should be the setting for the saga which even then he was planning to write. So it was only natural that a few years ago, when he was ready to begin the history of the Herries, he should choose to live among the hills and lakes of Cumberland.

Near Keswick he found the house of his dreams. Brackenburn is a cottage of gray stone standing in the hollow of the hill, above the trees, with a wood, a running stream, two silver birches and a squirrel on the lawn. From the windows one looks across the valley to Skiddaw and Blencathra.

The house was purchased and Mr. Walpole was soon living in his new home.

Harry Carr and Charles Owens, author and illustrator of the "West Is Still Wild" (Houghton, Mifflin Co.), have been companions of the trail for many long years. Together they have sojourned with the Indians; slept at the old California missions; prowled over trails fragrant with the memories of the "Days of the Dons" of California's golden era. They have lived in cow camps, dodged the bullets of Mexican revolutionists, and browsed among the records of old missions. The stories that have been related in this book have come from the lips of old pioneers, sitting in the ruins of mining towns that once thrilled with the life of the gold rush; lips of old men who had the touch of the life of the days they told of. Reading these pages, you are sitting by proxy in the hogans of the pueblos of Indians; in the shadows of ancient missions; in the once proud casas of great haciendas.

Mr. Owens was born in California, and there is scarcely a historic spot, an old landmark, of the old West that he has not visited and sketched. Mr. Carr, the author of "Old Mother Mexico," has lived in California since early childhood days. As editor of the famous Lancer Column in the Los Angeles Times he has absorbed the intimacies of modern days as well as the traditions of a wild and glorious past.

Although the hero of Christopher Morley's new novel, "Human Being" (Doubleday, Doran), is not in the publishing business, he used to be, and Mr. Morley has drawn several vivacious pictures of the sales end of the publishing world in operation. Although he has indulged in no actual portraits he cleverly worked into his pattern so many real incidents and personal characteristics that he has at least a dozen salesmen and as many editors guessing as to whether or not they are characters in "Human Being."

All the pleasant, familiar minutiae of office life are so vividly created that Richard Roe's office will have a reminiscent flavor for every one who had ever held down an office chair.

MINUTE REVIEWS.

Floyd Dell's new heroine, Diana Sair, which is also the title of the book published for him by Farrar & Rinehart, New York, bears out the old saying "born too soon." According to the author, Diana Stair was born at least a hundred years too soon. She was a progressive woman in abolition days and was one of the first women orators.

Moreover, she was a poet, too, and her family found that they had a handful when they tried to manage Diana. Indiscretions led to her dismissal from a girls' school where she had served as teacher, and she went to work in a cotton mill and soon became an agitator. The doings of Diana are really thrillingly told in this book and prove the truth that original souls will stand out from their fellows, no matter in what environment or age they may have been cast.

One day when he was but 20 he In "Beyond Laughter," by Sherwood Anderson, his first novel since "Dark Laughter," the Liveright Press, New York, has presented what should prove to be a best seller. It is a novel of the changing South and the part a preacher played in changing a typical Southern town into a mill town.

The struggle between the old conservatism and communism portrayed in the book is a vivid one and particularly timely at this moment, when people are wondering from what source come the recruits for "hunger marches" and similar movements in which the spectacular appeal is made upon the people to rise up and right their own wrongs. However, Mr. Anderson has not made his a propaganda novel, for which he deserves the cordial thanks of the general reading public.

No better preparation for a book on animals could have been made than that enjoyed by Ernest Thompson Seton, who puts the cream of this acquired knowledge into his new book, "Famous Animal Stories" (Brentano's, New York). Mr. Seton's book will have a prominent place in the collections of such volumes.

In the true animal story division he starts off with a story by Theodore Roosevelt, whose ability as a naturalist and animal expert no one may rightfully dispute. Poe's "Black Cat" is also included in the book and Balzac has his place there, too.

Leonard Bacon is back again in the poetic arena with "The Furioso" (Harper & Bros., New York). D'Annunzio is supposed to have been the model for this narrative poem done in somewhat of the Byronic manner.

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. PHILLIPS

WHO is this?
This is a man.
What kind of man?
It is hard to say.
What is the man doing?
The man is riding on the "rumble" seat of a motorcycle.
Why is the man doing this?
There must be a reason, but we don't know what it is.
Why does the man look so uncomfortable and frightened?
When you ride on the rear seat of one of those things you naturally look uncomfortable and frightened.
Has the man been riding far?
He has been riding for several hours.
Will the man get shaken up?
If he doesn't it will be a miracle.
How will he feel when he gets off the motorcycle?
He will feel terrible but greatly relieved.
Will there be any after effects?
Yes, he will eat his dinner from a shelf for weeks.
Is the man through with that sort of sport?
No. Just as soon as his friend asks him to go motorcycling again he will accept.
How do you explain it?
We don't even try.

THE STORY OF GODFREY.

1. Godfrey was a sickly youth.

2. As a baby his life was despaired of.

3. He was so frail that he didn't learn to walk until he was 4 years old.

4. He had special nurses until he was 11 years old.

5. In school he was so delicate that he was never allowed to play with the other boys.

6. His parents guarded him very carefully from all rough contacts.

7. They kept him at home most of the time and gave him music lessons.

8. He seemed the soulful, artistic type.

9. His folks rather thought it would be nice if he became a pianist or a poet or something like that.

10. When he grew a little older he showed signs of rebelling against the sheltered life.

11. He grew strong and began to show courage and independence.

12. One day he announced he was going to work and startled his parents by taking a job as a powder tester in a munitions plant.

13. Later he eloped with a girl who was an acrobat with a circus aerial act.

14. His folks didn't hear from him for quite some time, and then they got the shock of their lives.

15. Their little Godfrey had picked out a career, and you will never guess what it was.

16. He had become a referee of professional ice hockey matches.

AMBITION.

Hitch your wagon to a star—
Never ask yourself, "How far?"
From your goal don't turn on swerve—
And be careful on the curve!

Let old Saturn be the goal;
Say, "Giddap!" and let 'er roll;
Let 'er go full speed ahead—
Bear in mind no turns on red.

Set your course for planets great;
Never stop or hesitate;
Set a mark for distance hops—
And watch out for traffic cops!

About the Chess Table

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER

Local chess activities will continue relatively quiet over the holiday season, although plans are afoot at the Capital City Chess Club to commence a handicap tournament in the very near future. The tournament is to be open to all club members, regardless of their playing strength, and the usual handicap odds will be meted out where requisite.

Members desiring to enter the event are urged to signify their intention to the proper officials at their earliest convenience. Shortly after the New Year fans are to be kept interested in the annual tourney to determine the holder of the District tournament championship laurels for the ensuing year.

Games at Pasadena.

Two worthwhile games from the recent Pasadena master tournament, in which Alekhine carried off first honors, appear below. Herman Steiner, in his encounter with the world champion, defended a Ruy Lopez in a manner recommended by the latter player. On his eleventh turn, however, he injected a bit of the original into the opening, which might have succeeded against many players other than Alekhine. Reuben Fine, latest bearer of the title of Western champion, sorrowfully mishandled an Alekhine's defense against H. Borochow at Pasadena, and a danger sign becomes apparent for those accustomed to playing the black side which had best be heeded. We are indebted to Dr. S. Scrivener, of Northampton, England, who forwarded the exceptionally excellent annotations, which appeared in Brian Harley's column in the London Observer.

26	Q—R5(i)	B—K3
27	Kt—Q7!	Resigns(j)

(a) Recommended by Alekhine!

(b) A clever move, new to me, which gives up a P for a tempting attack.

(c) If Q—K1, of course B—Q6; if Q—K2 R—Q1 would be forcible; e. g., 16. P—B4 B—Kt5, 17. B—Kt5 RxB, 18. PxR Kt—Q5 with a winning attack. Nor is 16. BxKt QxB, 17. Kt—Q4 BxKt, 18. PxB RxP, hopeful for White.

(d) QxKt, 18. BxP R—Kt3, 19. B—B4 would help Alekhine, I imagine. But there are possibilities here for Steiner in Q—K3, 20. R—K1 Q—Kt1, 21. B—KB1 RxP. If 19. B—QB4, B—K5 threatens R—Kt3.

(e) The R is forced back, and White gets time to take a menacing diagonal with his B.

(f) Hopeless, shutting in his KB, but he has no good spot for his KR.

(g) Alekhine must dazzle.

(h) PxQ, 26. Kt—B7 ch K—Kt1, 27. Kt—R6 mate.

(i) QxKtP ch R—Kt2, with a small counterattack.

(j) BxKt allows mate in two. I have not fathomed a forced mate after QxKt, but it was time for Black to resign.

(c) Kt—R4, 6. P—B5; or Kt—Kt5, 6. P—B5 Kt (Kt3)xP, 7. P—QR3.

(d) I believe it's the KKt, but am not sure.

(e) Which rouses the Borochovian ire. "We agreed, surely, that I should move pawns, and you should move knights. Serves you right, if I try another piece."

(f) "Just to show I can play knights, when I want to."

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

"SAGITTARIUS."

IF DECEMBER 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 9:30 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7:15 p. m.

Influences operative on this December 11 will be productive of a series of minor and often petty disturbances. It will be difficult to concentrate. Little will be accomplished of a creative sort. Those who find it necessary to draw upon their powers of imagination will be at a standstill.

Children born on this December 11 will have gay personalities. An inclination to be cruel to animals will be apparent and should be curbed. They will tend to have nimble fingers and should be able to master some musical instrument with better than average success. Very uncomplaining dispositions, come what will. Extremely fond of their parents. Very obedient.

Born on December 11, yours is a generous nature. You give of yourself, of your time and of such worldly goods as you have. You often make sacrifices to assist others who are not worthy. You have great moral courage; you carry on in the face of what to others would be insurmountable obstacles, and this you do without wavering and without complaining. You always appear happy, though not at any time buoyant. You are attractive to the opposite sex, but are not greatly interested in them. You are faithful and loyal to your mate and you demand those qualities in return from your life partner. You are not a jealous person. You can be trusted with a great deal of freedom. Extremely honest.

If December 11 is your birthday, you will most probably make a success of whatever you devote your energies to. You have a methodical and intelligent approach to problems of business and finance that enables you to travel straight to the heart of the matter. Your powers of analysis, your foresight and intuitiveness make you a man difficult to beat in a business deal.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE Roosevelt regime will mark the complete triumph of the radio at the White House as a medium of communication with the people. President-elect Roosevelt is absolutely sold on it, and Mrs. Roosevelt uses it as has no other First Lady of the Land. Microphones may be set up permanently in the Executive Mansion after March 4.

Where Mrs. Hoover was probably heard over the radio a half dozen times in four years, Mrs. Roosevelt has spoken almost that many times within a week. On the occasion of the Tuberculosis Seal drive she spoke twice in one night, at 7:30 o'clock over one network and again at 9:30 o'clock over another, a thing few women, excepting professionals, have accomplished in radio. In between times that night Mrs. Roosevelt addressed a meeting in New York and had to hurry to get back to the studios in time for her second radio talk.

Mrs. Roosevelt recently signed up with a commercial program sponsor for twelve broadcasts to aid unemployment. The appearances before the microphone will continue through February 24, the week preceding Gov. Roosevelt inauguration.

By means of the radio, Mrs. Roosevelt, like her distinguished husband, keeps the entire United States in touch with what she is doing. Also Mrs. Roosevelt is very much at home with newspaper people, gives interviews, and writes articles. Her magazine work is well known.

In the past, however, there has been a reticence on the part of the women in the White House, especially insofar as the radio was concerned. As far as this writer is aware the voice of Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson have never been heard over the radio.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, one of the most retiring mistresses in the history of the White House, never talked for publication. However, during the recent campaign, she surprised everybody by introducing President Hoover before a crowd of 20,000 persons at Madison Square Garden in New York. This short speech was heard all over the country.

Mrs. Coolidge was a great radio listener, but her voice was rarely heard on the air. Once at a Y. W. C. A. broadcast is the only time we can remember. Mrs. Hoover seldom made special boradcasts, but on occasions such as Girl Scout meetings and ship launchings, her voice was picked up as a part of the ceremonies.

CALVIN COOLIDGE was known to detest the radio as a source of entertainment when he was President. With the perfection of receiving sets and his frequent use of the radio since then, he may have changed. He was once credited with saying that the radio was simply "a lot of noise."

Despite this, Mr. Coolidge, like the man "who worked in the restaurant but didn't eat there," was quick to see the possibilities of reaching the people by radio in his political speeches. While in the White House he made only a few special broadcasts, but was very particular about having his regular speeches broadcast.

The only public slip which Calvin ever made was in an insurance speech over the radio after he left the Presidency. He probably could have beaten the charge in court, but preferred to send Everett Sanders to settle the case. It cost Mr. Coolidge (or the insurance company) several thousand dollars.

President Hoover, as Secretary of Commerce, having personally directed the destinies of radio almost from its inception, accepted it as a matter of course when he entered the White House. President-elect Roosevelt is about as used to the microphone as the average person is to the telephone.

However, it will be a distinct novelty to have a radio-minded First Lady of the Land, such as Mrs. Roosevelt. It looks as if the year 1933 will see a precedent whereby the wife of the President will be heard by the people almost as often as the President.

THE first full-length performance of the Metropolitan Opera Company to go on the air will be "Don Giovanni," with Rosa Ponselle, next Saturday afternoon. Shorter works, such as "Hansel und Gretel," which, by the way, will probably be given again Christmas Day, and "Elektra," have been broadcast in their entirety, but never before has a long opera been presented.

"Don Giovanni" will occupy the air from 1:45 to 5:15 p. m. Serafin will conduct the orchestra, and among those in the cast will be Leon Rothier, basso; Tito Schipa, tenor, and Maria Mueller and Editha Fleischer, sopranos.

THE air premiere of Jensen's Passacaglia and a tribute to the American composer, Edward MacDowell, will be the highlights of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra broadcast, under the direction of Issay Dobrowen (WJSV, 3 to 5 p. m.)

Ludwig Irgens Jensen, composer of the Passacaglia, which will have its first New York performance and its air premiere this week, is a member of the young Norwegian school of contemporary artists that includes Johansen, Balen, Jordan and Hulun. He is the author of one opera, an oratorio, several chamber music selections and twenty songs. His Passacaglia is dedicated to Dobrowen and has been performed in this country only twice, both times by the San Francisco Symphony, under the baton of Dobrowen.

Another feature of the program will be MacDowell's Suite No. 2 in E minor, the popular "Indian" Suite. Played in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of MacDowell's death and the founding of the MacDowell Colony. The composition has not been included in a Philharmonic program since Mengelberg's regime in 1922. Based on thematic material taken from authentic Indian melodies, the suite is divided into five sections: Legend, Love Song, In War Time, Dirge, and Village Festival.

Brahm's Symphony No. 2 in D major will be the concluding selection.

ERNEST HUTCHESON, concert pianist, will dedicate his broadcast tonight to the memory of Edward MacDowell. The entire program will be devoted to a complete rendition of the MacDowell Concerto in D minor (WJSV 10:30 o'clock). This work will be interpreted with the assistance of the concert orchestra, conducted by Howard Barlow.

The Leef brothers, Henry, tenor, and Thomas, basso, both well known in church and radio circles, will continue their Sunday morning broadcasts from WMAL at 10:15 o'clock this morning.

Thomas Leef sings with the Washington Male Quartet, heard regularly over the Southeastern network of the N. B. C. The quartet will be heard locally at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night over WRC.

THE third part of "The Sign of the Cross," written by Wilson Barrett, the London actor, will be heard over WMAL at 3 o'clock today. The play is under the supervision of Mrs. Mary Randolph Ruff, who also takes a leading role.

Mrs. Ruff and one of the other characters in the play, Mrs. Virginia Bayly-Blasingham, had prominent parts in the play when it first came to this country. For three years they played in all the principal cities and towns of the United States and Canada. The play deals with the persecution of the Christians in Rome during the reign of Nero, and about three years after the ascension of Jesus.

The WMAL cast is composed of Washington actors as follows: Henry Hood, Leslie Waudby, Clarence Ruebegame, Kent Dyer, William E. Bryant, Virginia Bayly-Blasingham, Mary Randolph Ruff, May Jameson Bryan and Elizabeth M. Phillips.

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

525.

SOME time ago I wrote an article about a colored team of four, known as the "Black Four Horsemen." This was the result of a communication which I received from one of the members of the team, in which he inclosed a hand bid by them. The bidding was so original in nature that I was unable to resist transcribing it, but it seems that in doing so I have aroused some amount of criticism from other members of the colored race. The purpose of this present article is to explain that I did not intend to reflect in any way on the playing ability of the colored race as a whole.

I am now in receipt of a communication from Edwin Sheen, of Washington, D. C., which goes a long way toward proving that one's race has no influence on one's Bridge game. Mr. Sheen incloses the following hand for this reason, and I think that it is worth recording.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ — ♡ A Q 10 9 7 5 4 ◇ A Q 7 6 3 ♣ 6
West: ♠ Q J 5 4 3 ♡ — ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ K 10 9 8 4
East: ♠ K 10 9 7 6 2 ♡ — ◇ K J 9 5 4 ♣ Q 3
South: ♠ A 8 ♡ K J 8 6 3 2 ◇ — ♣ A J 7 5 2

The bidding was as follows:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	3◇	3♠
4♣	4♠	5♠	Pass
5NT	Pass	7♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

The reader will note the accuracy of the bidding. The cue bidding was entirely logical, enabling both North and South to appreciate the fact that the Grand Slam was a spread. However, what I particularly admire about Mr. Sheen's letter is the following comment which he makes:

"East's bid of three spades after the Forcing Takeout by North was a little wild, I believe, but after it was made, it seems not altogether unreasonable that West could have deduced that the Grand Slam could not be defeated—especially in view of North's five spade bid—and could also have seen that seven spades could not be defeated by more than 4 tricks in all probability. Actually the maximum loss of East and West at seven spades would be a spade, a diamond and a club.

"I also wonder if North and South did not go through considerable formality to arrive at their contract. It seems to me that North could have safely bid six hearts after South showed his second suit, and that South, with both the Ace of spades and the Ace of clubs, could have bid the seventh with reasonable safety. If I am right, then North's five spade bid was merely an idle gesture and the most certain way to induce East and West to take the rap at seven spades."

The test of a keen analyst is the ability to appreciate the fact that a great deal of bidding may be unnecessary. I have seen countless hands published by experts where fancy bid after fancy bid is made and an extrordinary result achieved when in almost all cases the same result could have been attained by perfectly elementary bidding.

• • • •

A part-score is usually a hindrance to successful Slam bidding. However, it is decidedly an asset when a side is indulging in sacrifice bidding, as its presence adds immeasurably to deceptive possibilities in the bidding. It is very hard for the opponents to realize just who is telling the truth, and rarely, if ever, are they able to realize on the full strength of their combined holdings. The following hand amplifies this principle:

North—Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
North-South part score of 35.

North: ♠ K 10 8 6 4 ♡ 8 4 ◇ K 10 7 6 4 3 ♣ —
West: ♠ A Q J ♡ A K 6 ◇ J ♣ A K Q 6 4 2
East: ♠ 9 7 5 ♡ Q J 9 7 3 2 ◇ A ♣ J 5 3
South: ♠ 3 2 ♡ 10 5 ◇ Q 9 8 5 2 ♣ 10 9 8 7

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
		Pass	Pass
1◇ (1)	Dbl.	Redbl. (2)	1♡ (3)
Pass	3♣ (4)	4◇ (5)	Pass
Pass	5♣ (6)	5◇	5♡ (7)
6◇ (8)	Dbl. (9)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A very reasonable psychic, in view of the part-score of 35. South knows that it will make it harder for East and West to get together.

2—A strategic bid in order to protect partner.

3—Not strong enough for a jump response.

4—Not a Forcing bid, but this is about the only weapon at his command.

5—This is a game bid, but three diamonds in this position would be practically Forcing. North is fairly sure that his partner has opened with a psychic, and so inserts this semi-Slam try in order to further mask his batteries.

6—Still refusing to give up his big hand.

7—East finally decides to take some action. Up to this point his partner has given about the strongest bidding possible, and all he has done was to bid once. This bid of his should have given West the proper clue, but apparently failed to do so.

8—Forced to make this bid, in view of the fact that his partner has driven the opponents so high.

9—A really unimaginative bid. It should be evident that the Small Slam is practically certain in view of his partner's Rebid.

In the play North and South lost 4 tricks, going down 400 points. East and West could have made seven clubs, seven hearts or seven notrump. Undoubtedly, the fault lay principally with the West player, but so cleverly did North and South mask their defensive bidding that it was very difficult for them ever to appreciate their actual strength. Without the presence of a 35-point part-score, it is doubtful whether these tactics would have succeeded.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Notrump.

North: ♠ 10 8 ♡ 4 ◇ — ♣ 10 2
West: ♠ — ♡ 6 3 ◇ — ♣ Q 8 6
East: ♠ 9 7 3 ♡ A ◇ — ♣ J
South: ♠ 6 4 ♡ — ◇ — ♣ A 7 5

Trick 1. South leads club 5; West plays the Queen; North throws the Ten.

Tricks 2 to 5. If West leads a club, South wins 2 tricks in that suit and North makes spade Ten. If West leads a heart, won by East, North wins 2 tricks in spades and South makes club Ace.

If North makes the mistake of playing club 2 under West's Queen, West leads club 6, on which East discards heart Ace. East and West win the odd trick.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Each Sunday I will prepare a problem in end-play. In this week's problem, which is No. 17 of the series, hearts are trump and it is South's lead. North and South are to win four out of the six remaining tricks against any possible defense. The answer will be given next Sunday.

North: ♠ — ♡ 9 4 3 ◇ — ♣ 7 5 3
West: ♠ — ♡ 10 ◇ Q 9 6 4 ♣ J
East: ♠ 7 ♡ A Q 6 ◇ 10 ♣ 8
South: ♠ K ♡ K J 8 7 ◇ — ♣ 10

FIRESIDE AND HOSTESS GOWNS IMPORTANT ITEMS IN CAPITAL WARDROBES

Apparel Worn Must Be Neat In Every Detail

Cleanliness in Person as in Clothes Must Be Cultivated by Milady.

By DARE.

AH, would that some strange power, some kindly goddess who appreciated graceful and lovely women, would give us permanent loveliness!

What woman wouldn't cheerfully perform all of the given tasks no matter how difficult, if her reward would be untarnishable loveliness, grace, charm, all of the attributes for which she continually strives, and as continually must strive for if she is to keep them!

And keep them she must. For a lovely lady is a product of effort, of endless patience, of tireless striving and doing. Let her relax just the least bit—and she is lost. Let her lower her standard of elegance, and she will find the climb back almost impossible. Because when a lovely lady allows herself to become less lovely, she admits a lessening of inner loveliness, of spiritual strength—and this it is which is almost impossible to revive.

Cleanliness is next to godliness—or an indication of elegance, of culture, I should say. And one of the lesser lights of cleanliness is neatness. It doesn't matter how clean your person and clothing is, if it isn't neat as well, sooner or later you will overlook, as easily as you have overlooked the frayed thread, the rouge spots on the front of your dress, the missing button—sooner or later, I say, you will overlook a little personal and sartorial untidiness—and, imperceptibly, fall from the standards of lovely ladiness.

There was a lovely lady on the boat I have just left—oh, she has everything! She was naturally slender, had a naturally beautiful and low-pitched voice, poise, wit—I tell you, she simply had everything to start with, and had improved upon it and cultivated it besides. But—a sad little but! We couldn't believe our eyes but 'twas a fact—for her gown slipped a bit, just a little bit—and disclosed a soiled bodice, which had been cut and left raggedly cut, to lower the decolletage. We were so shocked—couldn't have been more disappointed at anything. And the worst part of it was that she felt it, too—because the only hurried and embarrassed gesture that she made on the entire trip was when she tried to close her frock so that the tell-tale bodice wouldn't show. Pity!

Elegance is a thing of the soul. One who is truly elegant, really cultured, can not wear soiled and torn and disheveled things, whether they are seen or not. However plain, however inexpensive, every single thing that a lovely lady wears must be neat, clean, perfect in itself, no matter what that self is. If you aren't thus, you have no right to consider yourself lovely and a gentlewoman. I known another woman who prides herself on being a "gentlewoman" who is constantly referring to this and that about herself that is to her an indication of her breeding and intelligence. She keeps herself immaculate—but does not seem to mind wearing soiled, torn, strapless and safety pinned underwear, does not cringe at spots on her dress, at things, in short, which prove her not the gentlewoman she believes herself to be. For culture points out to us the importance of sartorial neatness, as well as bodily cleanliness. Points it out to us so definitely, that we can not bear to be torn or spotted anywhere.

Let's today think this over, and ask yourselves whether we are truly as cultured and as intelligent as we believe we are. No matter how many persons lacking in real appreciation of the niceties of life tell us we are lovely, divine, adorable—let's ask ourselves what we think of us. And answer fairly.

Tucked-in-Blouse Revived in Paris

With the abandonment of the princess-waisted skirt, Paris couturiers seem to have revived the tucked-in blouse, which languished for a season, or if the blouse is not tucked in, it stops at the waistline just over the skirt.

Because of the high neckline on so many, the style of fastening them at the top of the back by a short row of buttons is a feature to be noticed, as this permits the blouse to be slipped off over the head.

Gray Proves Smart For Evening Wear

Paris, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—The Honorable Mrs. Reginald Fellowes is among smart Parisians who are choosing gray for evening wear this fall.

She wears a frock of pumice gray silk jersey fashioned on lines which cling closely to the figure with a three-quarter length cape of gray crinkled velvet which is lined with marabout in a lighter tone of gray.

Rows of Ruffling On Novelty Scarfs

Rows of ruffling, creating novelty scarfs, appear both in crisp fabrics and in soft silks or woolens with evening and afternoon dresses shown by Mainbocher.

Peau d'ange thread knitted fabrics in suits of two and three piece styling favoring pastel tints, such as apricot, peach and pervenche blue are cited.

Black Blouse Worn With Green Suit

An important blouse fashion is that of dark top with light jacket and skirt.

For some time this has been a sports fashion, notably in red with white flannel skirt this summer, and in navy with gray flannel skirt last spring, and Schiaparelli has previously toyed with the idea; in recent showings she accented it, and it was found in other collections as well, the most striking example being the black blouse with green suit at Bonnet's.

The dress at the extreme left, for dinner wear, is developed in a sheer crepe in an interesting honey-beige shade, with gold sequins for trimming. The long slashed sleeves are interesting.

The combination of silver lame and gray rough crepe is expressed in the next dress, the neckline conservative at the front and low at the back.

The next dress also approves the combination of lame and crepe, the bodice suggesting a jacket in gold and black plaid, and the skirt in black crepe. The high neckline and width at the arms are noteworthy details.

A striking contrast in colors is achieved in the next costume, the dress in a lively red satin jersey and the cape in fringes of jet beads.

The interest in coq feathers as an accent for a cire satin dress continues. The dress illustrated is done in black cire satin, with the coq feathers matching.

Gentlewomen's Clothes Made by Elegance

American Designer in Paris Exhibits Collection Featured by Brilliant Metal and Touches of Bright Colors—Fur Wraps Are Smart.

Paris, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A mode of elegance for gentlewomen marks the latest clothes collection shown by an American designer prominent in the Paris fashion world.

Sleek, slim black crepe frocks, given a flash of brilliancy by metal belts or touches of bright color, simple dark ensembles with three-quarter coats and evening frocks of dull surfaced crepe in exotic cyclamen hues distinguish the Mainbocher collection.

Fur wraps likewise reflect the elegance mode. Four fox scarfs—two beige, two brown—worn draped about the neck and hanging down the mannequin's back are shown as the smartest accompaniment for a beige wool frock.

Restrained slender lines, natural waistlines and plain sleeves are shown in the frocks designed for daytime wear. The flash of metal or color used in their trims is another distinguishing feature.

One plain frock of heavy black marocain has a narrow belt and a vee outlined on the bodice in gold, black and white braid; another has a narrow belt of red suede to match the accompanying red coat, while a third is accentuated by a fichu scarf lined with cyclamen pink crepe.

There is a frock for formal afternoon wear, which Mainbocher has fashioned from heavy white marocain, using a side neckline caught with a cluster of crimson roses. A scarf of chinchilla fox bordered in white organdy is worn with it.

Evening frocks base their elegance on the richness of their fabric and the simplicity of their line. A lavender crepe frock designed with a natural waistline and full skirt has a cluster of cyclamen pink blossoms at the waistline as its only trim, while a frock of deep pink has three dark red flowers embedded in the corsage.

Angora Gloves Widely Popular

Paris, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Velvet gloves have been followed by basket-weave leather gloves and others made of the skins of Angora cats. In fact, it seems that smartness obliges you to wear anything on the hands except the ordinary kid gloves of other years. The beauty of Angora gloves is that the world population of Angora cats is very limited and you may be the only woman on your street to possess a pair.

The basket-weave gloves are attractive, made of thin strips of leather crossed one over another. They are specially for sport wear, for they naturally are heavy and warm.

For dress there is a new glove which has made novel use of fur. The hand of the glove is in black velvet and the turn-down cuff is in white ermine. The contrast is startling and the velvet and ermine blend beautifully.

Black Lace Smart For Evening Wear

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Lady Serena Lumley is among smart Europeans who are choosing black lace evening frocks for formal wear.

She wears a gown of black Chantilly lace designed with narrow frills running from waist to hem and a broadened shoulder effect which gives the effect of epaulettes.

Lillian Gish Wears Coat of Corduroy

Gown of French Actress

Mainbocher designs this frock of heavy white marocain, worn by the French actress, Mlle. Yolande Laffon. Suited to formal afternoon affairs, it is made with the new side neckline caught with a cluster of crimson roses and is worn with a scarf of chinchilla fox bordered in organdy.

Individuality In Dress Is Urged Rather Than Copying Stage.

Too Many Duplicate Gowns Seen Worn, Most From Same Model.

By ELEANOR GUNN.

New York, Dec. 10.—It is pretty generally conceded by now that the movies tint, and somtimes taint, our ideas on what to wear—and when and how. The stage always did influence us one way or another, but nothing like the number of people get to see a play as get to see a film. Therefore the films now have it by way of greatest influence.

It's rather a mistake for the average young thing, and certainly for the sentimental old thing, to go in for Hollywood types of costume. It might be all right if we could control our scenes and postures, but the clothes one tears around in look very different from the same clothes photographed at their best.

It is splendid, though, that we all have a chance to see what's what in dress—and incidentally, what isn't. It's quite within our rights to model our own wardrobe after that of a person of a similar type, but, alas, that does not always mean our favorite screen star.

We are all trying our big sleeves, seeing whether we do or do not like them on closer acquaintance. We are also trying out the higher neckline and the rakish-looking hats that other women wear with such a dash but, alas again, many of us are being very disillusioned.

Even with the enormous variety of dresses purchasable today, it's amusing—or annoying, according to how the thing strikes you—to see how many duplicates of the same model are being worn. There is, for instance, one black velvet evening gown with sleeves that are not sleeves really, since they leave the upper arm exposed and pull on like gantlets, that is met with four and five times at any big party or in any audience.

This particular model is easy to spot because it has, besides the unusual sleeves, hoops of sequins at the armholes. But there are scores of other less striking models that may be counted on to be among those present at any gathering. This is particularly true of French dresses, which seem to be more easily recognizable this year than ever before. In case you are looking for an argument for American design, here is excellent ammunition.

Dancing Imperiled By Use of Trains

Strange things may happen to one's dancing. Some of the things are objectionable and detrimental. The growing trend for evening gowns with a slight train almost is polluting some of the best dancers' footwork.

It's lovely to look like Salome, or Norma Shearer, but with the rhythms which are at present vogue, the girls ought to rehearse before their mirrors just how to whoop a train before inflicting one on some mooning escort who wants to sing unbrokenly sweet lyrics about outputting of the lights without having his partner trip because she's unaccustomed to public training.

Black Corduroy Suit Is Stunning

Paris, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Mme. Raymond de Patenotre, wife of the French senator, attended a recent fashionable tea wearing a stunning black velvet corduroy suit accented by a black leather belt studded with colored stones.

With it she wore a simple white crepe blouse and a little black velvet toque.

Knitted Garments Indorsed in Paris

Schiaparelli's knitted hats are another fashion indorsed by smart young things around Paris.

Hand-knitted garments, which of late seasons have concentrated on individually styled blouses and jumpers are now completed by knitted hats and scarfs and skillfully made toques that are far removed from the staple stocking and beret styles.

Ideas of 3 Decades Ago Seen in Current Styles

Revival of "Wasp" Waist, Overweighted Shoulders, Small and Befeathered Hats Atop Ponderous Pompadours, However, Will Be Barred.

Hollywood, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—"She's as modern as tomorrow," a Hollywood stylist said the other day, commenting on a lovely lady of the cinema.

"Tomorrow," replied Earl Luick, "she will be as 'modern' as her mother was 30 years ago."

Luick, creator of women's wear for Fox Pictures, based his conclusion on his experiences in designing gowns of the Edwardian period worn by Diana Wynyard and others who appear in "Cavalcade."

"Already, in current fashions, we see evidences of this return to the style ideas of three decades ago," Luick continued. "In fact, for some of the 'Cavalcade' gowns I have been able to draw on the smart salons of New York and Hollywood for capes, fabrics, and trims to be used in the idealized costumes of the 1900-06 period of the story.

"I say 'idealized' since theatrical artifice, while demanding the reproduction of old styles in correct period, also necessitates the softening and subduing of these harsh lines and exaggerated, ugly features which make you shudder should you glance at Goundy's old fashion plates.

"There is not, nor will there be, any revival of the 'wasp' waist; no overweighting of the shoulders, no ridiculously small and befeathered hats perched miraculously atop ponderous pompadours. How the smart and active woman of 1933 would rebel at such absurdities!

"Yet the flattering shoulder cape, the elegance of fur, the bewitching muff, the molded waistlines, all are with us today and will continue, I believe, to be the motivating force in determining the future dictates of Dame Fashion."

Miss Wynyard, who plays a typical English mother of the upper class, wears a suit of Dutch blue Lyons velvet trimmed with ermine and chinchilla and a rippling little cape stole tipped in ermine tails. A hat of the same supple velvet with a bandeau of ermine and chinchilla tipped in ermine tails completes the costume.

A daytime dress is of rich wine-colored cloth with velvet appliques in the same shade. Leg-o'-mutton sleeves and pointed bodice trimmed with gold-embroidered ecru lace are other Edwardian details.

Satin Jersey Used For Evening Frock

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Lady Dashwood attended a recent smart evening party wearing a frock of hyacinth-blue satin jersey designed along slim sheath lines and trimmed with two stiffened bands of violet ribbon at the hemline.

Bottle Green Gown

New Designs in Pajamas

Christmas Gifts Include Charms

Too many young blades muddle their intentions by selecting wrong Christmas remembrances for the little hoydenish heathen that happen to be the object of their devotions at the moment.

A fetish is one of the safest gifts there is, and most adored, particularly so right now when the fashion of fetishism has returned 100-proof.

These little idolized charms are no respecters of money, as they're available from 50 cents to hundreds of dollars. So are the link bracelets to hang them on. The selection of the fetish may represent some silly secret, sirupy sentiment, or be entirely non-saccharin. A tiny "13" is one of the popular inexpensive charms, and two sailors with bright blue enamel shirts and diamond pants are tremendously popular among the genuine-stone, expensive ones.

Fifth Avenue Dash Is Shown By Farm Girls

75 4-H Club Contestants From 41 States Take Part in Style Revue.

Chicago, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—They came from cross-corners and small town main streets, but the clothes these young farmerettes made and modeled in the National 4-H Clubs style show had Fifth avenue dash.

And from 75 contestants, representing 41 States in this revue, one of the big events of the annual National Congress of Boys and Girls 4-H Clubs, blonde 19-year-old Mildred Startup of Silver City, Kans., was awarded the grand championship for her light woolen blue suit.

This double-breasted, two-piece suit, which had a blouse and scarf of a figured lightweight blue tweed, was also judged first in the tailored wool class. She wore with it a narrow brimmed sport hat and carried dark blue gloves and bag. Her entire outfit, including shoes and underwear, totaled $19.45.

For $4.62 15-year-old Margaret Franklin, of Leesville, La., got together a costume, including shoes and underwear, that won first place in the cotton or linen school-dress group.

Her bright blue linene dress had a bolero jacket effect and a vest and scarf of blue and white check. The sleeve was intricate, having a cuff that extended above the elbow. Her hat was of blue linene.

Mary Louise Chambers, 15, of Mansville, W. Va., winner of first place in the semitailored silk or rayon dress class, was an advance fashion plate for Palm Beach in her white silk corduroy sleeveless sport frock, with its waist-length jacket. Her outfit cost $22.69.

Helen Clark, of Portland, Oreg., was ready for the gayest of school parties in her apricot dotted Swiss informal frock, which placed first in its classification. The long full skirt was flounced and tucked from the knees down. Her ensemble totaled $10.35.

Dotted swiss was also favored by Edith Yuill, of Easthampton, Mass., for her party frock, which placed third, and in the same group Cleona Brinsfield, of Vienna, Md., took second place with a close-fitting, untrimmed double-duty frock of pink crepe. With its jacket, which had ruffle sleeves, it was an informal dinner dress, but without it, a simple evening gown.

Samrose Parker, of Kingston, Tenn., took navy blue cotton tweed with a small red and white figure and made a dress, an envelope bag and a pretty little hat and won second prize in the school dress group.

As chic as a fashion tip from Paris was Etoile Day, of Vicksburg, Miss., in her cotton corduroy school frock which had a skirt of tan and a double-breasted blouse top of dark brown. The skirt had two patch pockets, trimmed in the brown. She placed third in the cotton group.

And the deep, warm brown wool dress with its intricate bias tucking made by Oro Smith, of Ballantine, Mont., looked like Michigan boulevard. This frock, which placed third in the semitailored wool group, had a big collar as modern as the coming world's fair. It looked like inverted stairsteps.

Collars on Jackets Exceedingly Small

In general, the collars of jackets are small or nonexistent and in consequence the neck finishes of the blouses underneath become very important.

More jackets than not, of hip length, are belted or seamed at the waistline, in contrast to the longer two-thirds coats which are mostly swagger. Skirts of suits are simple, cut with as little fullness as possible, but preferring circular cut to pleats.

Toque and Muffs Appear in Feathers

New York, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Feather toque and muff sets are worn by smart Parisians for formal occasions this fall.

At a recent fashionable wedding one chic guest wore with a costume of brown velvet a little toque and muff of brown pheasant feathers. Another wore a similar ensemble of bronze coque feathers with a gown of black velvet.

Lacquered Satins Are Disappearing

Maggy Rouff is drawing a veil on her lacquered satins of early fall and is veering toward pastel pure-dye satins for evening. The lacquered types were becoming almost as common as Mickey Mouse over here, and she didn't like that so much. She also is sending out an advance guard from her browsing and designing rooms that she believes in organdies. Organdies, as a matter of fact, should be one of the nubbins to carve for Southern wear, sometimes with floral motifs and sometimes lace trimmed.

Sunday Night Frocks Even Worn by Girls

Mrs. Hoover in Rough Brown Silk at Musicale; Mrs. Wilson in Dull Crepe.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

SINCE it is a popular belief that the fate of nations is decided in our National Capital at the informal gatherings where two or three or, at least not more than an even dozen, are gathered together for a cup of tea or other beverage or an informal supper after an entertainment, "fireside gowns" therefore, are listed as the most important items of the official and diplomatic hostess' wardrobe.

Dame Fashion has realized the importance of formal informality in the numberless variety of fireside and hostess gowns she has offered in recent years under the general head of "Sunday Night" frocks. These are as unlike daytime gowns as they can be and yet are not, strictly speaking, evening gowns.

Many have trains and all of them are made of handsome material and have hanging sleeves. The most popular of these fireside gowns are on long princess lines with V-shaped necklines in the front and high in the back or else bateau-shapes necklines, back and front, with an occasional draped neckline. The sleeves can be of the same material, but most of them have long ones of chiffon, brocade, lace or even tulle, edged with handsome fur.

For the first time in several years the young girls are taking to hostess gowns for an evening at home or when just a few friends gather for "tea," a buffet supper or to play bridge or backgammon.

Mrs. Hoover in Brown Silk.

Mrs Herbert Hoover had on at the Wednesday morning musicale a dress of rough brown silk, trimmed with dull old gold lace. With this she wore a coat of brown cloth trimmed in brown. She wore a brown velvet hat with a dull gold braid on it.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson looked smart in a dress of dull crepe with which she wore a coat of rough black material with silver fur collar and cuffs. She wore a small hat with a shallow crown and narrow brim.

Mrs. James J. Davis is wearing a tailored suit of hunter's green rough cloth made with a plain skirt and short closely fitted jacket edged with dark fur. Mrs. Davis wore a small hat with a shallow brim and narrow crown.

Mrs. George Mesta, who has recently returned to Washington from Oklahoma and has opened her house for the season, is wearing an ensemble costume of black wool, with the coat made long, close fitting and with a high collar and swinging cuffs of silver fox. With this she wears a black hat with a violet flange on one side.

Miss Mary Randolph has a smart winter costume composed of a sport dress of red wool with which she wears a coat of red and brown wool with a brown fur collar on it. She wears a small felt hat with this.

Mrs. Tasker Oddie was seen recently in a dress of black silk, with a surplice collar of cream chiffon. With this she wears a black coat trimmed with fur and a bright green velvet hat.

Worn by Mrs. Belmont.

Mrs. Perry Belmont wore at a recent luncheon an ensemble costume of purple cloth trimmed with sable fur. The coat is made long and in princess effect. With this Mrs. Belmont wears a purple velvet hat.

Mrs. William F. Dennis has a chic cloth dress embroidered in all-over design in silver threads. This is trimmed with rich black fur and made in coat dress effect. With this Mrs. Dennis wears a modish black felt hat and a black fur coat.

Mrs. Sol Bloom is wearing an ensemble of black cloth trimmed with fur, with a small hat of black felt with a silver bow on one side.

Miss Vera Bloom has an ensemble costume of dark red cloth trimmed with brown fur, with which she wears a black felt hat.

Mrs. George T. Marye is wearing a graceful ensemble costume of black cloth trimmed with mink fur. With this she wears a small black hat.

Mrs. Clyde Kelly was seen at a luncheon in a dress of black velvet trimmed with white satin. With this she wears a black cloth coat with a high fur collar. Her hat is a modish black felt one.

Miss Persis Myers looked smart in a street costume composed of a black wool dress and a coat of Persian lamb with a tiny hat made of the fur.

Mrs. Charles G. Matthews chose for one of the luncheons a dress of purple cloth trimmed with silver, with a coat to match, with a fur collar on it. With this she wears a purple velvet hat.

Mrs. Jeffries Chewning is wearing a dress of wine-colored cloth trimmed with a deeper shade of velvet. With this she wears a small wine-colored velvet hat.

Costume of Black Cloth.

Lady Lewis, wife of Sir Willmott Lewis, is wearing a morning costume of black cloth with a wide scarf of silver fox. She wears a small black hat with a narrow brim with this costume.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend has a dress of black velvet with which she wears a vestee of cream lace. Her hat is a black felt one with a narrow brim.

Miss Anne Randolph had on at a luncheon a dress of black satin with a rough finish. With this she wore a black cloth coat with a silver fox collar. Her hat is a soft felt one with a crushed crown.

Mrs. Charles Francis Adams was seen shopping last week in a dress of black wool with which she wore a black coat with fur collar and cuffs and a small hat of black felt.

Miss Dorothy Sollers is wearing a suit of dark blue cloth made on tailored lines. With this she wears a fur scarf and a small blue hat with a narrow brim.

Lady Lindsay wore for an afternoon event at the British Embassy a dress of black velvet with long sleeves of black lace. For a morning shopping tour Lady Lindsay had on a suit of Oxford gray cloth with which she wore a silver fox fur. Her hat was of black velvet.

The swish of taffeta will mingle with the Christmas bells, not only for the debutantes and subdebutantes this season, but for the older sisters as well. To make the yuletide aspect more apparent many of the latest dinner and dance frocks being shown in our shops are of holly red and mistletoe green, trimmed with white fur or gold lace, which looks very much like the tinsel ornaments on a Christmas tree.

MANY WASHINGTON WOMEN ACTIVE, BUT SECRETLY, IN MINISTERING TO NEEDY

Identity of Families Benefited Not Revealed

Food, Shelter and Clothes Provided for Those Suffering in Depression; Especially Among New Poor, Who Make No Direct Appeal to Charity; Meals Shared.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE women's organizations of the city that meet in impressive headquarters and those that meet in the living rooms of the members, are hiding the light of their good works in this year of depression under a bushed, so to speak. These women groups, every one of them, are ministering to their less fortunate neighbors keeping this "charity," if such it can be called, a strict secret among the club members. Often the identity of the families benefited are a secret among the officers of the organization.

There seems to be a fixed determination among the women of the city to see that every one shall at least have food and shelter and clothes and that the children of the family are not interrupted in schooling for lack of clothes. The families and individuals thus succored are not of the type who would make a direct appeal to the organized agencies as a rule, but those whom the club members discover among the new poor.

The army of women Government workers, it has been discovered by these women groups are not all as carefree as they appear when they pour out of the great Government buildings after their day's work is done. Despite the regularity of the Government pay envelope, every one of them has to get along with less to meet their own current expenses and to help support their families or to send weekly stipends home to aid a family of which probably every member is unemployed. So the quiet, efficient and ever-moving agency of women clubs is grinding away every week, the members quietly inviting some of the women workers, as well as those who are not now working, to their homes for Sunday dinner under the great constantly increasing national idea of the organized or unorganized "share a meal" idea.

During the World War few families enjoying the luxury of a home of their own in Washington sat down to Sunday or holiday dinners without extra guests selected from among those who might not dine well or, at least, would dine alone. In this time of national crisis the same women, with the same spirit of service, add one, two, three or four or even more plates to their festive tables.

The business and professional women of Washington are among the banner bearers in this great invisible organization of mercy which has sprung up almost involuntarily with the need. Quietly each one of these women have made themselves a contact committee between possible employers or, at least, take an interest in the unemployed sister until such time as the weight of business depression will allow her to join the procession of those who can earn a weekly wage.

These women realize, too, that it is not only the unemployed whose burden must be lightened, but that the working woman who does not receive enough to meet the family expenses of which she is the only wage earner, must be considered.

Kensington Club

The meeting of the Woman's Club of Kensington, held at the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Brown on December 2, was largely attended and the gathering enjoyed a musical program given by Miss Dorothy Wilson Halbach, contralto, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gardner Combs, pianist, both of Chevy Chase. Mrs. Coombs accompanied Miss Halbach. Among her songs were "The Fallen Oak," "Bye o' Baby Bye" and "The Willow Cats," by Louise Crawford; "The Moon Droops Low," by Cadman, and a Russian number called "The Sleigh."

Mrs. Coombs delighted her hearers with her playing of the Waltz in E, by Moskowski, and Fantasy Impromptu in C-sharp, and "The Witches' Dance." By request she played "The Gondolier," by Ethelbert Nevin.

The president, Mrs. E. A. Farrell, presided. Following the reports of the different committees, the club voted a pair of blankets for the social service. It was stated the club members have been very successful in the Red Cross drive, social service and the special Christmas opportunities Miss Anna C. Reinhardt and Mrs. Ernest J. Wakefield will have charge of the Christmas party to be given at the Ken-Gar School. The Woman's Community Club will serve refreshments. Club members brought gifts for the children of the Ken-Gar School.

A Christmas pageant, a community choral, Christmas affairs sponsored by the Woman's Club and directed by Mrs. W. Perry Hay, will be presented next Sunday evening at the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church. Much preparation is being made for the presentation of the pageant, and Mr. Benjamin L. Vipond is rehearsing the chorus which is to lead the congregational singing, with Mrs. John Trader, organist, Miss Virginia Ronsaville will take the part of "The Mary," and a list of others taking part in the pageant will be given later.

There will be no more meetings held until after the first of the year.

Founders and Patriots

District of Columbia Chapter, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, were entertained at the December meeting by Mrs. J. K. Freiot and Mrs. W. G. Sears, of 57 Observatory circle, on December 2, with the president, Mrs. J. H. Harper, presiding. The committee appointed to revise the by-laws to conform to those of the national society submitted an amendment to Article II, which was adopted. Fifteen dollars was voted the national society for the restoration of colonial records. Two new members—Mrs. Henry Blodgett Brand and Mrs. George Hillyer, jr.—were received. The January meeting will be held at the Grafton with Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Vandegrift and Miss Jaquette as hostesses.

Art in Vatican Is Pictured By Delphians

Umbrian School in Particular Is Discussed by Delta Sigma Chapter.

The Delta Sigma Chapter of the Delphian Society met Monday at the Shoreham Hotel, the president, Mrs. Clark Cranston, presiding.

The lesson embodied "The Umbrian School and Vatican Treasures," led by Mrs. Ralph Smith, who spoke briefly about the principal painters of the school, and its general characteristics. Umbria includes the valley of the upper Tiber, but artistically speaking, it reaches to the Adriatic and embraces central Italy.

Examples of the Umbrian School were discussed by Mrs. H. R. Hendricks, in the following pictures: "The Crucifixion" and "Christ Delivering the Keys to Peter," by Perugino, and "The Marriage of the Virgin," by Raphael. "Blashfield's Estimate of Raphael" was discussed by Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass. Raphael is absolute monarch of the art of composition. In "Symond's Estimate of Raphael," presented by Mrs. Annie C. Otto, one finds that he is not merely a man, but a school, for craftsmen of every description copied his compositions. His masterpiece, "The School of Athens," was discussed generally. This work is masterful, both because of its conception and because of its infinite detail.

Several of Raphael's Madonnas were shown and discussed. Mrs. John D. Rhoades exhibited a beautifully colored reproduction of his "Sistine Madonna," as well as several others which she had purchased abroad.

"General Character of Art Treasures of the Vatican" was discussed by Mrs. Gale Pugh. The word "Vatican" is thought to be taken from "vaticinis," meaning oracles, and at some remote period it is probable that people came thither to consult seers who interpreted the will of the gods. "The Sistine Chapel" was discussed by Mrs. John Evans. This chapel takes its name from Pope Sixtus IV, who began its construction in 1482. It contains wall frescoes by four artists—Botticelli, Ghirlandjo, Perugino and Rosselli; also some tapestries designed by Raphael. "Michael Angelo's Work in the Sistine Chapel" was discussed by Mrs. John D. Rhoades. The crowning achievement in the little chapel is the ceiling decoration by this genius. A large picture of it was exhibited and Mrs. Rhoades told the symbolism of many of the groups.

"Raphael's Loggia and Stanze" was fully described by Mrs. C. E. Riordan. In the long gallery or loggia connecting the Papal Palace with the Court of the Belvedere, are found fifty-two illustrations by Raphael of scriptural lore, done so simply and graphically that "he who runs may read. Chirlandajo's masterpiece, the "Calling of Andrew and Peter," the only surviving fresco which he did for the Sistine Chapel, was described by Mrs. Guy Mason.

The summary was given by the president. In comparing Raphael and Michael Angelo, she said that Raphael's genius was assimulative; Michael Angelo's was creative.

The next meeting will be held December 19, at 10 a. m., at the Shoreham Hotel. The literary program, "Sienese and Venetian Painting" will be under the leadership of Mrs. John D. Rhoades.

The Alpha Zeta Chapter of the Delphian Society will meet at the Washington Hotel Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The study for the morning, under the direction of Mrs. Charles H. Curl, will be "The End of Egypt's Empire."

Democratic Council

Stewart G. Gibboney, president of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, of New York City, has written to the treasurer of the District of Columbia Women's Democratic Educational Council, Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble, on behalf of the officers and governors of the foundation, a gracious message of appreciation for the recent donation from the council to the foundation.

Mr. Gibboney hopes that "within the sphere of its influence," the District of Columbia Women's Democratic Educational Council will spread "the message of Monticello."

The foundation also sent to the council an honorary guest card, for visits to Monticello, the historic home of Thomas Jefferson.

Mrs. Helen Stafford Whitton, corresponding secretary, read at the last general meeting, a letter from the Vice President-elect John Nance Garner, in appreciation and in response to a letter of condolence sent by the council on the passing of his distinguished mother.

Mrs. Clarence T. Hendrickson, new chairman of program, announces as the next book review, at the general meeting of the council, Monday, December 19, "The Coming of a New Party," by Paul Douglas. Mrs. Charles Baldwin will give the review of the book.

Miss Mary E. Bakewell, of the League of Women Voters, who has studied Washington, as a man and first President, extensively, will address the December 19 meeting on "A Modernist Looks at the First President."

Panhellenic

The Panhellenic Association of Washington will be guests of honor at a tea given by the Alliance of Delta Delta Delta Fraternity on Friday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock at the Washington Club. The officers of the fraternity will be in the receiving line and the past presidents will preside at the tea table during the afternoon. Mrs. Theodore Cogswell is general chairman of arrangements for the tea.

The local Panhellenic, composed of delegates from 21 fraternities, was organized about a year ago in order to bring together the various fraternity alumnae groups in Washington.

Soroptimist Club

Mrs. Martin Hysong, president of the Soroptimist Club entertained the members of her board and the chairman of standing committees at a dinner party at her home on Thursday evening. Farce Planned By Curley Club Unit Tuesday

"Leave It to Me" to Be Given at St. Paul's Auditorium for Scholarship Fund.

Under the direction of Luke F. O'Reilly, chairman of the dramatic committee of the Curley Club, arrangements have been perfected for the presentation of the comedy farce, "Leave It To Me," in St. Paul's Auditorium, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, Tuesday evening, at 8:15 o'clock. Proceeds from the production will be applied to the scholarship fund of the organization. The production is being staged under the personal supervsion of Miss Angelia Keir, who portrayed many roles for E. H. Sothern in Shakespearan productions, and who was for many years leading lady for Charles Frohman and David Belasco. A capable cast of characters has been selected to portray the principal roles in the presentation.

A special performance will be given this afternoon for sisters and children of the local parochial schools.

During the evening, Miss Madeline McMahon, former musical star of several Broadway productions, including "No, No, Nanette," "June Moon," "My Maryland," and other musical comedy hits, will render several musical selections. Dancing will follow the presentation until midnight.

A donation party will be given under auspices of the Curley Club next Sunday afternoon, when the entire membership of the club will assemble in the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor, Second and H streets northeast, where an inspection of the home will be made. Miss Gretchen Baden, chairman of the committee on arrangements, requests all members to bring unperishable foodstuffs, such as canned goods, coffee, flour, sugar, &c., clothing, apparel and tobacco, which will be gratefully accepted by the sisters in charge of the institution. The club will assemble at the home at 2 p. m.

D. C. Division, U. D. C., Holds Its Convention

Ceremonies Are Colorful; Mrs. Volland Reelected as President.

The District of Columbia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met in annual convention on Friday last at the Confederate Memorial Hall.

The meeting was opened by the processional, led by the color bearers—the United States flag being carried by Mrs. Beatrice Engle Lee, and the Confederate flag by Mrs. Ernest L. Loving.

The convention was called to order by Mrs. Fred Louis Volland, division president. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Nelson P. Webster, followed by the singing of "America" by the audience and the pledge of allegiance to the United States flag.

A memorial service was held for the twenty daughters and veterans who had died during the year. The invocation was given by Dr. Andrew Reid Bird, of the Church of the Pilgrims. Dr. Seba L. Christie sang, accompanied by Dr. Donald Brown.

The president, Mrs. Fred Louis Volland, was unanimously reelected for a second term, with the following division officers:

First vice president, Mrs. George Puller, Jefferson Davis Chapter; second vice president, Mrs. R. B. Whitehurst, Robert E. Lee Chapter; third vice president, Mrs. Ralph W. Howell, Dixie Chapter; recording secretary, Miss Marion Smith, Hilary A. Herbert Chapter; corresponding secretary, Miss Laura Sansbury, Richard Stoddard Ewell Chapter; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Lee Phares, Shenandoah Chapter; registrar, Mrs. Livingston Van, A. F. C. North Star Union.

North Star Union held the December meeting at St. Paul's M. E. Church, 4700 Thirteenth street northwest. Mrs. Marie N. Brinley, the president, presided. The pastor, the Rev. W. W. McIntyre, gave the invocation, and Mrs. McIntyre welcomed the ladies to the church. Meeting opened with the songs "America" and "Work for Enforcement Where You Are." Mrs. Edward Doocy, chairman Christian citizenship, read the "Prohibition Creed," followed by the reading of the object by Mrs. William M. Hurley, and salute to the flag, by the members.

The president stressed the importance in securing ten new members for each meeting and asked all present to sponsor at least one new member. The father-mother-daughter-son banquet is on January 16, 6:30 p. m., at Calvary Baptist Church, in honor of the thirteenth anniversary of the birthday of the eighteenth amendment. Mrs. W. O. Tufts, second vice president and delegate to the allied organization, read resolutions presented at District Sunday schools in November.

In the absence of Mrs. A. Natalie Desio, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Brinley announced to the ladies desiring to contribute jellies, cookies, magazines, &c., to have them ready for Mrs. Desio to collect on December 19. Mrs. Georgie E. Curry, third vice president and chairman of relief and extension, displayed a sample made of old linings reinforced into a warm, clean blanket for the Gospel Union Mission.

Mrs. Mildred K. Hicks, flower mission, will have charge of the buying and distribution of Christmas gifts for each and every patient in Upshur Street Hospital, with Mrs. Mabel V. Mercer and Mrs. A. E. Kay assisting. Mrs. E. L. Bugbee, contest director, reported three groups of children ready for medal contests. The Rev. and Mrs. W. W. McIntyre were appointed as members of this committee, the contest to be held Saturday, 7:30 p. m., at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Zelah Farmer, soldiers, sailors and marines, displayed sunshine envelopes for the patients at Walter Reed Hospital, and asked for small pillows and bedside bags for these shutins. Mrs. Sue Kirkpatrick, of Pennsylvania, was welcomed as a guest.

Mrs. Nevins gave a message from the Peace Conference. Mrs. Andreson reported on improvements in American films. The speaker, the Rev. W. W. McIntyre, gave an inspirational address on "Echoes of the Election," which was enthusiastically received by the large attendance. Two new members were enrolled, Mrs. K. P. Baldwin and Mrs. J. R. McCullough. The hostess, Mrs. W. W. McIntyre, assisted by Mrs. R. C. Briggs, Mrs. W. C. Humphrey, Mrs. H. C. McNeill, Mrs. H. L. Dull, Miss Sue R. Byrne, Mrs. Ida G. Blish, Miss Julia McCoy and Mrs. A. E. Kay served refreshments.

Memorial Wall Dedication Set At Alexandria

Old Presbyterian Church to Be Scene of Ceremony Next Wednesday.

The curtain will be rung down on a year of Bicentennial activities in historic Alexandria at 2:15 p. m. next Wednesday, the 133d anniversary of the death of George Washington, when the Sons of the Revolution dedicate a memorial wall of colonial design which they have erected in the yard of the Old Presbyterian Meeting House.

The church is in the 300 block of South Fairfax street, which bears the name of the benefactor of George Washington, Lord Fairfax. The wall is said to represent the most expensive piece of work done in connection with the Bicentennial by a patriotic society. Erected at a cost of $6,000, it has been acclaimed as a fine piece of colonial architecture. It was designed by Lynch Luquer, of Washington, and replaced a number of unsightly tumble-down fences.

In the quiet little churchyard around which the wall had been built rest famous men of colonial and Revolutionary day history—the closest friends of George Washington, scores of his comrades in arms, fellow Masons and even the pallbearers who bore him to his final resting place at Mount Vernon.

Here also is the only marked grave of an Unknown Soldier of the American Revolution. It is surmounted by a marble tomb, erected by the Children of the American Revolution.

Funds for erection of the wall were subscribed by members of the Sons of the Revolution in practically every State of the Union. Members of the New York State Society were the largest contributors. Members of the New Jersey Society made an almost 100 per cent response. The drive for funds started in 1926 and was completed in the summer of 1931. John B. Gordon, a member of the board of managers of the District of Columbia Society, acted as general chairman of the drive.

Principal speakers at the dedication program will be John Garland Pollard, jr., of the State of Virginia George Washington Bicentennial Commission; Col. John W. Williams, clerk of the House of Delegates and secretary of the Virginia State Bicentennial Commission; Dr. Thomas E. Green, chaplain general of the general Society of the Sons of the Revolution; John B. Gordon, chairman of the special committee of the Sons of the Revolution; William Buckner McGroaty, of Alexandria; Francis Key Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University; Hugh T. Williams, chairman of the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, Danville, Va., and Dr. Hugh Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education. The program will be broadcast by a coast to coast radio hook-up.

The United States Army Band will play. Evelyn Howard Sheridan, soloist, will sing selected patriotic airs, accompanied by Miss Frances Alexander Sinclair, a descendant of the founder of the town of Alexandria. Miss Sinclair will play accompaniments on the pump and bellows organ in the old Presbyterian Meeting House, believed to be the oldest organ in actual use in America.

A delegation representing the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, a separate organization from the Sons of the Revolution, will unite in the ceremony. The delegation will be composed of the following: Past President Col. Alonzo Gray, who will act as chairman; Gen. Amos A. Fries, Gen. Thomas H. Slavens, Gen. William E. Horton, Gen. Alexander E. Williams, Col. John P. Hains, Col. James S. Easby-Smith; Col. A. L. Conger, Capt. M. G. Cook, U. S. N.; Lieut. Col. L. C. Lucas, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. Col. Alexander Taylor and Commander Henry B. Soulé.

Among the great names carved on the tombstones in the old churchyard is that of Dr. James Craik, chief physician and surgeon of the Continental Army and the first surgeon general of the United States Army. Gen. Craik was considered the most intimate friend of George Washington.

Close by Gen. Craik's grave is the tomb of John Carlyle, George Washington's banker and in his younger days quartermaster general of the ill-fated British Gen. Braddock in the French and Indian campaigns of 1755.

Others buried in the churchyard include Charles McKnight, captain of the last military body to pass in review before George Washington prior to his death; Col. George Deneale, commander of the military escort at the funeral of George Washington, and the Rev. James Muir, pastor of the old Presbyterian Meeting House, a famous divine of his day.

Wheeler talked on current events.

Records of Weddings Are Found Incomplete

Dickinson, N. Dak. (U.P.)—Church records have been investigated and many couples married between 1901 and 1905 in Stark County questioned recently as county authorities attempted to fill in a gap in the marriage certificate records for the period.

A careless official was said to have neglected to file the certificates issued to some 350 couples during the four years.

No question regarding legality of the marriages performed at the time will arise, it was said, but the records must be filled in to furnish required legal proof in questions relating to legitimacy of children and inheritances. The omission was discovered when a woman requested a certified copy of her marriage certificate to make a claim to the estate of a deceased son.

Woman's Club Plans Winter Welfare Work

First Anniversary Meeting Is Held by Arlington Group; Investments Mapped.

The December meeting on the Woman's Club of Arlington, held last Monday at Windsor Arms, was the first anniversary of this thriving organization. Beginning the second year of its existence with a substantial balance in the treasury and a membership of more than 70, the members voted to invest the club's funds by purchasing a share of Arlington & Fairfax Building & Loan Associaiton stock, and to increase their holdings in this company as soons as additional funds were available.

It was also decided at this meeting to donate a sum of cash to the work of the Arlington County Welfare Board, and also provide for some needy family in the county throughout the winter.

The members voted to sponsor a Christmas ball, to be given during the holidays at Windsor Arms. The date is to be decided later. On that occasion, card tables will be provided for those who do not care to dance. The proceeds from the sale of tickets will go to swell the building funds.

Since Arlington is to have another community Christmas tree this year, Mrs. Tapp was delegated to represent the club on the committee that is preparing the program for the celebration around the tree.

Entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Eugen Prosnjak, of Washington, who sang a number of selections, including Christmas songs in German as well as English, and by Miss Virginia Dye, who gave several excellent readings, including "Birth of Christ," from "Ben Hur;" "Christmas Gifts," by Margaret Elland, and "Bull," by Caleb O'Connor.

A number of requests were received asking the club to repeat the play that the members gave recently, entitled "The Link of Notions," written by Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham, of Chevy Chase, Md. Mrs. Mahorney offered the club the use of Windsor Arms if it was decided to give a repeat performance. In this play the club president, Mrs. Clarence Miles, took the leading role as Uncle Sam, while the colorful and picturesque costumes of the other players who represented the various States and foreign countries made a very spectacular ensemble.

Additional entertainment was provided by little Miss Hess and Master Miller, two youngsters from Washington, who gave a charming song and tap dance; Miss Constance Pfeiffer, who gave a spectacular Spanish dance, and by Miss Wallace, who danced the highland fling. Vocal selections also were given by Master Carl Crosson, who sang "The Gay Cavaliero," and Mr. William Tapp, who sang "My Own United States."

Royal Arcanum

Supreme Regent Charles H. Haring, of New Jersey, will officially visit Washington tomorrow, the guest of the Arcanians of the District. Oriental Council, of which Grant Regent Edgar G. Kink is a member, will be the host on this occasion and the place will be Odd Fellows Temple, 419 Seventh street northwest. Veterans' night is the magnet which will draw Arcanians from all the councils in the District to this reception. Over 400 members of the District out of a total of 1,000 are eligible, having been members over 25 years, one member over 50 years. Supreme Regent Charles H. Haring will present a veteran Royal Arcanum button to each of the veterans present and a specially designed 50-year gold veteran button to the 50-year member of the order.

In addition a class of candidates is being recruited in honor of the occasion, the crack degree team of Oriental Council will confer the ritualistic work upon the class of candidates.

Among the Royal Arcanum celebrities who will be present, in addition to the supreme regent, are C. B. Connor, of Lexington, grand regent of Virginia; C. C. Hickman, of Lexington, grand sentry of Virginia, and Arthur A. Philo, past grand regent of New Jersey and field manager of Virginia. Mr. Philo, who is at present domiciled in Washington, is busily engaged in formulating plans for the instituting of a new council in Clarendon, Va.

A reception and banquet will complete the festivities. The Royal Arcanum is the oldest fraternal insurance society in this country, having been organized in 1877. It operates in the United States and Canada and has paid out over $270,000,000 in death claims.

Loyal Order of Moose

The next meeting of Columbia Lodge, No. 126, L. O. O. M., will be held at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest, Tuesday evening.

The open meeting for all Moose regardless of standing on November 29, being the first of the winter series of smokers and luncheons, was largely attended. An hour's program of professional talent, thoroughly enjoyed by the members, was followed by an address by Frederick N. Zihlman, past supreme dictator of the order, and his references to his visits to many Moose lodges throughout the United States during the past year as well as description of the wonderful child relief work and training carried on at Mooseheart, proved interesting.

R. Bowen, Mrs. T. R. Powers, Mrs. A. R. Tracey, Mrs. George M. Trevener, Mrs. Edwin Detwiler, Mrs. A. T. Reid, Mrs. H. L. Hutchings and Mrs. H. E. Brockson.

Tall Cedars

Capitol Forest, No. 104, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, will hold its annual election of officers in the large ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel, Saturday evening, December 17, at which time the officers for the "1933 convention year" will be chosen. This will be the most important election in the history of the local unit of the order due to the fact that they will be the host to the Supreme Forest session, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, on May 17, 18, 19 and 20 of 1933.

In accordance with the laws of the organization nominations for all officers are held one month prior to the election of same, and on November 18 those whose names were placed in nomination to move up one step were as follows: Charles R. Brill, senior deputy grand tall cedar, to that of grand tall cedar; J. Fred Huber, junior deputy grand tall cedar, to that of senior deputy grand tall cedar. For junior deputy grand tall cedar three names were placed in nomination, namely, William R. Layne, connected with a business firm and a charter member of the local forest; T. E. Franklin, of the Bureau of Engraving, a charter and life member and chairman of the Supreme Forest convention membership committee, and Harry E. Rieseberg, chief of tonnage division, Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, Department of Commerce, a charter and life member and chairman of the Supreme Forest convention publicity and program committee. Frederick R. Steffens and John Harvey were nominated to fill their present offices of secretary and treasurer, respectively, while the out-going head, Thomas C. Havell, assistant director of the Land Office, Department of Interior, was nominated without opposition to the vacant office of trustee for the period of three years.

For the office of junior deputy grand tall cedar there is expected a spirited fraternal contest, due to the fact that there are three candidates for the office, a situation never before occurring in the order.

Worshipful Master Stiles announced that installations of the new officers would be made at the next meeting of the lodge, December 20, and that refreshments of the evening would be in charge of the ladies of Brookland Chapter, No. 11, O. E. S.

Harmony Lodge.

Annual election of officers and installation in Harmony Lodge, No. 17, will occur at the stated communication of Wednesday. Carl H. Claudy, master, announces that visitors are welcome, and many friends of the various officers are expected.

Refreshments will be served, and the master promises one or two features not usually found at lodge elections. One of them will concern Orange S. Firmin, R. M. and treasurer of the lodge for 48 consecutive terms. Worthy Brother Firmin is hale and hearty in his ninety-second year.

Harmony Lodge has been crowded with large attendance all this year and an unusual attendance is expected at this annual meeting. Business will commence promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Woodmen of World

Old Glory Camp will act as host next Tuesday evening to Sovereigns from Elm, Oak, Alpha, Fraser and Mount Vernon camps. The annual election of officers will be held and a brief program of entertainment provided.

Fifty juveniles of the W. O. W. gave a demonstration of ritual work at the John Thomson Public School on December 3. Songs, recitations, dances and acrobatic acts by the children followed the ceremonies. Mrs. M. L. Donohoe trained the participants. Sovereign James Freeland presided.

Veteran medals to Woodmen of 25 years' membership in the fraternity were awarded at Alpha Camp's convocation last week. Sovereign Charles W. Pafflow and other senior Woodmen addressed the session.

Oak Camp is preparing for its annual treat to children during Christmas week. A large tree is to be set up in the lodge and Kris Kringle will officiate.

Georgetown Camp held election of officers at their regular meeting last night. LeRoy Owens was elected consul to succeed W. G. Rhodes, who automatically retires to the office of past consul.

Other officers elected were W. Roy Heft, advisor; James H. McIntyre, clerk; S. Earl Upperman, banker; George W. Hurlebaus, escort; H. B. Pope, Edward W. Howard, sr., and J. H. Warner, trustees; T. P. Dorsey, watchman, and E. N. Thrift, sentry. These officers-elect will be installed the first regular meeting in January and will serve for the year of 1933.

36 Women Chosen For New Reichstag

Opposition of Hitlerites Is Ignored by German Electors.

Berlin (A.P.).—German voters did not scorn to intrust a share of the responsibilities of government to women in the last Reichstag election, despite vociferously expressed sentiment from the Hitlerite ranks that the one and only place for a woman is at home.

Of 583 deputies elected to the new Reichstag, 36 are women. This is only one less than in the much larger previous parliament of 608 representatives. Thirteen of the women are Socialists, 13 Communists, 4 Centrists, 3 German Nationalists and 1 each belong to the Bavarian Populist and German Populist parties

The title of seniority member was snatched from the 75-year-old Communist veteran member, Clara Zetkin, by Gen. Karl Litzmann, 82, Nazi member of the Prussian Diet, whom the Hitlerites nominated to prevent "the Muscovite Zetkin" from presiding over the opening sessions of the Reichstag, as is the senior member's privilege.

"Cornstalk Wood" Strong as Steel

Product of Iowa Will Be Used in Manufacture of Furniture.

Jamestown, N. Y. (A.P.).—Iowa's cornfields are producing "cornstalk wood," hard as teak and almost as strong as steel, for use in the manufacture of furniture.

Furniture made from such "wood" is part of an exhibition by Iowa State College at the convention of the wood industries division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Prof. O. R. Sweeney, of the college, said there is no natural wood that can not be imitated in the cornstalk product. The types on exhibit range down to synthetic cork, made from cornstalks. It looks like cork and has all of cork's properties, Prof. Sweeney said.

Catholic Daughters

At the business meeting of Court D. C. 212 Tuesday evening, Miss Mary C. Boland, grand regent, presiding, it was announced that the officers degree team and music committee would meet tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock to perfect plans for the initiation of a class of candidates on December 20. The Christmas party will follow the initiation ceremonies when Santa Claus, assisted by Mrs. Anna Holmes, Miss Marie Creahen, Miss Margaret Cahill, Miss Rose Nikolai, Mrs. Cecelia Martinez, Miss Nora McGrain, Miss Agnes McKenny, Miss Cecelia Gallagher and Miss Mary Weide, will be in charge of the entertainment of the guests.

Mrs. Ida Howell, chairman of welfare, announced that on Sunday, December 18, the annual Christmas party of the C. D. A. for the inmates of the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains would be given. A program under direction of Miss Clara Ondreyco, chairman of the juniors, is being arranged. There are over 660 inmates at Blue Plains. The Tuberculosis Hospital will also be visited by this committee. The juniors are making and filling Christmas stockings, which they will distribute to orphans. They have added materially to the barrel in which donations of canned goods, cereals, flour, &c., is contributed at every meeting. Mrs. Katherine Folliard, in charge of the charity committee, has been recommended for the great work her committee is doing in supplying food for the needy.

Miss Anna Daly, chairman of special work, is arranging for the members of Court 212 to attend mass at midnight Christmas Eve at Walter Reed. The committee assisting Miss Daly, Mrs. Kathleen O'Sullivan, Miss Winifred Hanagan, Miss Nell Calnan, Miss Veronica Robbins, after a conference with the Rev. Joseph R. Koch, chaplain at Walter Reed, will report on final plans.

In a communication received from Miss Mary C. Duffy, supreme regent, it was announced the fourteenth biennial convention of the Catholic Daughters of America will be held in Colorado Springs, Colo. The supreme regent requested a continuance of the assistance for the unemployed and that the program with the court's various activities as outlined would be continued.

Mrs. Alberta D. Jones, chairman of decorations, invited the members and their friends to visit after December 21 the beautiful crib, symbol of Christmas, at the C. D. A. Home.

Miss Florence Winter, chairman of Converts League, announced a meeting to be held early in January, before which time announcements will be made through the press.

Mrs. Mary Hunter, grand regent of Court Little Flower, Bethesda, Md., accompanied by several members, was a guest of Court 212. Mrs. Hunter extended an invitation, which was accepted, for the members to attend a performance of the Montgomery Players, one of the most talented of the amateur groups, and in which Miss Margaret Buckley, vice regent of her court, is prominently identified.

A card party will be given on Thursday, at which time the disposition of $15, $10 and $5 will take place. Miss Mary O'Connor is chairman of the card party committee, assisted by Miss Dorothy E. Barrett, Miss Agnes F. Batch, Miss Evelyn R. Butler, Miss Helen S. Finn, Miss Kathleen M. Hurley, Miss Dorothy P. Nesline, Miss Clara M. Ondreyco, Miss Veronica E. Robbins, Miss Maude E. Thompson and Miss Margaret E. Trammell.

Mrs. George Mehlfelt asks all local scrapbook chairmen to meet her at the State office, N. E. A. Building, on Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock. Miss Clarice Wade, national publicity secretary, will speak at this meeting.

The headquarters of the Christmas committee, 1515-1517 K street northwest, is open every day from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. The work is progressing satisfactorily. The committee extends to every member of each local a cordial invitation to visit the toy shop.

An outstanding activity for this week is the participation of the Warner Brothers theaters in the work. On Saturday a movie benefit will be held at the Earle and at each of the other eleven Warner houses. Any child bringing a new toy or a new piece of clothing will be admitted free. The toys are to be given to the Christmas committee and the clothing to Mrs. E. J. Dowling for the student aid work.

The committee desires to express gratitude to every one cooperating.

M'KINLEY.

McKinley High School has planned a very extensive program of student aid at Christmas time. It is hoped to distribute at least 150 baskets, filled with provisions, to needy families. Clothing and toys will also be provided. Receptacles are to be found in the corridors of the school, where all contributions for this work may be deposited by the students.

On Thursday, December 22, there will be a meeting of the students to arrange for the distribution of baskets.

The seniors are planning a dance, the admission to which will be two cans of provisions.

Next Friday the students will have an assembly, at which the Dramatic Club will entertain, and collections will be made for the Christmas donations.

These activities are sponsored by the large student body which is to be commended for its interest in these charitable activities.

PARK VIEW.

The regular December meeting of the association was held on Thursday. Christmas selections by the school children included a solo by Peter Vitto, songs by a sixth grade group—Phyllis Walker, Elaine Tayler, Frances Sapienza, John Potts, Gordon Pool and Marvin Bramell—and a reading by Thomas Griffith, jr.

Fourteen blue ribbons were presented to children registering 100 per cent in the summer roundup examination.

Special donations were made to the Community Chest, Mother Goose carnival and the janitors' Christmas present. The custom of giving to Sunday School children of the Gospel Union Mission was explained by Mrs. L. Vanhiese. Over fifty names were assigned members of the association who will give personal gifts to these children. At the close of the meeting, parents attended conferences with the teachers.

Mrs. J. M. McKay and Mrs. George Schreyer, mothers for the eighth grade, held a special get-together of parents with Miss Sanderson, teacher. Light refreshments were served, after which Miss Sanderson spoke on the adjustment necessary for children upon entering high school, and discussed the different types of high schools.

WHITTIER.

A program entitled "Chirstmas in Our School" has been planned for the entertainment portion of the association meeting at Whittier School tomorrow at 3 p. m. Some children from each grade will contribute to this program.

A short business meeting will be held first, at which time blue ribbons will be given to parents of those children who have been found physically perfect, or who have had defects corrected during the summer.

SHEPHERD.

The Christmas meeting of the Shepherd Association will be tomorrow at 8 o'clock in the school building. The special speaker will be Mrs. E. J. Dowling, student aid chairman of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The main topic to be discussed throughout the year is "Child Psychology," and for Monday evening the discussion will be on "Improper Clothing and Physical Discomfort Developing an Inferiority Complex," and "The Influence of Giving and Receiving."

The guest soloist will be Mrs. C. E. Edwards. The student aid committee of the association will be hostesses and have charge of the program.

The association is taking the responsibility of assuring at least one worthy family of having a Merry Christmas. Any gift of new wearing apparel, suitable for father, mother or children, should be brought to the meeting and placed under the Christmas tree, or a silver offering will be accepted.

The next bundle day for clean discarded clothing will be Tuesday.

HINE.

The next meeting of the association will be held in the school on Thursday. Miss Pearl Paulson, of the Child Guidance Clinic, will be the speaker. Christmas carols will be sung by the glee clubs.

BRYAN.

Some of tthe mothers of the Bryan School, Mrs. Ball, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Kaiser and Mrs. White, have been driving their cars and assisting the teachers in taking the small children on various expeditions.

Mr. Reid, principal of Lenox School, and Mrs. George Barse, president of Bryan, assisted in taking a number of children representing the seventh division, to the services aboard the U. S. S. Constitution, when the plaque presented by the George Mason High School of Alexandria was unveiled.

Mrs. McCausland's third grade, assisted by several grade mothers, made a trip to the Library of Congress.

Mrs. Loving's first grade and Miss Edelen's first grade, assisted by the grade mothers, made a trip to see Santa Claus.

Miss Crook, principal, with the assistance of Mrs. White, student aid chairman, has been most diligent in seeing that Bryan boys and girls are provided with warm clothing. A number of garments have been kept on hand, as it was found necessary to provide warm garments in a number of instances on short notice. Mrs. E. J. Dowling, State student aid chairman, has also actively cooperated, and about twenty children have been clothed since the beginning of the term.

Bryan grade mothers are assisting in the sale of tuberculosis seals in a bank.

The association will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Curtis School. As this is to be Fathers' Night, all fathers in the association are urged to attend.

WHEATLEY.

The feature of the Parent-Teacher meeting Tuesday in the auditorium, was a general discussion, led by Mrs. R. W. Rawlings, second vice president, on "Magazines, Movies and Radio."

Accompanied by the following grade mothers, Mesdames Knight, Snook and Leonarduzzi, Mrs. Ifft's class visited the National Museum to study the Indian exhibit. Visits to department stores were made by Miss Espey's and Miss Gieger's classes, accompanied by grade mothers, Mesdames Crummitt, Sengstack, Loughery, Roche and McKingley. Mrs. Press' class, assisted by grade mothers, Mesdames Blevins, George, Borow and Phillips, visited the Capitol.

At the weekly primary assembly, Miss B. Williams' third grade gave an original play illustrating work of the fire department, which was suggested by a visit to the neighboring fire engine house. Forty members of the association attended this feature.

Plans for a school visiting day have been completed by the grade mothers who will act as hostesses, on December 19, from 1 to 3 p. m., when all parents are urged to come and learn more about the work their children are doing.

POWELL ELEMENTARY.

An executive board meeting was held Monday afternoon at 1 p. m. On Monday evening the annual card party was held in the school auditorium.

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock the association will meet for its monthly meeting designated as fathers' night. Representative Clyde Kelley, of Pittsburgh, will speak. Moving pictures of the C. & P. Telephone Co. will be shown, and there will be solos by Mr. Edwin Steffe.

EDMONDS-MAURY.

The monthly meeting of the association will be held at Edmonds School tomorrow at 8 p. m.

This meeting will be a real Christmas meeting with special music, community singing of Christmas carols, and an evening of much interest to all.

The speaker will be C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, who will use as his subject, "What Music Contributes to the Wise Use of Leisure."

There will be vocal selections by Phelps Clark and piano duets by Miss Nussbaum and Mr. W. Denit. All parents are invited to attend, whether members or not.

KINGSMAN-PIERCE.

The executive board of the Kingsman-Pierce Parent-Teacher Association met at the Pierce School on Monday at 2:30 p. m., at which time it was decided to appropriate $10 to the State student aid fund, $5 to the shoe and rubber fund and $2.50 to the receiving home. Plans were also made to take care of needy families at Chrismas time. Baskets are to be made up from donations solicited in each room of the two schools by the members of the executive committee.

Announcement was made by the president of the contribution of $5 and two baskets of canned fruit, jams, &c., to the Mother Goose Carnival. Mrs. Jane Davis assisted Mrs. C. C. Mullady with the luncheon, and Mrs. E. H. Griffith had charge of the grab bags.

STUART.

Miss Sibyl Parker spoke at a regular monthly meeting of the association held at the school on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. L. B. Berryman had charge of the program, as Mr. Claude Schwartz, principal, is ill.

Mrs. A. O. Bertolini, philanthropic chairman, reported donations of seventeen baskets for Thanksgiving and that plans have been made for giving Christmas baskets. New shoes and clothing have been given needy children, as well as hot meals.

Mrs. H. E. E—an, vice president, and her committee are planning to serve hot chocolate to the boy patrol on cold mornings. Miss Merriman, music teacher, will present the Glee Club on junior high night at Gordon Junior High on the evening of December 20. Flowers and expressions of sympathy have been sent the principal during his illness.

PEABODY-HILTON-CARBERY.

The association will hold a joint meeting with the Stanton Park Citizens Association tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The leaders in charitable work in the eastern district were called to Peabody School Tuesday, December 6, to discuss Christmas giving and to register worthy cases of need.

JEFFERSON.

"Adequate Low Cost Meals" was the theme of Miss Eleanor Enwright's talk at the December meeting of the Jefferson Parent-Teacher Association held Monday evening in the school hall.

Miss Enwright spoke of the effect of the lowered food budget on the child. In many cases where it is necessary to cut down living expenses the children suffer because their parents exclude necessary foods from their diet and retain foods which do not have the vital body-building elements. She listed the most nourishing foods and begged the parents not to be "penny wise pound foolish" by conserving on lettuce and other fresh vegetables, and serving other cheaper foods which do not have the most vitamins.

Miss Enwright's talk came immediately after the closing of the businesss meeting, at which Mrs. Freida Chamberlain presided.

Reports by the various committee chairmen were heard during the business session. Miss Irene Minear, of the home economic department, spoke to the mothers about the girls' graduation dresses. She urged that mothers let their daughters buy the material as soon as possible. Miss Anna G Walsh, a Red Cross representative, asked the cooperation of mothers in sewing baby clothing for this organization.

A party was announced for the evening of December 14, at 1103 Sixth street southwest, where Mrs. Mable Newman is to be the hostess. She expects to turn over the receipts of this party to the school fund.

President Chamberlain voiced an appeal that all worn, broken toys be sent to the Y. W. C. A. headquarters at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, where they will be cleaned, mended and distributed to needy children during the Christmas season.

A most enjoyable feature of the evening's program was a presentation by the children of class 9B. The sketches embodied the idea of America's debt to the German people who came to America as immigrants. This year the theme of all the Friday assembly programs is "World Unity." Each Friday a different nation is represented and her contributions to the American melting pot are explained.

Germany's contributions of blood, brains, brawn and buoyancy to the culture of American civilization were cleverly brought out by sketches, living pictures and colorful scenes.

Ruth Selsky, of class 9 Z, announced the program. First came a scene representing Queen Anne telling her courtier to write books which would cause the German people to desire to go to the New World as colonists.

A kindergarten sketch representing five little tots receiving their education from a capable teacher was next presented. This was doubly interesting because the conversation between pupils and teacher was in German. This brought out the idea of Germany's part in founding kindergartens in America.

Schubert's "Erl King," one of the most powerfully written story songs, was played on the pianos by Miss Aleta Hannon and Hugh Smith, of the faculty.

Whittier's humorous poem of the account of a 9-year-old German lass of the scene when Barbara Frietchie refused to let her country's flag be torn down was ably recited by Regina Wending, of 8 A.

Bethesda Woman's

The Woman's Club of Bethesda is honored to have as their speaker on Tuesday at 3 o'clock, Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The hostess of the day will be Mrs. Charles I. Corby, assisted by Mrs. Hardin B. Arledge, Mrs. Mina Church Brann, Mrs. Charles Leonard Chambers, Mrs. Eleanor T. Cronin, Mrs. P. L. Decker, Mrs. Wilbur Green, Mrs. Roland Marshall, Mrs. Leonard L. Nicholson and Mrs. E. P. Wilson.

The social service committee met with the hospital committee on Monday at the clubhouse, and the hospital committee, under the direction of Mrs. J. William Stohlman, spent the morning making bandages for the Montgomery County Hospital, while the social service committee was busily engaged in sewing children's garments for the Red Cross. Mrs. Perry K. Thurston is chairman of social service and Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton is in charge of Red Cross work in Bethesda.

Mrs. Wilbur Green, chairman of education, is holding a meeting at the clubhouse at 1 o'clock with her committee to discuss matters of importance, including the State loan scholarship fund. Thomas W. Pyle and the faculty of the Chevy Chase-Bethesda High School and Bethesda Elementary School will be guests of the committee on applied education at the club meeting.

PING-PONG PICKS UP

Butler Coeds All Set for Strenuous Season

The reigning sport at Butler University these days is ping-pong. The observer will get some idea of the mental hazard facing the men players in an impending all-campus tournament. Their grip on the mallets (or is it paddles?) might not be strictly orthodox, but it is no time to get technical. They are Edith Miller and Madge Mehring.

INDIANAPOLIS (A.P.).—Butler University's campus—even the coeds—is all agog about ping-pong this year.

Even in this stronghold of basket ball, ping-pong threatens to become the reigning indoor sport.

Tables have been installed in fraternity and sorority houses. The game has been added to the curriculum in the department of intramural sports and an all-campus tournament is planned for mid-December.

And, to judge by the coeds shown practicing their "forehand drives," it wouldn't be surprising if Butler picked a ping-pong "queen."

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA

With a fraternal visit of the State councilor, Mrs. S. Belle Gibson, and board of officers to Virginia Dare Council, No. 22, on Wednesday evening, at the Jr. O. U. A. M. and D. of A. Temple, 808 I street northwest, will mark the passing of the 1932 series of the State council visitations.

Independent Council.

Independent Council, No. 2, met Monday evening with Mrs. Ada Sylvester, councilor, in the chair. The nomination of officers was closed, with Miss Alice Courtney nominated as outside sentinel and Mr. Tom Keys as inside sentinel. Mrs. Nellie Deane, chairman, asked for a dispensation to hold a rummage sale for the good of the order.

In the absence of Mrs. Frye, Mrs. Landwehr asked if the State benevolence committee might use the hall after the regular meeting on December 12. The request was granted.

Fidelity Council No. 4.

Fidelity Council No. 4 convened on November 29, with the councilor, Mrs. Lela Lavender, presiding. Miss Clara Haas and Mrs. Eleanor Casalege spoke concerning the theater party which was held at the Fairlawn Theater; also concerning our Christmas dance which is to be held at the Southern Dairies, 60 M street northeast, on December 21. Miss Clara Haas also made a report on the State benevolence committee which was held. Mrs. Sarah Cavanaugh also spoke relative to the State good of the order meeting which was held.

Visitors for the evening included, Mrs. Kerper, of Old Glory No. 12.; Mrs Simpson, of Loyalty No. 19.; Mr. George Cohill, of Golden Rule No. 10.; and Mr. Johnnie James, of Anacostia No. 14. All of these members favored us with a few interesting remarks.

Anacostia Council.

The meeting of Anacostia Council, No. 14, held on last Wednesday evening, was conducted by the councilor, Mrs. Margaret Lainhart. As this was the night for the annual visitation, the State and national officers and committees were asked to retire to be officially received. They were escorted by flag bearers, Mrs. Grace Greer and Mrs. Daisy Smithson, and conductress, Gertrude Everhart, and warden, E. A. Rettstatt.

An exhibition of the ritualistic work was the balloting for candidates, which was highly commended by the State councilor, Mrs. S. Belle Gibson, and others. Samuel Hubacher, past councilor, made report of progress on the flag committee.

Under the good of the order the councilor then turned the gavel over to the State councilor, Mrs. Gibson, who congratulated this council and its officers on the rendition of their work.

The official roll call by State Secretary Charles H. Miller showed 264 members of the various councils present, with Anacostia Council represented by 64, of whom 16 were charter members. Under the good of the order the following program was presented:

Presentation of silver to the State councilor by Mrs. Helen Steivers; the associate State councilor, Mrs. Helen W. Luckett, by Past Councilor Mrs. Bertha Hubacher. National Representative Mrs. Ethel E. Burroughs was presented linen by Past Councilor Mrs. Mary Plumb; Deputy Mrs. Margaret Taylor a scarf by Past State Councilor Mrs. Mary P. James.

Other gifts were also presented to the councilor, Margaret Lainhart, by Mrs. Ethel Keene, past councilor; chairman of the good of the order, Mrs. Edna Dyer, by Recorder Mrs. Mary P. James; Associate Councilor Mrs. Laura Allen by Gertrude Everhart, conductress; Recording Secretary Mrs. Mary P. James by Mrs. Alice Fowler, past councilor; Assistant Recording Secretary Mrs. Daisy Bell by Mrs. Edna Chaney, past councilor; Treasurer Mrs. Ella Smith by Mrs. Laura Mitchell, past councilor; Financial Secretary Mrs. Pearl Torney by Miss Georgiana Anderson, past councilor; pianist, Mrs. Effie Mohler, by Mrs. Nora Lee, past councilor; captain of the drill team, Howard Beall, by Al Rettstatt, warden. The councilor, Mrs. Lainhart, was presented a beautiful potted fern, a personal gift of Mrs. Ethel Keene, by Mrs. Edna Dyer.

After these presentations the meeting closed, and a drama was presented by the young people of the Emanuel Episcopal Church, of Anacostia, entitled "A Drama of the Northwest," with the following in the cast: Miss Margaret Thompson, Miss Mildred Simpson, Lemuel Sansbury, Charles Sampsel, Robert Thompson, Miss Frances Casalege, David Pezold, Harrison Fillius, Loren Clark, Albert Sansbury, Howard Clark, Miss Henrietta Wade, Miss Helen Earnshaw, Stanley Franck, Russell Sansbury, Miss Arline Sampsel and Miss Gladys Acton.

Star-Spangled Banner Council.

At the last meeting of Star-Spangled Banner Council, No. 7, Mrs. Nellie Polglase presided as councilor, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Councilor, Mrs. Leona Burnette; associate councilor, Miss Florence Norton; vice councilor, Mrs. Elizabeth Stone; associate vice councilor, Mrs. Helen Smith; conductor, Mrs. Carrie Warden; warden, Mr. Herbert Boswell; inside sentinel, Mrs. Myrtle Abbott; outside sentinel, Mrs. Ora Ward; eighteen-month trustee, Mrs. Annie Steele, and assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Eva Burdette.

At a former meeting, the sixteenth birthday and surprise party of the council was given by the chairman of the good of the order, Mrs. Ruth Boswell, and her committee. The birthday cake was given by Mrs. Bertha Dickerson. The christening of the young daughter of Mrs. Margaret Halfpap, past State councilor and national representative, was witnessed, the Rev. Mr. Delaplain officiating. Past State councilor, Mrs. Ethel E. Burroughs, with whom Mrs. Halfpap traveled through the State council chairs, and past councilor, Mrs. Louise Fowler were sponsors. Mrs. Floda M. Reagan, past State councilor, was pianist for the evening.

A combined dance is being planned by our council and Central Council, No. 108, of Maryland, for December 17 at Odd Fellows Hall, Capitol Heights, Md.

Triumph Council.

Triumph Council, No. 8, met Thursday morning with councilor, Mrs. Jesse Davis presiding. Nomination of officers for the ensuing term were held. Mr. J. W. Schwenk, Mrs. Mary E. Nichols and Mrs. Katie Parker gave interesting reports. Mrs. Louise F. Schwenk, chairman of the good of the order, made a report from tickets received at the last meeting. She also announced that a Christmas party has been planned for the members, to be held soon.

The young folks of the council will give a dance at the Burlington Hotel Saturday.

Excelsior Club

The Excelsior Literary Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Trauty, 1832 Park road northwest, assisted by Mrs. C. B. Green, with the president, Mrs. Alice V. Creque, in the chair. The meeting was opened with prayer followed by the singing of "America" accompanied on the piano by Mrs. E. V. Carr. Then the flag salute was repeated.

The program included a prayer by Mrs. Walter Asmuth. Roll call was then in order, those who answered to their names being Mrs. Asmuth, Mrs. Harry Newman, Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, Mrs. Creque, Mrs. Emily Jarboe, Mrs. Julia Webb, Mrs. R. J. Bates, Mrs. D. J. Donovan, Mrs. J. W. Bulla and Mrs. S. L. Dorsey. A social hour was spent. The next meeting will be held at 2 o'clock on December 20, at the home of Mrs. D. J. Donovan, 2924 Courtland place northwest.

Takoma Women.

The literary department will meet tomorrow at 12 a. m. in Branch Library. Mrs. Stevenson will review "All Passion Spent," by Sackville-West, and Miss Helen Steinbarger, a guest, will give Christmas suggestions from the Season's Book.

On Friday at 1:30 the executive board will meet in Branch Library. The regular meeting of the garden department will be omitted in December.

The French department, which meets each Monday in the library from 7 to 8, has had four lessons to date. The class is enthusiastic. At present there are eleven members. On Thursday the art department paid a visit to Corcoran Art Gallery.

Cultus Club

The Cultus Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. William Kinnan, 3905 Huntington street. After luncheon the meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Herman Smith. Twenty-two members answered roll call. Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. McLachen, Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Fishback were guests. Mrs. Davis gave an interesting talk on "The Moving Picture Industry and Its Educational Value." Mrs. Cooper talked on "Current Events." The club will meet with Mrs. Clark Tuesday, December 20.

AMERICA FIRST IN EVERYTHING, LEGION'S DUTY, GEN. FRIES ADVISES POST

George Washington Group Are Told About War Debts

General Opposes Further Moratoriums, and Lists Prominent Persons Who, He Says, Are Preaching Communistic Doctrines to Hurt of Country.

That the American Legion's duty to the last man is to spread the truth about the foreign debts and demand that America must hereafter be considered first in everything, was the advice given by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, past department commander of the American Legion, in an address before the members of George Washington Post No. 1, last Tuesday night at the post clubhouse.

The speaker pointed out that the total national debt on October 31 last was $20,812,000,000, of which amount approximately $14,600,000,000 was cash advanced by American people which has been paid on Europe's debts. The total interest charge, he said, was $700,000,000 annually, while the interest on the $14,600,000,000 worth of bonds the United States sold to raise money to lend to Europe and to pay the interest which Europe has failed to pay is several hundred millions of dollars, enough to run the United States Army and Navy or pay the soldiers' bonus every four years.

The various amounts owed by the several countries was alluded to and detailed facts concerning the status of each country given. The international bankers were receiving their interest on the bonds. He opposed further moratoriums for foreign countries, while thousands of American workmen are thrown out of employment because of the millions of dollars which the United States is required to pay for interest on foreign debts.

Gen. Fries also dwelt on the Communistic situation in this country and listed many prominent ones who are engaged in preaching this doctrine, much to the detriment of this country. He referred to the active display in this city during the past week and urged Legionnaires to demand that Congress take action in subduing their activities looking toward the overthrow of the Government.

The post approved and has arranged for producing a copyright photograph taken at midnight of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Frank N. Hines, a member of George Washington Post. This is the only night photograph of this sacred shrine and was made under special conditions which may never exist again. The tomb looms out of the surrounding darkness and across the great block of marble falls the shadow of Staff Sergt. Frank Witchey, who officiated as bugler and sounded "Taps" at the burial of the Unknown Soldier on November 11, 1921. Through the shadow can be read the inscription: "Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God."

A resolution commending Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, for the efficient and creditable manner in which he handled the so-called "hunger marchers" during their stay in this city, and especially the manner in which they were guarded during the parade last Tuesday. The members of both the Police and Fire Departments were lauded for their conduct and efficiency on this occasion. Copies of the resolution were sent to the District Commissioners following the meeting.

Commander Charles Demonet, who presided, announced that Tuesday, January 3, would be "Past Commander's Nnght," following an annual custom, when former officers will have charge of the evening's entertainment and program.

Two former members of the United States Marine Corps were elected to membership: Irvin W. Carpenter and Talmadge M. Thorne, who served with this organization during the World War.

Clayton E. Emig, chairman of the Americanism committee, reported that the work was progressing and invited legionnaires to visit the Americanism School, which was sponsored by Judge Walter I. McCoy, of this city, and whose son, Percy B. McCoy, is a past commander of the post.

Vice Comdr. Henry W. Longfellow reported on the Armistice Day activities at Washington Cathedral.

Refreshments were served by members of the George Baldwin McCoy Unit of the American Women's Legion.

AMERICAN LEGION.

Killeen Unit.

A special meeting of George E. Killeen Unit, No. 25, was held at the Killeen Clubhouse on Tuesday.

The regular meeting of the George E. Killeen Unit will be held at 8 o'clock sharp on Wednesday at St. John's Parish Hall, 3240 O street northwest. The department president, Mrs. Mary Corwin, and her staff will make their official visitation at this time. A program is arranged. The unit invites the members of other units at this time.

Mrs. May Spedden, hospital chairman, held a successful card party at the home of Mrs. Mary Killeen, the proceeds to be used for the Christmas party at Mount Alto Hospital on Thursday, December 22.

Mrs. Marie Dyer, department vice president and a member of Killeen unit, was acting president of the department during Mrs. Corwin's trip to Indianapolis. Mrs. Dyer installed the officers of the James E. Walker Unit, No. 26, for 1932-33.

Under Mrs. Dyer's leadership, the Girl Scout Troop is progressing and the girls (all daughters of Killeen members) are enthused with their work. The unit will present a troop flag to the Scouts at this meeting.

The Killeen Post and Unit worked together and gave Thanksgiving baskets to 40 families. The troop helped to pay the rent of an unfortunate family.

The department ratified the president's appointment of three Killeen members on the executive committee—Mrs. Irene Arnold, advisory board; Mrs. Martha Witcomb, chairman of regalia, and Mrs. Ada Riley, marshal of parades.

The past president, Mrs. Mary Esther Kolhos, will be presented with a past president's emblem at this meeting.

James E. Walker Unit.

The James E. Walker Unit, No. 26 held a joint public installation with its post at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. on November 22. The unit officers for 1932-33 year are as follows: Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, president; Mrs. Harriet Epps, senior vice president; Mrs. Mardelle Bundrant, junior vice president; Miss Hattie Minkins, secretary; Miss Mayme Melhinger, treasurer; Mrs. Ella M. Dent, historian; Mrs. Mayme Battle sergeant-at-arms; Mrs. Eleanore Rhines and Mrs. Lena Garner, color bearers.

Invocation was by the Rev. A. F. Elmes; music featured on the programs included solos by Mrs. Coretta B. DeLaney, Miss Fairfax Green, Dr. William Welch, and Mrs. J. B. Cobb. Addresses were made to the assembly by Dr. T. Edward Jones, post commander; Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, unit president; Post Commander Stephen Madison (1932-33), and Dr. Charles H. Wesley, professor of history, Howard University. Department officers of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary and other distinguished guests were introduced and extended greetings and remarks.

Mrs. Hamilton was presented with a president's ribbon and flowers by the Henry C. Spengler Unit, No. 12, and a gavel by Mrs. T. V. Walker. Flowers were also presented to Mrs. Harriet Epps and Mrs. M. Bundrant by the U. S. W. V. Auxiliary. Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. John W. Bundrant. The president has appointed Mrs. Ella Hofton as chairman of publicity.

Vincent B. Costello Post.

The dance given by the post at the Army War College was a decided success, over 300 members and their guests attending. Music was furnished by a seven-piece orchestra and entertainment by the committee in charge of Sergt. Albert G. Clark.

Costello Post Drum Corps was awarded first prize for bands and drum corps at the Fourteenth street parade in connection with the celebration staged by the Central Business Men's Association on upper Fourteenth street. The corps was headed by Drum Major Bill Gee, recently appointed by Director Norman R. Grant. As a result of the showing made by the drum corps, an invitation has been received from the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association asking participation in the dedication of Santa Claus Lane on next Friday evening.

Department Commander Norman R. Landreau announced the following department appointments of members of Costello Post: Charles Kohen, to be chairman of the committee on war orphans; Norman R. Grant, to be a member of the veterans' preference committee.

A display of war trophies, together with a description of their association with various events of the war, has been installed at Fourteenth and H streets northwest, where a member of the committee on membership is in attendance daily.

Belleau Wood Post.

A special meeting of Belleau Wood Post, No. 3, the American Legion, will be held at the home of Comrade Lillian M. Williams, 1415 Girard street northwest, apartment 23, on December 18, at 3:30 p. m. All members are urged to be present, bringing along some little Christmas cheer to be packed in boxes and mailed to our sick comrades in various hospitals out of town.

The regular monthly meeting of Belleau Wood Post was held at the home of Comrade Ethel F. Meloy, Lanham, Md., on November 27, at 3 o'clock. Before the meeting Comrade Meloy entertained the post at a dinner.

James Reese Europe Unit.

The James Reese Europe Unit, Post No. 5, met on November 22 at the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School. Two members, Mrs. Anita B. Ellis and Mrs. Amanda Brown were obligated. This makes a total of twelve new members admitted this year. A vacancy was created in the child welfare department by the resignation of the chairman, Mrs. Lovett. This position has since been filled by the appointment of Mrs. M. Rycraw.

The next meeting of the unit will be held Tuesday at the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School.

Victory Unit.

Victory Unit No. 4 will remember needy children with toys at Christmas time. Members are reminded to get their contributions to Mrs. William Oley, 333 Sixteenth street southeast. Plans for the annual Christmas party to be held on Thursday, December 22, at the temporary Home for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, are well under way. A program of entertainment is being arranged.

Mrs. A. N. Schroeder, child welfare chairman, has recently provided a needy family with a supply of clothing and other necessities.

Takoma Park Auxiliary.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Takoma Park Post, No. 28, will give a costume "hard-times" dance at the Takoma Park Firehouse and Community Center Thursday. Prizes for the most representative costumes will be awarded.

Thursday evening the new members of the post were initiated and Chairman Stuart, of the entertainment committee, put on one of the best programs of the season.

UNITED SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Harden Camp.

At the meeting of Richard J. Harden Camp No. 2, with Commander Tom Binckley presiding, the applications for membership of Alexander M. Hopkins, late of the United States Navy, and William C. Garber, late of the Seventh United States Artillery, were received and the applicants elected to membership. Recruit Alexander M. Hopkins was mustered into active membership.

The Department of D. C., Auxiliary of the U. S. W. V., council of administration, met on December 2 with Department President Catherine Huhn presiding. National President Anna Jesimear addressed the council on the subject of membership. Senior Vice National President Mamie B. Schmidt gave a short talk. Those holding the lucky voice numbers and who were awarded one turkey each were Mrs. A. Berthieume, William H. Lauman and Allen Johnston.

Announcement was made of the bingo party to be held Wednesday at Simpson's dairy, 530 Seventh street southeast at 8 p. m. A departmental dance will be held on March 17. The annual department visitation to the United States Soldiers' Home Hospital will be made on Sunday, December 18, and all ladies are requested to assemble at the main gate at 2 p. m.

Dewey Auxiliary.

Admiral George Dewey Naval Auxiliary No. 3 met Monday with President Mary C. Lipscomb presiding. Nomination and election of officers resulted as follows: For president, Elizabeth C. Titlow; senior vice president, Mary Taltavull; junior vice president, Carrie Flaherty; chaplain, Mabel Hesen; patriotic instructor, Mary Burke; historian, Madge Rice; conductor, Jennie Rhodes; assistant conductor, Hanna O'Keefe; guard, Helen Garges and assistant guard, Lillie O'Neil. Arrangements were made for an "old-time" party to be given on Monday, December 19, also a New Year's Eve dance at the Northeast Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets northeast.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS.

National legislation pertaining to all service groups is receiving careful consideration by the D. A. V. legislative committee. It is understood that several bills will be introduced in the present session of Congress affecting veterans welfare, and it is certain that among these there will be some attempts to remove, or lower, present appropriations for disability, hospitalization and insurance for dependents of those who gave their lives for their country.

The Disabled American Veterans will oppose any legislation inimical to veterans' interests.

At the meeting of Ace-Rasmussen Chapter, held last week, the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year, by practically unanimous acclamation of the members: Commander, Herbert Church; senior vice commander, Troy McCallum; junior vice commander, Howard Stiles. Earl G. Hendricks was unanimously reelected treasurer. Comrades Turner, McCollum, Phillips, Hendricks, Ashi, Anderson and Davidson were elected to the department executive committee.

The retiring commander, Joseph A. Ashi, expressed his appreciation for the cooperation received from officers and members during his two years as commander. He paid particular tribute to the fine cooperation and assistance received from Earl G. Hendricks, treasurer, and recalled that at the present time Ace-Rasmussen, which was the first D. A. V. Chapter to be organized in the District, has the largest membership in its history, ranking fifth nationally and first in the District, and prophesied that under the able leadership voted for the following year the chapter would gain still higher recognition.

Lee T. Turner, Fourth District executive committeeman, spent last Friday and Saturday in Annapolis, Md., conferring with disabled men there relative to the organization of a D. A. V. chapter in that city. Committeeman Turner was assisted in this work by Maj. Lewis B. Myers and Dr. Leo Steindler, of Baltimore Chapter. It is expected that D. A. V. chapters soon will be organized in Berlin and Cambridge also.

Robert D. McDonald, of Magic City, Va., and E. C. Gregg, of Roanoke, have been appointed officer of the day and judge advocate, respectively, for the Department of Virginia.

Rea Chapter held a mass meeting and banquet, Friday evening, in the Red Cross Building at Walter Reed Hospital, in honor of Mrs. E. O. Rea, of Pittsburgh, prominent field director of the Red Cross, for whom the chapter was named. Mrs. Rea was met upon her arrival in Washington by a reception committee for the chapter headed by Commander Raymond E. Moore. An imposing group of local notables were present including Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama; Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota; Judge Robert Mattingley, Alvin Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Dr. Kline and Maj. Hitch, of the Veterans' Administration; Col. Keller, Col. Trubee, of Walter Reed Hospital; a delegation of ten Gold Star Mothers; the District Commissioners and Maj. Brown, Chief of Metropolitan Police; Walter Johnson, and many others.

An elaborate program of entertainment, arranged by Comrade Brodsky of Rea Chapter and presented by Joe Brown, popular New York master of ceremonies, which featured prominent local radio favorites, evoked growing volumes of applause during the evening and clearly signalized the appreciation of the audience.

Mrs. Rea, who has always been active on behalf of disabled veterans and is one of the best loved friends and patrons of the organization in the country, donated the memorial pillar to Ray Chapter which stands in the chapel at Walter Reed.

The next meeting of Federal Chapter will be held Tuesday evening in the boardroom of the District Building. With the rigors of cold weather already being severely felt in the city Federal Chapter has begun a campaign to secure clothing no longer needed by more fortunate persons, for the use of the many veterans in the Capital who are in destitute circumstances.

The results of the drive sponsored by Commander Melton to place disabled veterans in jobs thus far have been very gratifying, and more and more veterans are taking active interest in the matter of obtaining jobs for unemployed comrades. "If every employed disabled veteran would endeavor to find some work for an unemployed comrade, no matter how temporary its nature," said Commander Melton last week, "practically all acute distress among disabled men could be alleviated." Commander Melton urges all persons having work to be done to call junior vice commander, John Arthur Shaw, at Na. 8472, branch 141.

The department convention of the Disabled American Veterans, District of Columbia, will be held in the Hamilton Hotel, January 14. A banquet will be held after the convention. Interest in the impending conclave is running high and all chapter commanders exerting every effort to make it the largest in the history of the department.

The regular meeting of the department executive committee will be held Wednesday evening in the D. A. V. offices in the Transportation Building.

Col. Charles Young Chapter will meet Thursday evening in the Twelfth street branch of the Y. M. C. A.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

Administration.

The Department Council of Administration met in the boardroom of the District Building Monday evening, with Department Commander Hollingsworth presiding. A resolution was passed by the council complimenting the Washington policemen and firemen for the manner in which they were handling the hunger marchers. A resolution was also passed offering the services of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to the District Commissioners, if needed, to assist in handling the hunger marchers.

Department citations were presented to Past Post Commander Daniel Campbell of Equality-Walter Reed Post, Abraham Grudd, of Front Line Post; Commander Bernard S. Bladen, of Treasury Post; Department Patriotic Instructor Sidney Lawrence, of Treasury Post; Maj. Frank Lockhead, United States Army, of Columbia Post; Past Department Commander C. H. Reilly of Columbia Post, Department Chaplain V. O. Anderson, of Federal Post, and Dr. B. C. McNeill, of Front Line Post.

The department will sponsor an award of a V. F. W. medal with appropriate ceremony to the best high school cadet in the District of Columbia. This award, to take place at the annual cadet competitive drill, and to be presented by the department commander and his staff, in uniform, with the Overseas Drum and Bugle Corps turning out at the same time.

Frederick Dent Grant Post.

The Frederick Dent Grant Post, No. 2364, met on Tuesday evening at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, with the department commander in the chair and the department quartermaster acting as adjutant. The resignation of Commander McCloskey was accepted.

The following officers were elected and obligated: Raymond Howe, commander; Paul Gray, senior vice commander; Ralph Welde, junior vice commander, and James Johnson, quartermaster.

This post will meet on the first Tuesday in each month at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club. Department Commander Hollingsworth stressed the importance of cooperation, and complimented the class of men that they had in the post and predicted that they would become one of the largest and best posts in the department if the members would cooperate with the officers.

National Capital Post.

National Capital Post, No. 127, will meet in Pythian Temple on Tuesday.

Police and Firemen Post.

Police and Firemen Post, No. 2249, held its first ball of the season at the Hamilton Hotel on Friday evening. Representatives from practically every post in the department were present and the ball was a social and financial success.

U. S. Treasury Post.

Treasury Post, No. 2400, met Friday evening at the temporary home, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, with Commander Bernard Bladen presiding.

Several members were obligated.

The department commander and his staff made their official visit, and talks were made by Commander Hollingsworth, Quartermaster Boehm and Senior Vice Department Commander Herbert Davis and other members of the staff.

Front Line Post.

Front Line Post, No. 1401, will meet tomorrow evening at 808 I street northwest.

At this time the department commander and his staff will make their annual visit to the posts.

Potomac Post.

Potomac Post, No. 1085, met in the Northeast Temple Thursday evening, with Commander Marshall Emmett presiding. Several new members were obligated.

Front Line Auxiliary.

The benefit dance given by Front Line Auxiliary at the Continental Hotel on December 10 was well attended. All proceeds from this affair will be used for a Naval Hospital relief. The next meeting will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the English room of the Continental Hotel.

Veterans of Foreign Auxiliary.

Front Line Auxiliary, No. 1401, held a dance in the ballroom of the Hotel Continental last night, the proceeds from which will be used for hospital relief work. Mrs. Irene Colston, Mrs. Virginia Cercell and Mrs. Mary Guillermain were the committee on arrangements.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

Mrs. Clay Keene Miller entertained last week at her home in Chevy Chase in honor of Mrs. Consuelo De Coe, of Sacramento, Calif., natoinal president of the Ladies Auxiliaries to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Mrs. De Coe's visit to Washington was unofficial.

Mrs. Katherine Lawson, chief of staff for the District of Columbia Ladies Auxiliaries, poured.

The ladies present were Mrs. Edith den Broeder, past departmental chief of staff; Mrs. Morana, president of National Capitol Auxiliary; Mrs. Hanks, president of Equality-Walter Reed Auxiliary; Mrs. Howell, president of Federal Auxiliary; Mrs. Keen, president of Potomac Auxiliary; Mrs. Hooley, president of Front Line Auxiliary; Mrs. Grudd, of Follow Me Auxiliary, and Mrs. Riley, of Fire and Police Auxiliary.

AMERICAN GOLD STAR MOTHERS.

The Grace Darling Seibold Chapter met on Tuesday night at the Hamilton Hotel, Mrs. W. J. Seelye, first vice president, in the chair.

An invitation from Rea Chapter, No. 5, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, to attend a reception to be given by that organization to Mrs. Henry R. Rea at Walter Reed Hospital on Friday night, was acknowledged, and a group of mothers headed by Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, president of the chapter, attended.

A letter was read from Thomas Cushing, who was for so long a bed patient at Walter Reed, and to whom the mothers were so devoted in their attentions. This letter brought the glad tidings of Tom's continued improvement in health. He married just a year ago. On one occasion when he was critically ill at Walter Reed the Gold Star Mathers held a prayer service for him.

Letters from members who attended the national convention of the order on November 9 and 10 from far-away States and are now back at their respective homes expressed appreciation of the many courtesies they received while here and paid glowing tribute to the wonders of Washington.

A letter from Mrs. Grace Darling Seibold, the founder of the organization, acknowledged the honor conferred upon her by having the first chapter in the District of Columbia named for her.

It was voted to hold one meeting each month instead of two, and the evening of the third Tuesday was selected as the time for assembling. The meeting which would fall on the third Tuesday of December will be omitted on account of Christmas activities, so the next regular meeting will be held on the third Tuesday of January.

Mrs. Delia Barber, Mrs. Edna Boardman and Mrs. Carlyle H. Gordon tendered the use of their cars to collect the donations for Christmas baskets to be given needy families of veterans.

LADIES OF G. A. R.

The annual meeting of Gen. William H. Beck Circle, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, was held at the home of Mrs. Minnie E. Curtiss, 1440 Belmont street northwest, on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, who has been president for the past two years declined to serve another term and the following officers were elected:

President, Mrs. Henry Hunt McKee; senior vice president, Mrs. Maud Thiel; junior vice president, Mrs. Nellie Armstrong; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Minnie E. Curtiss; chaplain, Miss Olive Van Wageman; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Virginia White Speel; conductor, Mrs. Mary Sitz Parker; assistant conductor, Mrs. Thomas Sterling; guard, Mrs. Eleanor Gilles; assistant guard, Mrs. Blanche Flemer; registrar, Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell.

Arrangements have been made for a joint meeting of the four circles in the District of Columbia, McKinley, Grant, Lincoln and Beck, on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Ambassador Hotel, Fourteenth and K streets northwest, at which time the new officers of the four circles will be installed.

The Abraham Lincoln Circle, No. 3, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, met Monday evening at its headquarters, room 127, Willard Hotel. The circle welcomed Miss Mate Lewis, who gave a very full and interesting report of the work with the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. May D. Lightfoot reported that the subcommittee of the D. C. Department of Playgrounds will meet tomorrow in room 508 of the District Building. All members interested in playgrounds, their problems, supervision, maintenance, the unemployment problem and recreation, and recreation for the older boy, should attend. Past President Mida C. Peabody was elected to represent the circle on playgrounds.

Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker was chosen to represent the circle in the Clubhouse Corporation of the Federated Clubs. Mrs. Alice C. Howard, chairman for Walter Reed Hospital, made a report. Mrs. Catherine Hood announced the New Year reception to the Grand Army of the Republic, January 2 (Monday), from 1 to 5 o'clock, at the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Mrs. Peabody presented a check for the occasion. President Rebecca L. Blaine, chairman of the Bicentennial committee, spoke of the circle's activities, participation, and the concluding program on Thanksgiving Day. She stated the circle had planted an Austrian pine and is a member of the American Tree Association. Mrs. May D. Lightfoot was appointed to investigate relative to a suitable marker for the tree.

Mrs. Clara Avery's motion carried, and Secretary Sarah E. Deeds cast a ballot which reelected the present officers for the coming year as follows: President, Miss Rebecca L. Blaine; senior vice president, Mrs. Alice C. Howard; junior vice president, Mrs. Catherine Hood; secretary, Mrs. Sarah E. Deeds; treasurer, Miss Nellie C. Colclazier; chaplain, Mrs. Media G. Bergren; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Lillian Weber; conductress, Mrs. May Parker; assistant conductress, Miss Beatrice Deeds; guard, Mrs. Kate Perkins; assistant guard, Mrs. Mary J. Fisher.

La Societe des Huit Chapeaux et Quarante Femmes celebrated the seventh anniversary of Salon No. 14 on December 3 at the Hotel Washington. A reception in honor of Le Chapeau Passe Dorothy Harper, who has been elected Le Chapeau Nationale, opened the program. Distinguished guests from out-of-town: Le Chapeau Nationale Passe Annie Dobson, New Jersey, who granted the charter to Salon No. 14 during her time as national chapeau; Le Chapeau Departmental Sussanne Carter, of Virginia, and Comrade Robert K. Carter, Miss Nielson, North Dakota; Grand Chef de Gare Thomas Franklin and Mrs. Franklin, District of Columbia, and many others. Le Chapeau Departmental Eunice Desses made the introductions, with Chapeau Passe Willette Preston as toastmistress.

The supper tables were colorful with la boutique colors, "white and red," while partners wore chapeaux with red and plumes. A birthday cake with seven candles was cut by Chapeau Desses. Entertainment Chairman Edna McIntosh planned a program which concluded with dancing. The plans for the Christmas party for children of vetrerans will be sponsored by Chairman Fawcett and her committee. The next business meeting of Salon No. 14 will be December 21, 8 p. m., at the Hotel Washington.

Bridge Bids and Bumps

By FRANK B. LORD.

Everybody plays at our house.
Even our old man!
Mother has a party,
So has Sister Ann;
Little Will is learning
To take a bold finesse;
Grandma's by the fireside
Reading Work, I guess.

They are playing in the parlor,
And in the kitchen, too;
Likewise in the cellar
When there's nothing else to do.
What a happy family we have!
Beat it if you can.
Everybody plays at our house.
Even our old man!

THE high grand slam bonus provided in the new rules promulgated six weeks ago by the supreme court of bridge has proved both tempting and disastrous to some Washington bridge players. An instance illustrative of the latter occurred recently in which the wife of a prominent broker whose rating is well established among the experts was the victim.

Both sides were vulnerable and her adversaries had bid up to grand slam in spades. There was every reason to believe they would make their contract, as, indeed, they could have done. That meant, with game bonus of 500, and possible additional honors, an approximate score of 3,100 on the hand. The only possible overbid was seven no trump, which was certain to be doubled when she was vulnerable. She thought that would result in a probable loss of 2,000 points, which would be 1,000 points better for her side than to allow adversaries to make some 3,000, and there would still be a chance to win the rubber on the next hand.

The lady took the gamble and was promptly doubled. Her adversaries held perfect two suit hands and played through her anticipated stopper in the second suit, with the result that instead of losing 2,000 points the declarer failed to take a single trick and was set 5,400. At that the abnormal distribution, the rock upon which many a bridge ship is wrecked, was perhaps more at fault than the lady's reasoning. She was playing to lose, but not quite so heavily, and many another bold player would doubtless have done the same, for the change of a single card would have confirmed her judgment.

The blow was softened, however, by winning the next game which gave her side the rubber with the loss of about 2,000 points more than would have been the case had her adversaries made the grand slam in spades. Like misfortunes have befallen other experts. Not so long ago, the popular "Jack" Edwards, at the National Press Club, had a similar experience of bidding a grand slam at no trump and not taking a single trick, but the penalty was not so high in points although the stakes were larger. The discussion of grand-slam bids is not an entertaining subject to attempt to discourse upon with either the broker's wife, or the former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

The new scoring is still proving quite bothersome to the average player, especially on doubled nonvulnerable and doubled vulnerable contracts. There is a simple method of fixing it in one's memory, and which can be used without resort to an adding machine.

The penalty for loss of an undoubled vulnerable contract and a doubled nonvulnerable contract is precisely the same. The first undertrick scores 100, and 50 is added to each successive undertrick. When a vulnerable contract is set the penalty is twice that amount. To ascertain what this count is, count each undertrick as 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and so forth. Add them and multiply by 100. Thus, one undertrick is 200; two undertricks, 2 plus 3 equals 5, multiplied by 100, equals 500; three undertricks, 2 plus 3 plus 4 equals—900; four undertricks, 2 plus 3 plus 4 plus 5, equals 14—1,400, and so on. When declarer is undoubled and vulnerable or doubled nonvulnerable use the same method of addition and divide by 2.

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,
Bridge is just a simple game;
For the brain it once encumbers
Never will be quite the same!

FOR some time a large part of the Washington bridge world has been speculating as to the identity of "Jules DeNouement," bridge commentator and critic. To those who may have been in doubt, the fact is now revealed that he is Howe P. Cochran, well-known local attorney. Mr. Cochran entertained a large gathering of duplicate players at his home, 2 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, last week, and as prizes presented the winners with handsome cigarette cases inscribed with some of the DeNouement phrases and slogans, such as, "I'll listen to your bridge story, if you'll listen to mine," and "I wonder if we could have made three no trump as well as four diamond." At that, it is said that the attractive young daughter of the Cochran household, Miss Betty, who is one of the coming players of the Capital, is as much responsible for the DeNouement sayings as is her father.

The winners were, north and south, Mrs. Agnes West and "Dick" Wood, east and west, J. A. McWilliams and Frank T. Fuller.

Winners for the District of Columbia in the Culbertson Olympic games have just been announced. North and south players who came nearest to making par on the hands arranged by Culbertson were Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, who played at the Kennedy-Warren under the supervision of Mrs. Louise Guest, and east and west, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Shepard, who played at the Carlton under the direction of Mrs. Dixie T. Wright. The match was played six weeks ago in several different units in Washington. National and international winners will be announced later by Mr. Culbertson and will appear in the news columns of The Post.

Winners at the Broadmoor progressive match conducted on Wednesday night by Miss Betty Barre were Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Mrs. C. G. Gilliland.

Winners in the Washington Bridge Club's duplicate held on Tuesday night at the Roosevelt, under the direction of Mrs. Eugene Nolan, were Mrs. M. C. Robinson, north and south, and Mrs. Alma Byrne and Dr. E. B. Conolly, east and west.

Winners in last week's games at 2400 Sixteenth street included Mrs. J. S. McCain and Mrs. Walter S. Jacobs, Rear Admiral H. T. Hughes and Mrs. Deitz, Miss Elizabeth Meyer and Mrs. D. L. Harper, Mrs. Guy Chipmand and Mrs. Fraime.

At the December match of the Washington Bridge League played under the Mitchell system the following scores were recorded:

North and south, Mrs. Virginia Jones and Mrs. Agnes West, 189; Mrs. M. C. Robinson and Hon. Edward Clifford, 182½; W. R. Lewis and Dr. E. B. Conolly, 174½.

East and west, Mr. and Mrs. Van Clark, 210; Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, 182½; Mrs. Lillian H. Jackman and E. A. Perkins, 173.

Mrs. J. H. Hollister brought this one on from Portland, Oreg. Friend wife—"Our ladies' bridge club has passed a resolution that no man shall be allowed to enter the room where we are playing."

Friend husband—"Well, then, who in Sam Hill will answer the perennial feminine question, 'What is trump?' "

"Two Diamonds" Tillie describes a "triangle bid" as one of three hearts with a love score, and says that it often results in a grand slam.

Col. Conley Appointed Third Corps Adjutant General

New Official Born in Maryland; Graduate of West Point.

Col. Edgar T. Conley, Adjutant General's Department, has been announced by Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, Third Corps Area commander, as the new corps area adjutant general, succeeding Col Julius T. Conrad, who retired for age on November 20.

Col. Conley was born in Fairland, Montgomery County, Md., and received his appointment to the United States Military Academy from that county. He has been assistant adjutant general at Third Corps Area headquarters since August 6, 1930.

Graduating from the Military Academy in 1897, he was commissioned in the Infantry, and served in that arm until detailed in the Adjutant General's Department in 1917.

During the World War, Col. Conley was for a time in charge of the prisoners of war section of the provost marshal's office of the A. E. F., later serving as director of the prisoners of war bureau at general headquarters, and American member of the allied commission in Berlin on Russian prisoners of war.

He participated in the Santiago campaign during the Spanish-American War, and was awarded a silver star citation for gallantry in action Later he took part in various battles and campaigns in the Philippines during the insurrection.

He is a graduate of the Army War College and holds the distinguished service medal for high meritorious service in administering the prisoners of war division in France.

NAVAL RESERVE NOTES

By ENSIGN JACK STAHL, U. S. N. R.

The annual inspection of the Naval Reserve Inspection Board, composed of Capt. Alexander Sharp, senior member; Commander Carl T. Osborn, Lieut. Comdr. Oliver O. Kessing and Lieut. W. F. Hinckley, the inspector instructor, was held on Monday evening. The board's report is awaited, but due to the large number of divisions which they have to cover it is expected to be some time before the report reaches the commandant.

Several reserve officers from the Middle West and West Coast, who were in Washington attending the convention of the Naval Reserve Officers Association, were present at the inspection and spoke very highly of the appearance of the local battalion.

During the last week-end the Naval Reserve Officers Association convened at the Willard Hotel and more than 100 officers from all parts of the country were in attendance. Convening delegates declared themselves as strongly in favor of the fifteen days' active training period in addition to the 48 weekly drills and felt that definite action should be taken in favor of this by Congress.

At the close of the convention the following officers were selected for the ensuing year: Commander L. W. Hesselman, New York City, president; Lieut. Comdr. George Cole Scott, Richmond, Va., and Lieut. Comdr. Albert Soiland, vice presidents, and Lieut. George W. Akers, secretary-treasury. A vote of appreciation was given to the outgoing officers, Lieut. Comdr. M. R. Wortley, Detroit, Mich., president, and Lieut. Comdr. F. C. Huntoon, Great Lakes, Ill., secretary-treasurer.

Wilbur Frank Hoffecker, Charles Wynn Boyles and Martin J. Meenehan were recently enlisted in the aviation section of the Naval Reserve as seamen second class.

At the present time there are a few vacancies in the aviation section of the Naval Reserve for enlisted men. To the alert young man interested in this work an excellent opportunity is offered to familiarize himself with work. Lieut M. M. Cloukey, commanding officer of the aviation group, will be glad to interview men who desire to enlist in this section of the reserve.

Lieut. C. A. Briggs, of the Naval Communication Reserve, announced that a new radio transmitter of modern design and efficiency has been assigned to this group and it is expected that it will be delivered and operating by the time of the next regular drill on Monday, December 18.

This equipment places in the hands of the reservists facilities which will much enhance their effectiveness and interest in the work.

Air Chiefs Report Aeronautic Gains

Foulois and Moffett See Great Advances in Both Services.

Wide advances in the field of American military and naval aviation were revealed by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Rear Almiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, in a report on "Progress in Aeronautical Engineering," made public at the fifty-third annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth street.

Better performance, increased reliability and a number of new features, including an observation car that may be lowered 1,500 feet below an Army airship for special observation, were outstanding among the military aircraft developments of 1932, according to Gen. Foulois.

Hairs of Rabbit Being Counted

Breeders Will Be Able to Determine Just What Species to Cross.

Los Angeles (A.P.).—How many hairs on a rabbit? is a question that Dr. Albert W. Bellamy, associate professor of zoology and research associate in genetics at the University of California at Los Angeles, can answer.

Hair by hair, he and his assistants count them, at least in sections of a rabbit's fur.

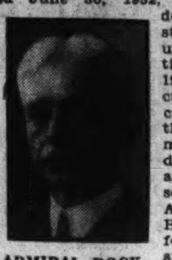
Data so far show, said Dr. Bellamy, that the range in healthy rabbits of a species runs 24,800 to 46,400 hairs per square inch.

The succeeding step will be determination of reasons for the variation, and then Dr. Bellamy will be able to advise the rabbit breeders just what breeds and species to cross to produce the best kind of furs to meet fashion's needs.

16 NAVAL VESSELS BEING COMPLETED

Construction Work Reported On by Admiral Rock for Fiscal Year.

"None of the ships under construction July 1, 1931, was completed and delivered during the year ended June 30, 1932, but five new destroyers were started, leaving under construction on July 1, 1932, seven heavy cruisers, one aircraft carrier, three fleet submarines and five destroyers, a total of sixteen vessels," said Rear Admiral George H. Rock, U. S. N., former chief constructor of the Navy, in his annual report submitted last week to the Secretary of the Navy.



ADMIRAL ROCK.

"Complete preliminary design plans of a flight deck cruiser have been prepared to contract plan scale with specifications and detailed preliminary weight estimates. Similar design plans for a 20,000-ton aircraft carrier are nearing completion.

Before General Board.

"A number of outline sketches of a type of large destroyer were presented for the consideration of the general board. These finally led to two principal schemes, one contemplating a leader type with quarters for staff officers and the other a fighting type in which gunpower is accentuated.

"A number of outline sketches of a new type 2,000-ton gunboat illustrating a half dozen or more design conceptions, have been prepared, some in considerable detail.

"Studies looking toward improvements in underwater protection for naval vessels have been continued. It is expected that the destroyer Hamilton will be available this winter for the installation of the large vibration generators obtained from the Losenhausen works in Germany.

Funds Have Been Sufficient.

"While funds available for overhauling of ships have not taken care of all necessary repair work, it is the bureau's belief that the funds expended for upkeep of the fleet, in general, have been sufficient. Based upon the returns extending over one full year, the repair bill on the ships in commission, with overhaul interval increased from 12 to 18 months, has been increased by only 30 per cent, instead of 50 per cent as might naturally be anticipated.

"Comparisons of the data relative to quantity and value of material inspected and cost of inspection for the fiscal years 1931 and 1932, shows a marked increase in the inspection work of the consolidated inspection districts.

"During the fiscal year 1932 the bureau completed its program of replacing the obsolete and unsatisfactory 21-foot motor dories with 26-foot motor whaleboats on all destroyers in commission.

"Submarine escape apparatus purchased in 1929 to fill the allowances of submarines is still being used as escape equipment and for training purposes."

Pratt Approves Fleet Operations

Schedule Announced for January in Addition to Training.

The schedule of operations for the United States fleet from January 1 to March 31, 1933, has been approved by the chief of naval operations, Admiral William V. Pratt, U. S. N., and, in addition to periods for regular training, provides for:

A cruise of vessels of the scouting force with the U. S. S. Saratoga, aircraft carrier, to the Hawaiian area from January 24 to February 5;

A fleet problem in which the scouting force en route from Hawaiian waters to the west coast of the United States will be engaged with the battle force in the Pacific from February 6 to 17, and

United States fleet concentration in the San Pedro-San Diego area from February 18 to March 31.

According to the schedule, from January 1 to 23, the United States fleet, U. S. S. Pennsylvania, flagship of Admiral Richard H. Leigh, U. S. N., commander in chief, will be in the San Pedro-San Diego area engaged in gunnery practices, ship and unit tactics. The battleships, cruisers, destroyers and carrier divisions, with the exception of the U. S. S. Saratoga, of the battle force, U. S. S. California, flagship of Admiral Luke McNamee, U. S. N., will remain in that area until January 29.

Battery C Awarded Knox Artillery Trophy

The Secretary of War, upon recommendation of the Chief of Coast Artillery, Maj. Gen. John W. Gulick, has announced that the Coast Artillery Knox Trophy for 1932 has been won by Battery C., Ninty-first Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Mills, P. I.

This battery was commanded during its annual target practice by Capt. H. P. Hennessy, who is now on duty at the University of Cincinnati. The range officer of Battery C. at the time of its target practice was Second Lieut. Paul A. Leahy, now on duty with the Sixty-second Coast Artillery, Fort Totten, N. Y.

The Knox Trophy is presented annually by the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to that battery of the regular army coast artillery, which has conducted the most successful target practice during the year.

WARSHIPS REPORTED IN GOOD CONDITION

Increasing Age of Craft Will Require More Replacements, Robinson Says.

"The bureau considers that the material condition of the machinery of the ships of the fleet has been satisfactorily maintained within the limit of the funds available," says Rear Admiral Samuel Murray Robinson, engineer in chief of the United States Navy, in his annual report.

"This was possible only because of the very material assistance of the forces afloat in arranging their schedules to permit more time to be devoted to self-maintenance and in the intensive use of repair ships and tenders.

Ships Are Aging.

"The increasing age of our ships with the attendant increase in necessary repairs and replacements must be borne in mind, however, and an increase in expenditures must be expected if our ships are to be adequately maintained.

"The material condition of the battleships is considered to be very good. Improved deck lighting for night operations has been provided on the carriers. A considerable retubing of boilers has been necessary on the cruisers. A considerable amount of retubing of condensers and boilers is constantly necessary to the age of these destroyers. Many repairs and alterations have been made to auxiliary vessels in order to continue or improve their usefulness to the fleet.

Naval Radio Communication.

"The gradual modernization of naval radio communication facilities has continued.

"The need of postgraduate training in engineering is well established. Some consolidation of courses has been effected necessitating some revision of work at the postgraduate school. Further revision is necessary to adapt these courses to the new policy governing postgraduate work, and these revisions are being made as fast as circumstances permit."

Capital Men Given Reserve Promotions

Two local officers of the Organized Reserves have accepted promotion, according to a recent announcement at the War Department.

They are Norman Selby Blankenship, of 1605 Minnesota avenue southeast, who has been promoted to first lieutenant in the Ordnance Reserve, and Kelley Ford Shippey, of 2032 Belmont road northwest, who has been promoted to first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Reserve.

Acting Governor Reports Canal November Traffic

The Secretary of War has received the following radiogram from the Acting Governor of the Panama Canal relative to the traffic handled by the canal during the month of November:

"Traffic November, 388 commercial vessels. Tolls, $1,756,865.84. Also four launches; tolls, $1,515."

NAVY DISPLAYS LATEST AIRCRAFT, LIGHTER AND HEAVIER THAN AIR

The Navy displays the latest in aircraft, both lighter-than-air and heavier-than-air, incorporating the most recent developments of the past year. (See Admiral Moffett's report in "Take-Offs and Landings" below.) Above—Workmen have just recently completed the framework of the U. S. S. Macon, and are now engaged in attaching the outer covering. The giant dirigible is being built in the Goodyear-Zeppelin dock at Akron, Ohio, will be completed in March, 1933, and when finished, excepting minor improvements, will be a duplicate of the U. S. S. Akron. Commander Alger H. Dresel, U. S. N., will be the Macon's skipper and in all probability she will base at Sunnyvale, Calif. Submarines of the future may be equipped with airplanes of the type pictured below, an experimental type Loening which can be carried in one of the undersea ships and can be put into action when the submarine comes to surface.

36 ARMY OFFICERS GIVEN PROMOTIONS

13 Are Advanced to Grade of First Lieutenants in Orders Issued.

Thirty-six officers of the Army have been promoted in recent orders issued at the War Department. Thirteen of the men have been raised from second lieutenants to first lieutenants, ten from first lieutenants to captain, five from captain to major, four from major to lieutenant colonel and four from lieutenant colonel to colonel.

All of the promotions are effective December 1, 1932. The officers and their new grades are as follows:

CORPS OF ENGINEERS—First Lieut. Robert H. Naylor, First Lieut. Paul D. C. Berrigan, First Lieut. Henry G. Douglas, First Lieut. Joseph W. Cox, jr., First Lieut. George T. Derby, First Lieut. Max S. Johnson, First Lieut. Lee B. Washbourne, First Lieut. John R. Crume, jr., First Lieut. Charles H. McNutt.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT — Maj. Willis R. Slaughter, Maj. Roy L. Bowlin.

CAVALRY—Col. Daniel D. Tompkins, Col. Clarence A. Dougherty, Maj. Charles S. Kilburn, Maj. Charles R. Johnson, jr., Capt. William S. Conrow, First Lieut. John L. Hines, jr.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS—Lieut. Col. Olin H. Longino, Lieut. Col. Peter H. Ottosen, Lieut. Col. Edgar H. Thompson.

INFANTRY—Col. Henry Hossfeld, Maj. George H. Weems, Capt. John S. Miller, Capt. James B. McDavid, Capt. Lloyd H. Gibbons, Capt. James W. Newberry, Capt. Edward C. Johnson.

AIR CORPS—Capt. Harold A. Bartron, Capt. John F. Whiteley, First Lieut. George W. McGregor, First Lieut. Charles A. Harrington.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATIVE CORPS—First Lieut. Charles L. Driscoll.

2 Coast Artillery Trophies Awarded

15th and 955th Regiments Honored; Militia Prize Pends.

The United States Coast Artillery Association awards three trophies annually, one to a Regular Army regiment, one to a National Guard regiment, and one to an Organized Reserve regiment of the Coast Artillery, for outstanding performance during the year.

For the year 1932, the association trophy for the Regular Army regiment was awarded to the Fifteenth Coast Artillery, Fort Kamehameka, Hawaii Territory, commanded by Col. Homer B. Grant, and the trophy for the Organized Reserve regiment was awarded to the 955th Coast Artillery, Duluth, Minn., commanded by Lieut. Col. J. R. Sweitzer. The winning National Guard regiment will be selected in the near future.

Take-Offs and Landings

By HARRIS B. HULL

THAT the authorization for new construction of vessels carrying aircraft should include provision for the authorization and construction of their own complements of aircraft, and the full support of the Navy Department in the Bureau of Aeronautics' high speed and other experimental programs, is stressed in the annual report of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy, just made public.

Admiral Moffett in the first recommendation above refers to the failure of Congress to pass a bill providing for 114 airplanes for the aircraft carrier Ranger. The Navy is now faced with the task of providing these planes from the 1,000 planes now authorized.

"This can be accomplished only by eliminating or reducing other very essential units of the aeronautical organization," Admiral Moffett stated last week.

"I consider it essential that airplanes, in addition to those authorized by the five-year program, be authorized for all new ship construction carrying aircraft," the admiral added.

Other recommendations made in the report ask that "an ordered program should be at once inaugurated to build up carriers and flying-deck cruisers to the full treaty limit."

The admiral also asks that "in view of the congestion of aircraft at San Diego which is even more intense than in any previous year, and hence has become increasingly dangerous to life and property, efforts should continue to obtain the full use of North Island as an airport for the Navy."

The bureau chief asks for an increase of civilian employes in order to permit the Navy to keep abreast of aeronautical progress.

Touching upon the condition of the American aviation industry and its relations to national defense Admiral Moffett said:

"I again desire to invite attention to the serious condition in this country of the aeronautical industry. Due to the present economic situation the aeronautical industry is largely dependent upon the business obtained from the Army and the Navy. To provide for the future welfare of both the Government and the industry, it is essential that well-established firms be enabled to remain in business. This can be done only by a reasonable volume of experimental and production orders resulting in fair profits."

An improvement is noted in the Navy's fatal accident record in 1932 over 1931. Although the gain is small when viewed over a period of years it supports the claim of the heads of the Bureau of Aeronautics that the fatality curve is steadily improving. The hours flown per fatal accident increased from 10,207 in 1931 to 10,462 in 1932 as against 3,922 in 1928.

In a general survey of the year's activities, Admiral Moffett points out that all aircraft units except those of the Marine Corps, that were formerly ashore, have now been assigned to and are operating with the active fleet. Two Marine Corps squadrons also have been assigned to the carriers.

During the year the Jason was decommissioned largely through motives of economy and the aircraft on the Asiatic Station, other than those assigned to the Houston, have been reduced to a utility unit of four planes.

Other extracts from Admiral Moffett's report are as follows:

"Constant effort is being devoted to improving the speed, range and performance of naval aircraft. The experimental research abroad incident to the Schneider Cup races has had a marked influence upon the performance of foreign military aircraft. It is necessary for the proper development of aircraft in this country that funds be provided for power plant and aerodynamic research in order that military aeronautics may maintain its proficiency.

"There is urgent need in the Navy for a patrol seaplane capable of cruising long distances and comfortably housing its personnel. Unavailability of funds has prevented the development of a fleet boat of this type.

"With the aircraft at Coco Solo and Pearl Harbor a part of the fleet command, and the effort being devoted to increasing the mobility of other patrol plane units, steps are being taken to augment the tender facilities available to these units by the addition of several minesweepers for tender duty I recommend that one large seaplane tender, capable of adequately housing aircraft personnel, be assigned permanently to each of the fleet air bases at Coco Solo and Pearl Harbor.

"With the view of supplying mooring mast facilities to provide for and extend operations of the Akron and Macon a program of development of outlying mooring masts was recommended and approved by the chief of Naval Operations in 1931. This program is now under way subject to the limitations of available funds."

Still at Top

U. S. and France Capture Most of Records in Aviation Again.

Paris, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The United States and France still lead in aviation records set, according to the annual review of the International Aeronautic Federation.

Seven of the major records of the year were captured by the United States, four by France and three by Great Britain. The official list of the fourteen principal world records for men follows:

LAND PLANES.

Speed (1-kilometer base)—Maj. James Doolittle, United States, 473.8 kilometers.

Speed (100-kilometer base)—Lieut. Cyrus Battle, United States, 401.3 kilometers.

Altitude—Cyril Frank, Great Britain, 13,404 meters.

Duration (closed circuit without refueling)—Walter Lees and F. A. Brossy, United States, 84 hours 32 minutes.

Duration (refueling in air)—John and Kenneth Hunter, United States, 553 hours 41 minutes.

Distance (straight line)—Russell Boardman and John Polando, United States, New York to Istanbul, 8,065.7 kilometers.

Distance (closed circuit without refueling)—Bossoutrot and Rossi, France, 10,601.5 kilometers.

Distance (closed circuit with refueling)—Lowell Smith and J. E. Richter, United States, 5,300 kilometers.

SEAPLANES.

Speed (3-kilometer base) — Stainforth, Great Britain, 655 kilometers.

Speed (100-kilometer base)—Boothmen, Great Britain, 551.8 kilometers.

Altitude—Lieut. Apollo Soueck, United States, 11,753 meters.

Duration—Paris and Gonord, France, 36 hours 57 minutes 6 seconds.

Distance (straight line)—Mermoz, Babry and Cimie, France, St. Louis, Senegal to Natal, 3,175.2 kilometers.

Distance (closed circuit)—Paris and Gonord, France, 5,011.8 kilometers.

UPHAM ADVOCATES MORE MIDSHIPMEN

Admiral Says Navy Should Anticipate Needs of London Treaty.

"It appears wise and prudent to provide now for additional midshipmen, the earliest of whom can not be commissioned before 1937, to meet the needs of the London Naval Treaty," declares Rear Admiral Frank Upham, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, in his annual report, just published.

"For this purpose four appointments each to senators and representatives are deemed necessary. The upkeep charges of the Naval Academy are approximately constant, regardless of the number of midshipmen there, and it is obviously desirable to make full use of this splendid institution for the production of naval officers. In the future no graduates of the Naval Academy will be given elimination flight training prior to the completion of the first two years of commissioned service."

Sees Decreased Efficiency.

Other sections of Rear Admiral Upham's report are as follows:

"Reduction of the personnel on board our ships must result in decreased efficiency and increased cost of material upkeep.

"It is not generally understood or appreciated that the pay of naval officers is still but little above the 1908 level. The interdepartmental pay board report showed that the increase in the pay of the average officer as provided for in the 1922 pay act was only 11 per cent over that provided in 1903. Since 1922 nearly every other department of the Government has received substantial increases."

For Six Apartment Houses.

Commenting upon the proposed transfer of the Naval Postgraduate School from Annapolis to the West Coast, which was abandoned when opposed by the committee on naval affairs, Admiral Upham stated:

"One of the reasons for advocating the movement of the Postgraduate School was the fact that at Annapolis it has been almost impossible for young officers to get suitable living accommodations at reasonable figures. The board of visitors for a number of years has recommended the construction of apartment houses within the Naval Academy grounds. I earnestly recommend that steps be taken to authorize the construction of six ten-family apartment houses at the Naval Academy. The matter has been carefully considered by the board for the development of navy yard plans and has been given a high priority among the projects recommended by that board."

Francis A. Smith Gets Submarine Command

Lieut. Comdr. Francis A. Smith, U. S. N., has been ordered detached next month from the Bureau of Construction and Repair of the Navy Department and assigned to command the submarine Argonaut, one of the newest types in the service.

Lieut. Commander Smith has been on duty in the bureau since last July. Formerly he served on the Argonaut when the submarine was designated the V-4.

Signal Corps to Sell 150 Homing Pigeons

For the first time in several years the Signal Corps of the Army will offer for sale 150 of their prize winning racing and homing pigeons, according to a statement made last week by Col. A. S. Cowan, commanding officer of Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Many of these birds are bred from the famous Ross-Osman, Ross-Soffle, Logan-Osman or Logan-Ross stocks while some are able to trace their ancestry back to the Signal Corps World War birds.

Sealed bids will be received for these pigeons, by the signal supply officer, Fort Monmouth, N. J. Bids will be opened at 1 p. m., January 12, 1933. Bids will be received for one or more of the four pair lots. No bids will be received for less than 4 pair of pigeons.

CONTRACTS IN NAVY TOTAL $7,226,685

364 Projects Covered in Report Discussed by Admiral Parsons.

Details of the award of 364 contracts during the past fiscal year at a cost of $7,226,685.99 are discussed in the annual report of Rear Admiral Archibald L. Parsons, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, just submitted to the Secretary of the Navy.

"Plans were prepared in the field for 247 projects, having a total contract price of $2,106,544.17. Plans were prepared at the bureau for 104 projects having a total contract price of $5,120,141.82. The navy yards and stations opened bids for 217 projects and the bureau for 134 projects," Rear Admiral Parsons says.

Other extracts from the chief's report are as follow:

"The activities of the bureau during the fiscal year, pertaining to maintenance and operation of the shore establishments within the scope of the bureau's cognizance, continued practically constant with those of the preceding year.

"The volume of public works construction accomplished during 1932 was also practically the same as during 1931, as indicated by cash withdrawals of $13,010,752.84 and $12,847,229.29, respectively.

"At the close of the fiscal year there were 127 active contracts in force as compared with 143 on the corresponding date in 1931. Since July 1, 59 contracts having a total value of $732,739.51 have been awarded and 87 have been closed."

The remainder of the report describes in detail the present status of work on the various above enumerated projects.

NAVAL GUN FACTORY PRAISED BY LARIMER

Plant in Efficient Condition to Manufacture Ordnance Equipment, He Says.

"The Naval Gun Factory is in an efficient condition for manufacturing naval ordnance equipment, and the economy of this manufacture is being constantly improved. The standard of the personnel is excellent," states Rear Admiral Edgar Brown Larimer, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance in his annual report just submitted to the Secretary of the Navy.

Admiral Larimer.

Some extracts from Rear Admiral Larimer's report are as follows:

"Extensive investigation work has been performed by the bureau in connection with final settlements of war claims arising out of patents which were turned over to the Navy Department during the World War by foreign governments.

Modernization Well Advanced.

"Modernization work on ordnance material for 14-inch gun turrets of the U. S. S. New Mexico and Mississippi is well advanced at the Naval Gun Factory. A majority of the larger items is completed and shipped.

"Orders have been placed with Army Ordnance for .50 caliber antiaircraft machine guns for all heavy cruisers, for the Ranger and for the Dolphin, Cachalot and Cuttlefish. Orders have been placed for the manufacture of mounts for these guns at the Naval Gun Factory.

"Two target rafts were ordered during the year, one at Mare Island and one at Norfolk. The naval powder factory has operated continuously throughout the year, with the following output: New powder, 1,540,846 pounds, and reworked powder, 504,641 pounds. In addition, 265,000 pounds of a new type of smokeless powder were procured from a commercial source.

Design Has Progressed.

"Design of aviation ordnance material has progressed, but not with the desired rapidity, due to overloaded conditions in the bureau and naval gun factory drafting rooms. Items in which marked improvement has been accomplished include bomb racks, bomb-displacing gears, flexible mounts for machine guns, telescopic sights, smoke producing apparatus, gun cameras, bomb-hoisting gear, bomb sights and bomb racks and releasing equipment for the Akron and Macon.

"The experimental research and development work conducted by the bureau has been as extensive and as active as possible with available funds."

Made First Lieutenant.

Louis Morgan Swingle, of 923 Farragut street northwest, has been appointed first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Reserve, according to a recent announcement at the War Department.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES

Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division, and the officers of his staff from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, yesterday made a tour of the battlefields in the vicinity of Fredericksburg, Va. The secretary of the Battlefield Memorial Commission, Col. Arthur E. Wilbourne, cavalry, United States Army, conducted the tour. The members of the party found the trip both interesting and instructive.

Publication of the monthly attendance record of all units of the District of Columbia National Guard shows four units maintaining for the month of November an average of above 90 per cent, as follows: Headquarters detachment, special troops, 97.5 per cent; headquarters detachment, Twenty-ninth Division, 93.46 per cent; Battery E, 260th Coast Artillery, 92.69 per cent, and medical detachment, 260th Coast Artillery, 90.47 per cent.

In connection with estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year, 1934, Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan has pointed out to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that the estimates for the District of Columbia National Guard are 35 per cent less than for the year preceding the World War, indicating that the local militia has not shared in the increase in Government expense during the last fifteen years.

Staff Sergt. Eugene C. Brown, Headquarters and Service Company, upon his own application has been relieved of duty as sergeant major, First Battalion, 121st Engineers, and reduced to the grade of private. The vacancy thus created has been filled by the promotion of Sergt. Marion T. Bohon, Headquarters and Service Company, to staff sergeant. He will report to the commanding officer, First Battalion, for duty as battalion sergeant major. Sergt. Harold W. Leath, Headquarters and Service Company, has been assigned to duty as regimental personnel sergeant, with orders to report to the regimental commander for duty.

The following named enlisted men have been transferred to the National Guard Reserve: Because of temporary removal from the District of Columbia: Private John Machlin, Battery A, 260th Coast Artillery. Because of educational interference: Private Harry H. Johnson, jr., Headquarters Detachment and Combat Train, 260th Coast Artillery. Because of business interference: Privates Bernard J. Gates, John L. Crenshaw and Arthur C. Meushaw, Company F, 121st Engineers; Privates Albert J. Miller and Markell W. Paxton, Headquarters Detachment and Combat Train, and Private B. M. Brown, Battery B, 260th Coast Artillery.

Transferred from the National Guard Reserve to the active list are Corporal Arthur N. Bryde, Battery B, and Private Stephen J. Devine, Battery A, 260th Coast Artillery.

Upon the recommendation of the Company Commander, Sergt. Warren Q. Prugh has been reduced to private, and Corpl. Louis C. Brubaker promoted to sergeant in Company E, 121st Engineers. Private James R. Ceranton and Ural S. Fisher have been transferred from Company F to the Medical Detachment, 121st Engineers, and Private first class Charles M. Warwick promoted to sergeant in the latter unit.

RESERVE CORPS NOTES

By STAFF SERGT. A. S. DE AGRO.

Announcement has been made by Col. W. W. McCammon, senior instructor, in charge of reserve affairs in the District of Columbia, of the reappointment of Maj. Charles Demonet, Ordnance Reserve, of Cathedral avenue northwest, as chairman of the Military Training Camps Association for the District of Columbia.

Maj. Demonet.

Maj. Demonet, who is serving in his sixth year as chairman, is a native Washingtonian, graduating from Central High School Cadet Corps and later becoming a member of the District of Columbia National Guard. Last year he was commander of the District of Columbia Chapter of the Military Order of the World War. He is a former president of the Department of the District of Columbia Reserve Officers' Association and active member of the Army Ordnance Association. He is also a charter member of the Rotary Club of this city, member of the Rotary Club International, Washington Board of Trade, the Elks, Army and Navy Club, charter member and present commander of the George Washington Post, No. 1, of the American Legion, and an active member of the Officers Reserve Corps. At the present time Maj. Demonet is serving on the Eightieth Division Staff as divisional ordnance officer. During the World War he served as a captain of Infantry.

Present plans contemplate the opening of the citizens military training camps procurement campaign about February 15, 1933, according to instructions issued by Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commanding the Third Corps Area, of which the District of Columbia is a part. The Third Corps Area is divided into six procurement districts under the control and management of the chiefs of staff of the Organized Reserve Divisions, and senior instructors of Washington and Baltimore Organized Reserve Units. Regular Army officers selected by Col. McCammon as associate chairman for districts under the Washington headquarters are: Assistant to Col. McCammon, for the District of Columbia, Maj. H. C. Dagley; Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun and Prince William counties, Va., Lieut. Col. Charles B. Moore; Prince Georges County, Md., Maj. John M. McDowell; Montgomery County, Md., Maj. Turner M. Chambliss, and for Charles and St. Mary's County, Md., Maj. Elmore B. Gray. Other Regular Army officers named as assistants are: Majs. William H. Hobson, Henry L. Krafft, Capts. Lawrence L. Cobb and William C. DeWare, of Georgetown University; Lieut. Col. Thomas D. Woodson, of George Washington University; Maj. Alvan C. Gilliem, jr., Capt. Everett L. Upson and Lieut. Whitfield P. Shepard, of the University of Maryland; Capt. Caesar R. Roberts and Lieut. John C. Wade, instructors with the District of Columbia National Guard.

Conference Schools.

Six instructional conferences have been arranged by local headquarters for the coming week. Washington quartermaster officers will meet tomorrow evening. Lieut. Col. E. B. Gregory, in charge of the fiscal section of the quartermaster general's office, will discuss fiscal problems concerning the Quartermaster Corps during the first period, while Capt. J. A. Porter, also of that office, for the second period will give an illustrated lecture on the expedition in Mexico, including its supply and operation.

Washington Coast Artillery officers will be honored again with a visit by their district commander, Brig. Gen. Joseph B. Tracy, commanding the Third Coast Artillery district, Tuesday evening. According to an announcement issued by Maj. Elmore B. Gray, the instructor of Washington Coast Artillery Reserve Units, Gen. Tracy is making the trip from Fort Monroe, Va., his headquarters, for the sole purpose of addressing the Washington group. Gen. Tracy is vitally interested in the Officers' Reserve Corps and a close observer of the progress being made at troop and conference schools.

"Organization of the Infantry Division," will be the subject of the lecture to be presented by Capt. T. J. Koenig to District Air Corps officers. The meeting will be held on the same evening in the office of the Chief of the Air Corps, Munitions Building.

Military intelligence officers will assemble Wednesday evening. Maj. P. C. Sibert, General Staff Corps, of the G-2 Division of the War Department General Staff, will discuss "Press Relations and the Functions of the Military Intelligence."

District Cavalry officers will meet at headquarters Thursday evening. "Defense Against Chemical Warfare" will be the subject of the lecture to be made by Maj. H. C. Dagley, in charge of the Washington Cavalry officers. This is a common one that all officers should be familiar with. Maj. Dagley will cover that part of the extension course dealing on defense against chemical agents, chemical weapons and their use from the viewpoint of protection. This conference will be followed by cavalry equitation classes to be held Sunday morning at the Fort Myer Riding Hall.

James F. Kendrick, of 1820 Clydesdale place northwest, has been appointed a second lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service Reserve.

First Lieut. Luby Turner, Quartermaster Corps Reserve, of 604 Alexandria avenue, Clarendon, Va., has been reappointed in the Officers Reserve Corps.

The following District Reserve officers have been assigned to units as indicated by the commanding general, Third Corps Area: To the 376th Engineers, General Service Regiment, Second Lieut. Glen W. Moore, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survery; 862d Observation Squadron, Capt. Wayne S. Green, of Woodley Park Towers; 409th Attack Squadron, Second Lieut. Tallmadge L. Boyd, of 1776 Lanier place northwest.

First Lieut Frank A. Susan, Medical Reserve, of Providence Hospital, is relieved from assignment to the Eighth Surgical Hospital, and is assigned to the Fifty-first General Hospital in the capacity of surgical ward officer.

Second Lieut. Bennett G. Jones, Cavalry Reserve, of 2801 Adams Mill road, having been transferred in grade to the Engineer Corps Reserve, will remain assigned to the Sixty-second Cavalry Division.

ALL ABOARD for the MOON!

Rocket-Ship Trips From Planet to Planet Within the Next Two Generations Are Predicted by Johann Winkler, Noted German Scientist

By Count Alfred Hessenstein

Berlin.

"ALL aboard for the moon!" Men and women, with the keen, bird-like faces typical of a new generation, are saying good-by to their friends.

"Yes * * * yes. * * * I'll send you a postcard back on the mail rocket * * * sure, I won't forget * * * 'by, dad * * * sure, we'll be all right * * * hop in, honey. * * * Good-by!"

Happy as schoolboys playing hooky, they are off on a tremendous adventure, a trip which has the Grand Tour beaten hollow and which will soon be as familiar a feature of life as the week-end cruise to Bermuda. They are a sight-seeing party bound for the moon!

"Get in, folks!" The porters, laden with luggage, clamber up the gangways. Seats are reserved, berths are allocated, stewards hand round small glasses of anti-airsickness mixture, for this is to be a high-speed flight.

Cameras in hands, the pilgrims to the moon climb the long flight of steps of the huge canted slipway on which rests the gigantic bullet-shaped rocket, a colossal projectile with long, shining windows. Huge exhaust nozzles protrude from the rear; three undercarriages with four wheels on each are attached to the underside, but these will be drawn up inside the body of the rocket in flight to obviate wind resistance.

THE doors are shut. The passengers take their places in the richly cushioned seats by the windows and wave to the dense throng of people below.

A low humming noise pervades the rocket ship. A bell clangs. A voice from some unseen loud-speaker says: "All passengers adjust safety belts for the takeoff! These belts are looped from the back of the seat in front and will hold you while the ship takes the air. When we reach the stratosphere and straighten up a bit you may release them—but wait till I tell you! Stand by. * * *"

The humming of the motors rises to a higher pitch.

"O. K.?"

"Sure!"

"Contact!"

Suddenly the exhaust nozzles crackle and belch flame. With a tremendous blast of sound, half-roar, half-whistle, the rocket shoots up the long slide.

Swooooooooooooooosh!

And as a thin cheer rings out from the watchers, the ship is gone, hurtling into the blue and rising steeply.

QUICKLY the end of the atmosphere is reached. The oxygen pumps inside the ship regulate an even air supply. In the control room a man in overalls pulls over a switch. A second set of motors begin to hum and the rocket increases speed.

The man in overalls watches the needle of the speedometer creeping up and up.

"What is it?" the captain of the rocket calls to him.

"A thousand miles an hour, sir."

"Whack her up! Put two more motors on.".

Several minutes later——

"What now?"

"Twenty-five thousand."

"Hold her steady at that. Forty's the limit, but we don't want to burn out the engines.'

All this sounds incredible, doesn't it? All very much like the romantic imaginings of H. G. Wells, Jules Verne & Co. But the sober fact is that, according to Herr Johann Winkler, of Berlin, this scene will be actuality within a generation, or maybe two at most!

It is a daring thing to prophesy, but Johann Winkler is emphatic in his declaration. He is renowned in Europe as one of the greatest rocket experts of the day, if not the greatest. He is working upon the same principles as those employed by the ill-fated Valier, who lost his life in experimenting with high-explosive fuels for rocket ships. He quickly realized that the greatest difficulty to be overcome in rocket travel is the fact that if powder was used as the explosive fuel, no rocket could carry the amount required.

What fuel would prove efficient enough and portable enough for the job?

JOHANN WINKLER has found it. He invented a so-called ray motor which uses a liquid fuel that is carried in huge containers and fed to the explosion chamber, where it is converted into tremendous energy.

He told me all about it as we walked round his factory in Berlin, stopping at various benches to examine the parts of motors under construction.

"The most dangerous part of this work," said Herr Winkler, "is in the taming of high-speed explosive fuel. It is like harnessing one of those dynamic American bronco horses. You never know what might happen. Look at poor Valier. He went out that way. Peace has its heroes as well as war.

"Some of us still remember the time when the idea of the airplane was regarded with considerable skepticism. None the less, the airplane has become a reality. During the war it was used as a weapon of decisive importance. For years after the war, the radius of action of airplanes was regarded as limited. It was considered quite impossible to fly long distances without landing. Today there is a far-flung net of aerial communication over all the continents; deserts, forests and oceans are no obstacles. Post and Gatty's amazing circumnavigation of the globe in 1931 marked the beginning of the new era.

"FOR some years a new problem has occupied the minds of those interested in flying—the rocket airship whose ultimate object is to penetrate the airless space beyond the stratosphere. The skeptics are again smiling, for few people know how far the rocket has already progressed. It is not only theoretically possible, but also constructively, as I will show you.

"Some rocket researchers approached the problem cautiously—that is to say, by making the rocket rise as far as the stratosphere by easy stages. When their ultimate object is achieved, dirigible mail rockets of terrific speeds are to be sent to distant parts of our planet, and only afterward is the space airship to be built.

"Since the invention of my motor, I consider it better to attack the greatest problem first—that is to say, the problem of space flight. As we have no means of achieving certainty of aim with pilotless airplanes, it is at present impossible to send mail rockets to given points; besides, it is possible to reach the stratosphere and also to fly through this air stratum with the original gunpowder rocket. For space flights, entirely different speeds and a more powerful drive are necessary.

"The invention of my motor — an achievement of the last two years—has brought this aim within the bounds of possibility. In contrast to the piston motor, this machine is actuated directly by the radiation of the fuel gases upon their expulsion. A characteristic feature is a powerful drive of short duration and its capacity to supply fresh drive in airless space. In this way, the ship is capable of opening up vast new regions to aviators, the empty and airless space beyond the stratosphere.

"The motor was developed out of the primitive gunpowder rocket. The latter consists of a metal tube, closed at one end, the explosive gas escaping through the other end. In 1929-1930 it was found possible to employ a liquid fuel producing far greater energy; while black powder produces 685 calories, one kilogram of the new fuel, together with a corresponding amount of oxygen, produces 2600 calories. These liquid fuels can be carried in containers and supplied to the explosion chamber as required. This form of drive has many advantages as compared with the present recoil motors; the machine is under complete control, drive and recoil can be regulated as required, and, in addition, fuel costs one-tenth as much as powder. Portability problems are overcame.

"The new motor operates through throwing off the gas with great speed. The flying speed can be increased second by second through the escape of a gas jet without injury to the health of the passengers.

"THE explosion chamber, with the exhaust nozzles, is the soul of the new motor. In the explosion nozzle, the high-tension gases are converted into colossal energy. Pressure in the explosion chamber—and therefore drive—can be regulated by changing the cross-section of the supply nozzle. We have substantially succeeded in attaining uniformity in the process of manufacturing the liquid fuel without loss of life. Only those who have seen the explosion of small quantities of a mixture of methan and liquid oxygen can imagine the devastating action of liquid fuels. A great deal of difficult and dangerous work had to be executed before it was possible to make measurements in the machine itself.

"By testing the motor on the testing bench, I discovered that the conversion of energies into speed in the exhaust nozzle was very favorable. By establishing a relation between the measured recoil and pressure in the explosion chamber, I obtained a clear picture of the conversion of the energy produced by the gases into useful labor.

"When, in March, 1931, the first new motor rocket took off at Dessau, the motor was already able to give a recoil corresponding to double its specific weight. The results of these experiments were then applied to the construction of a bigger apparatus. The task was to construct an apparatus of substantially greater dimensions, but nevertheless light, which could bear high pressure and carry large quantities of fuel, in order to extend the radius of action.

"THE radius of action of all individual rocket apparatus is limited, in spite of high individual performance. To obtain the highest performance, such as is required for space flight, those rocket experts, Oberth and Goddard, suggested that two or three rockets increased in geometrical progression should be employed. The drawback to this procedure consists in the fact that it is difficult and expensive to test such large rockets in the laboratory. In addition, in view of the discrepancy between weight and recoil, it is difficult to take off with such large rockets.

"I therefore took another line, starting from individual rockets of a given size, whose properties are known. For the highest performances, I have evolved a formula which makes it possible to work out the figure required for any given performance, in respect of every kind of rocket tested at this laboratory.

"Naturally, the same formula can also be applied to medium performances, such as the construction of apparatus for the exploration of the stratosphere and airless space, or for the attainment of distant points.

"The advantage of this formula consists in the fact that it shows the way along which rocket investigation must proceed. With the new motor alone can the highest performances be achieved. The present line of investigation is devoted to the improvement of motor performance, reduction of weight and increase of recoil in relation to fuel load. On conclusion of these investigations the construction of the space airship may be begun.

"Years, perhaps decades, may pass before this final object is realised, but investigations have already progressed far enough to enable me to say with certainty that the next generation will see the space rocket of a speed of 42,000 kilometers per hour start for other planets. That will perhaps be the most significant hour in the history of humanity."

And as I turned to go it seemed to me I could already hear the conductors calling: "All aboard for the moon! All aboard!"

It's Smart TO BE CHILDISH

Survey of Santa Claus' Workshop Reveals That Grown-Ups Are Poaching on the Preserves of the Nursery and Children Are Interested in the Practical Things of Life

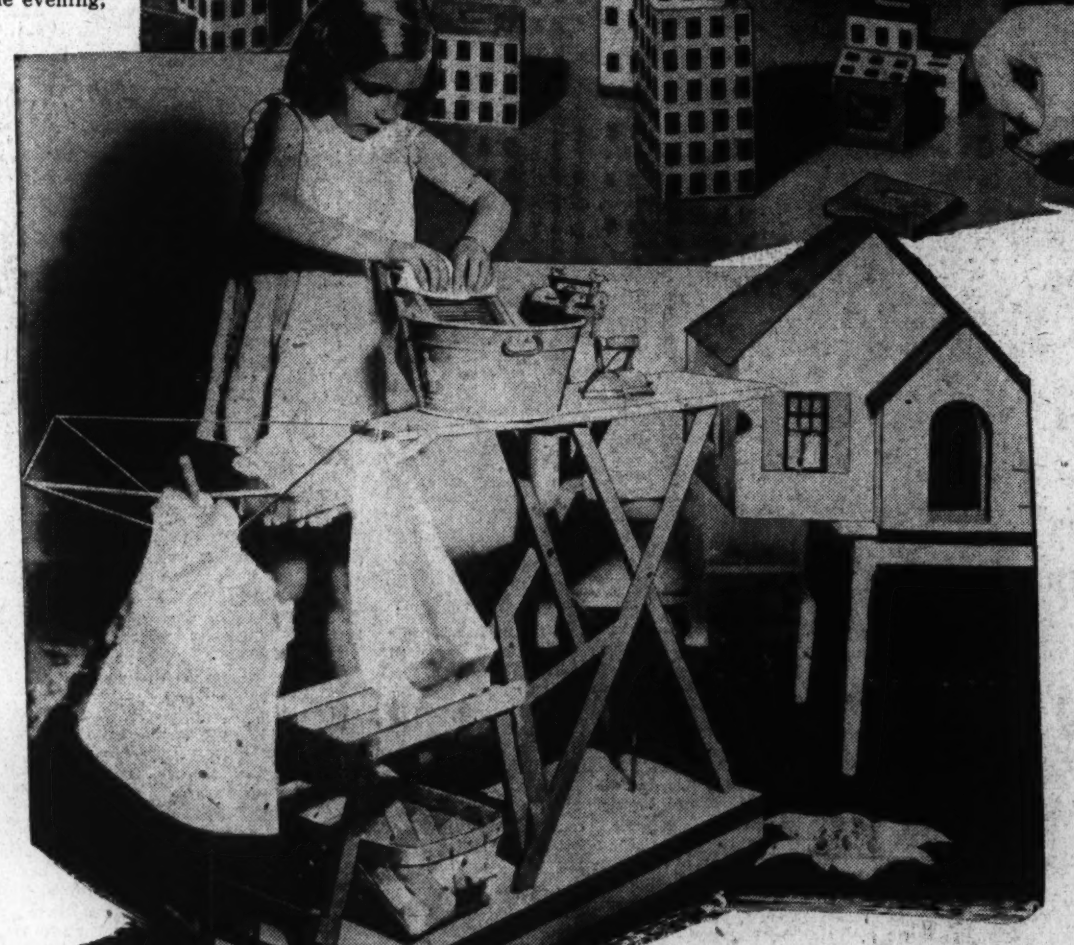
After a hard day's work under Kleig lights, Dorothy Lee, pretty motion-picture star, seeks refuge and relaxation at home surrounded by her stuffed playmates

By Ruth Millard

DESPITE its red-inked record, 1932 is achieving one new high—it's the biggest year for home entertainment since the days of coaches and antimacassars. To counteract the pain of curtailed budgets, the great American public has rediscovered the art of parlor funmaking. Play is the order of the evening, and "It's smart to be childish" is the entertainment slogan as this year's Christmas season approaches.

This back-to-the-home movement has brought a 100 per cent increase in the grown-up use of such nursery staples as jigsaw puzzles, architectural building blocks, horse-racing games, cavorting animals, electric trains, tops, lotto, table bowling and so on.

For years grown-ups have found Christmas morning an excuse to fuss with train signals, battle games and mechanical toys that Santa Claus had deposited in the children's stockings. But these excursions into toyland made the adults a bit shamefaced. They carefully explained that their only interest was to show the children how the marvelous new gadgets worked. But since 1929 dimmed the effulgence of night clubs, the adult play instinct has been creeping out in the open until, in 1932, it has reached a new pinnacle in chic and variety and encompassed all the staple funmakers of the juvenile set.



A mixture of practical work and play makes this laundry set a popular toy for youngsters, while skyscraper building on the parlor floor gains favor as a fad for adults

BACK-TO-THE-HOME has meant back-to-the-floor in this new order of funmaking. Grown-up males in swallowtails squat happily before half-built skyscrapers of blocks as the schedule of merriment approaches the wee small hours. Electric train racing and top-spinning contests are new floor-kneeling favorites for evening play. Mechanical animals and eccentric dolls have a fascinated adult audience these days as they cavort through the air or hop across the parlor rug.

Magic is another time-honored sport of the youngest set that is enjoying adult favor. White rabbits are being miraculously produced at the smartest dinner parties. And false-bottomed tables that facilitate changing water into wine have a devoted following along Park avenue.

The games of the nursery set have been adopted in toto by these fun-seeking adults. Bagatelle, parchesi, checkers, chess, lotto, jacks, keeno, horse-racing games and such juvenile staples are drafted for evening parties by those who are tired of bridge and enlivened a bit, it must be admitted, by revising the rules to increase the element of chance. So great is the popular tolerance for chance-taking that the most conservative department stores have been featuring exhibits of poker and roulette wheel outfits—apparatus sold only surreptitiously in the past because of the supposed prejudice of "better element" customers. The high-scoring possibilities of contract bridge are held partly responsible for this change of view and taste.

Jigsaw puzzles are the latest favorite in home recreation. After years on the juvenile list, they are now set up on the smartest drawing-room tables. So great has been the demand that puzzle-makers have developed new and more elaborate lines—some with as many as 2000 pieces to be put together. Despite this new high in complication, the old-design favorites still survive. Men prefer hunting scenes and women Colonial dames and courtiers. Map puzzles and jigsaw versions of famous paintings are also popular. Lending libraries now feature puzzles along with best-selling novels to stimulate this new vogue in entertainment.

Toy guns are enjoying a whirl of adult popularity, staging a 75 per cent increase since 1930, according to the toy statistics. The vogue for cellars rehabilitated as playrooms has made shooting at targets feasible for home entertainment. The accident-proof features of modern BB, water and air guns make them preferable for party competition. Parlor archery with blunt-pointed arrows is another nursery pastime that has been picked up by the smart set. Dart games are another favorite adult competition for winter evenings this year.

Such play pen staples as ring-toss, beanbags, jackstraws, marbles and jacks have so many adult adherents that manufacturers have redesigned their lines in de luxe editions to fill the grown-up demand for childish pleasures.

Miniature versions of adult games have a prominent place in the roster of popularity. Tennis and golf, played on tables; miniature bowling and football sets are on the best-selling list.

Checkers, chess and dominoes come in under this category. And so do blocks, mosaic tiles and various forms of building blocks. Miniature boats that churn through bathtub rivers are piloted by grown-up navigators these days—all part of the relaxation program that features depression recreation.

WHILE grown-ups have been poaching on the rightful preserves of the nursery, the youngsters themselves have been casting covetous eyes upon those practical pursuits that adults rate as drudgery. In the last two years there has been more than 100 per cent increase in juvenile demand for realistic, workable models of domestic and industrial machinery of the adult world, a survey of toy manufacturers shows.

While adults are working out puzzles and having an uproarious time watching grotesque animals with airplane propeller tails cavort through the air, the juvenile contingent is demanding realistic tasks to perform. Brides of the next generation will rival their great-grandmothers as expert cooks and laundresses, if the Santa Claus demand by 1932 little girls for exact reproductions of homemaking machinery forecasts their grown-up tastes.

Electric stoves that really cook, dressed up in green enamel and chromium plate, are the rage for the youngest set. Washing machines that really can cleanse doll laundry are on the preferred list Santa Claus receives. Tom Thumb greenhouses of isinglass, with real gardening tools, are a new favorite.

When Susy, the 4-year-old miss of 1932, plays house, she wants to perform each domestic task efficiently. When she sets her miniature table for lunch she has colorful china, as pretty as mother's, and colored glass to match the border of the tablecloth. Her kitchen cabinet in bright enamel is a businesslike affair with racks for storing pots and pans, a flour sifter and a rolling pin. Her carpet-sweeper disposes of crumbs and a sturdy scrubbing brush in miniature makes the doll-house floor shine.

For her brother there are trains, airplanes and autos that really work and look exactly like those of the adult world. Their edges don't scratch, and when he throws them on the floor they don't break like the old-fashioned toy that was cited as a synonym for perishable. He delights in every kind of industrial machinery in Tom Thumb sizes—concrete mixers, derricks, gas pumps, dump trucks. He takes vast pride in architectural blocks and steel construction sets that build bridges, boats, houses and even airplanes and autos.

HE AND Susy like to play store with a tiny electric telephone, a real counter and shelves, a cash register, an adding machine and a businesslike desk. Playing radio broadcasting with a playroom microphone goes under the head of preferred fun. So do miniature typewriters and two-foot pianos. Printing presses give practical service to young newspapermen of 6 or so. Chemistry sets that make ink and such staples of the business world are juvenile favorites and so is motion-picture equipment, now available in lower price ranges.

Some of the psychologists have tried to discourage the use of such time-honored noisemaking instruments as the drum, but inquiry shows that the juvenile use of noisemakers has increased 55 per cent in the last three years—showing either that parents are more tolerant of noise or that children are asserting their desires more effectively.

Perhaps the answer lies in the adult sector of toy purchases which reveal that grown-up use of noisemakers has equaled the popularity of puzzles by doubling in the last three years. Trick rattles, which started out by being favorite night-club souvenirs, have ended up at fireside parties. Miniature jazz bands with tiny xylophones, ukes, horns, etc., are just as popular with grown-ups as with children. Eccentric talking dolls and singing tops are on the list of diversions.

Both adults and children are showing increased interest in dressing up, the sales figures reveal. Cowboy, Indian and pirate costumes, in large as well as small sizes, show an upturn in popularity. Every section of the country reflects a rise in the demand for dressing-up clothes.

Children, for their masquerade parties, still prefer cowboy and Indian costumes, although the uniforms of policemen and soldiers are close seconds. Adults like little girl and boy costumes, convict uniforms, as well as the traditional Pierette, pirate, gypsy and toreador rigs.

The craze for detective stories and plays that has gripped older folk in recent years has been passe' along to the younger generation. The latest in this line is the slick Sherlock Holmes with false whiskers and make-up to complete a perfect disguise.

It is evident that more and more young girls are intent upon business careers, judging from the effects set up by Santa Claus for daughters inclined in this direction. Future business women delight in the big crop of real counters, real cash registers, real adding machines and the like now provided for them. Business-type toys are almost exclusively for girls, leaving mechanical contrivances for boys.

There are microphones that can be heard all over the house in juvenile broadcasting events. A neat novelty provided this year is a miniature telephone set that may be set up and operated within the home from room to room.

An increased interest in amateur palmistry and astrology is evidenced by a parlor demand for crystal balls and gypsy trappings.

THIS national trek back to home recreation has brought far-reaching changes in house architecture and interior decoration. Traditionally a cellar has been a dismal place which housed the furnace and the coal bin. Under stress of emergency it offered space to hang the wet wash. But during the post-1929 rise of game enthusiasm, architects report a large demand for finished-off cellars, specially designed for group entertainment. Even among apartment dwellers, rooms are being furnished with an eye to setting up a table tennis set or a miniature bowling alley.

While the adults have been poaching on the precincts of juvenile pleasure, the youngsters have established their right to playroom space at home and at school. Their interest in practical adaptations of tasks that adults rate drudgery is teaching them useful knowledge in addition to the amusement value. And the love of dressing up and make-believe is as strong as ever, despite the vogue for practicality. Toys are better built than ever before and are dangerproof. Even paint can be licked without fear of tummyaches.

So, with the diminished need for adult "don'ts" and the broadened variety of juvenile playthings, the children are having a fine time. And so are the adults, making their relaxation combine the best features of all ages. The bear market may have put a serious dent in night-clubbing budgets; but the great American public is having a lot of fun staying at home. If you don't think so, visit the toy and game sections of any department store in any city in America this week and next.

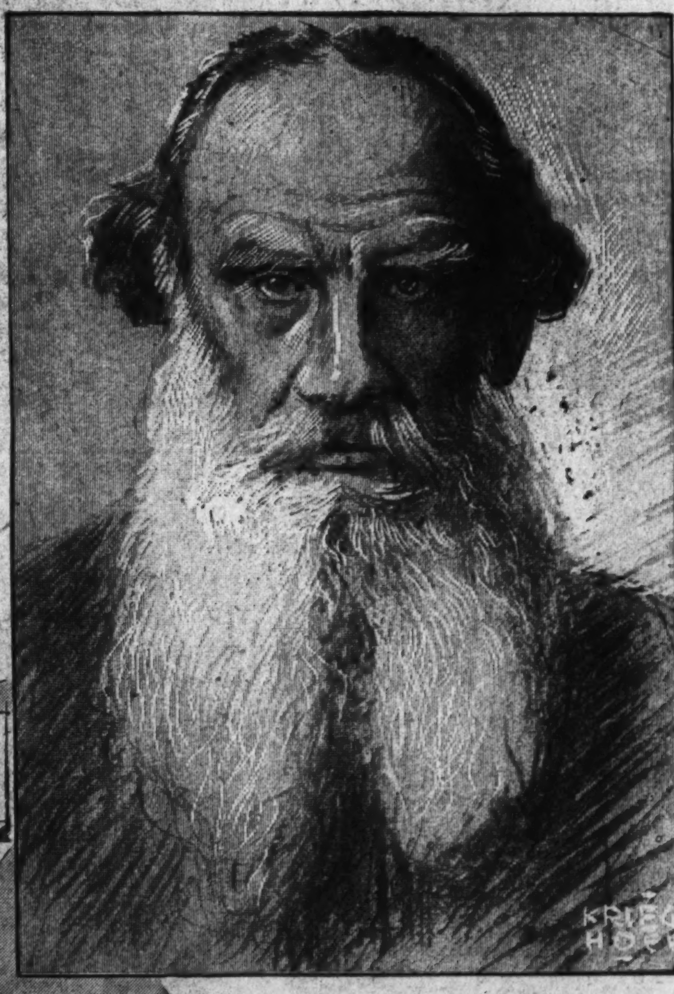
COUNTESS TOLSTOY Goes PRIMITIVE

A room in Count Tolstoy's old home at Yasnaya Polyana, located about fifty miles from Moscow, which today is a museum of Tolstoy relics and is under Soviet supervision

Countess Alexandra Tolstoy

Youngest Daughter of the Noted Russian Philosopher and Writer Follows Her Father's Teachings and Takes Up Life on a Pennsylvania Farm, Tilling the Soil With Her Own Hands



The late Count Leo Tolstoy, distinguished Russian writer and philosopher, who was of noble birth but of humble belief

By Elizabeth Malcome Durham

THE whole world knows how, when old and weak and ailing, Count Leo Tolstoy decided that he would have no more of the luxury he had enjoyed through life, how he packed a small bag and went into voluntary exile, away from the gorgeousness with which his wife, devoted certainly, had tried to surround his last years. The world knows, too, that one daughter alone, his youngest, chose to accompany him, and it was in her arms that Tolstoy died in 1908 in an obscure stationmaster's hut where he had taken refuge during a storm.

Alexandra, Countess Tolstoy, was that daughter, and after the death of her father she returned to Yasnaya Polyana, the Tolstoy estate, from the luxuries of which the Count had fled. Today she does not speak of the years that followed, but one supposes that, caught up in the easy life of the Russian aristocracy, she did as they did—took part in the joyous social affairs of her class, visited Moscow and St. Petersburg, which is now called Leningrad.

THEN came the Russian revolution. Now comes Fate.

For Countess Tolstoy today is earning her bread on a worn-out farm. She is living in a farmhouse at least a hundred years old and possessing no modern conveniences. That farm is several miles from Bryn Mawr, Pa.

How she came to Pennsylvania and the farm is a long story, but one as strange and interesting as the life of her illustrious father.

She does not want visitors. There was a series of letters and telephone calls to her friends in Philadelphia before I could obtain permission to visit the Countess.

"It is not that she is unsocial," explained a friend, "but she is working hard. She has a hard time and at night she is too tired from working all day in the fields to talk."

I took this with a grain of salt. I had met too many titled foreigners who had found America a gold mine and from which they had, in due time, obtained that gold but certainly never before in my recollection by plowing the fields or by hoeing and planting.

But Countess Tolstoy does. How curious a thing is Fate!

Count Tolstoy evolved a philosophy, old and yet new, mystical and yet materialistic, which he spread through his novels. No Russian writer had such universal appeal and his doctrines of the simple life appealed to the Englishman, German, Frenchman, Russian, American, to Judges and soldiers, to the man and the woman in the street, to the old man and the university student.

By hundreds and thousands they visited him at his estate. Yasnaya Polyana, its name, became a household word, and the teachings and novels of Tolstoy were translated into nearly every tongue. His followers were numbered by thousands and tens of thousands, and yet so contrary are the workings of life that the only ones who came into close contact with him who did not cleave to his teachings were his wife and family, nine children out of thirteen born to his wife who grew to manhood and womanhood. At least, none of his children followed his teachings until now, with Countess Alexandra Tolstoy a tiller of the soil.

Briefly, Tolstoy claimed that there was but one means to happiness, to earn your own bread by the sweat of your brow, to plow the long furrow, plant your wheat and corn, reap and harvest it—in other words, to return to the soil, and in so doing, to do evil to no one.

WHEN my visit to his farmer-daughter's new home was at last arranged, it was specified that I should pay my visit after the day's work was done. So it was just before dark that I drove up to the ancient farmhouse.

We were far off the main highway and no sound of traffic disturbed the oncoming evening. Then away off I heard some one coming, bushes being parted, the swishing noise of a person's approach.

Two, shapeless masses were silhouetted against the evening sky. As they came closer, I saw that they were persons who carried on their shoulders great bundles of hay and long rakes. Countess Tolstoy was coming home.

She plodded onward to the barn after a brief nod of greeting. Her companion, whom I afterward learned was a titled refugee who had been with the Countess only a few days, made ready to milk the cow.

When she had put down the hay, she came back, shook my hand and invited me in. She was a heavy woman with iron gray hair drawn back from her square face. Straightforward eyes looked into mine through spectacles. When she spoke, it was with a decided accent, although she had no difficulty in speaking English.

"How did you come here," I asked, "and why do you choose this life?" I motioned toward the fields outside the window.

She smiled quizzically. "I came here to this life," she said, "because I do not want to belong to that big army, the unemployed." then she grew serious. "But the story of how I came here is very long.

"I WAS in Russia, and after the Soviet had decided that my father's estate, Yasnaya Polyana, was to become a national shrine, I was to take care of things there. Then trouble began. The Soviet wanted me to help them—what you call, spread propaganda. Much of it was against the church and I would not do it. They wanted no religion in Russia and that was against my father's teaching. I would not do as they asked."

"It is a wonder they did not imprison you," I said to the Countess, "when you refused to obey their commands."

Her eyes flashed. "They did imprison me. For thirteen months I lay in the Soviet prisons, not knowing what the future would bring me or whether each dawn would spell death."

BUT evidently the Soviet decided that the execution of the daughter of Tolstoy would bring universal condemnation on them, for they freed her at last.

"I realized that I must leave my country," she said sadly. "I did not know how or where I would go. Finally I persuaded the Soviet to give me permission to go to Japan to study the schools there. * * *"

In this she was also following the footsteps of her great father, who had studied various systems of education all over the world in order to choose the best one he wished to educate the peasants on his estate.

"Finally permission was granted," the Countess continued. "With my woman friend and her small daughter I landed in Japan eighteen months ago. Between us we had the equivalent of $50."

"But what did you do?" I queried.

In a matter-of-fact tone she answered: "We made our living. We worked. It was there that my first book about my father was published in Japanese." She got up and lumbered across the floor to the small bookcase, from which she took a small volume. She handed it to me, but when I opened it in the front she took it away from me with a smile. "Not there," she said, turning to the back, where the Japanese version began.

"It has been translated into English," she said, "and will appear in the autumn. From Japan I came to America. I landed in San Francisco and set out on a lecture tour. I was in all the big cities and at many colleges and universities.

"When I was not traveling I was writing. I worked on a series of stories about my stay in prison. I wanted each chapter to be a separate story and yet each one to fit into the main story like a—like a—" She hesitated.

"LIKE a pearl in a necklace," I supplied.

She nodded. "My father and Gandhi exchanged many letters, and I intend to write about that also, but * * *"

"You are writing now?" I asked.

She shook her head in the negative. "Ah, no; now I am working. I am laying up food for the long winter, when I will write, and there is no more work to be done in the fields."

"But," I persisted, "how did you happen to come to Pennsylvania and this farm?"

"I had to be in the East," she said, "because of my lectures. What more natural than the daughter of my father should be on a farm? But I had no money, no farm. Then one of my good friends knew the man who owned this farm. He was not living on it, as he had intended to turn it into a country estate. No one had lived on it for years. Even the pump had fallen down.

"My friend spoke to him about me and he gave us permission to live here and to till the ground. That is all!" she said.

"This farm," I motioned. "Do you do all the work yourself?"

She nodded. "We had to hire some one to do the first plowing, for we had no horse, no plow, but since then we are doing it ourselves. Would you like to look around?"

We walked out on the long, rather rickety porch. In the kitchen now, the other woman was preparing supper. A luscious smell of onions pervaded the air. Down the steps and out where the white chickens scratched, I followed her.

In the ruined barn she had built a shed of three sides to shield the cow from stormy weather.

"Fortunately we have a good springhouse," she said, "as we have no pump and no money to put one in.

"Our days are busy," she continued. "We get up when it is light and work, milk the cow and do the chores. Then we come in and have tea before we go out to do more work."

I WONDERED if her hard physical labor brought her happiness, and I asked her if she was content. I was surprised by the emotion that rang out suddenly from her placid, almost stolid voice.

"Happy? How can I be happy away from my own country? How can I be content when I know Russia is wretched, when I know that a million peasants are being flogged to work every day? Under the Czar there was misery, but under the Soviet life is slavery!"

MR MAN: Beware of "40"

C. T. Revere

That Is the Age When There Is Greatest Danger of Becoming the Third Side of an "Eternal Triangle" With Its Broken Hearts, Financial Loss and Degrading Disrespect, Says New York Broker-Author

By Carol Bird

MUCH has been said about woman's "dangerous age" and her place in the eternal marriage triangle. "The Wife," "The Other Woman"—they are familiar characters. But how about the third point in the triangle—the Man? Precisely what part does he play in the domestic tragedy? Is he responsible for it, or is he drawn into it against his will, and because of the wiles of the woman interloper? Is his extramarital dalliance a happy romance or does it ultimately turn to wormwood?

C. T. Revere, a New York broker, who has written a first novel on the subject, says that man's dangerous age is in his early 40s, when marriage has gone a bit stale and when, bored with domesticity, he yearns for a taste of romance. And he maintains that such straying usually does not have the conventional happy ending, unless, as he adds, "the man in the case finds that one woman in a million to play the role of 'Other Woman.'"

Mr. Revere, member of a New York Stock Exchange firm and writer on economic subjects, is a big, jovial man. But he spoke very seriously of man's place in the triangle in his Broad street office, amid all the paraphernalia of the stock brokerage business.

> MAN'S dangerous age is in the early forties. But it is also something in addition to years. It is a period when domestic life has lost some of its charm and has begun to pall. Just when the home ties begin to weaken and the husband yawns frequently before the fireplace, a new attraction is quite likely to appear upon the scene to shoot a ray of brightness through the monotony.

"Man's dangerous age is something in addition to years," said Mr. Revere. "It is a period when the domestic life has lost some of its charm and has begun to pall. Just when the home ties begin to weaken and the husband yawns frequently before the fireplace, while the wife tucks the children in bed, a new attraction is quite likely to appear upon the scene to shoot a ray of brightness through the monotony.

"ECONOMICS has something to do with it, too. You see, a man in, say, his 40s has a certain amount of financial independence which enables him to stray a bit. A young man cannot afford to indulge in an outside-the-home romance, and he is usually still in the thrall of his first infatuation.

"Now the type of woman who spells danger to the home, because she is certain to attract a bored and wistful husband, is the woman who appeals to and satisfies the masculine ego, one who, as the Spanish say, is 'simpatica.' She is understanding, listens to his plans, his stories about his work, his boyish boasting. She doesn't look or act inattentive as, alas, his wife has so often lately. Can't you see how powerful is her lure? You must remember that from the time that a man reaches the first blush of virile manhood and until he approaches the stage of senility, he is still more or less of a child, a young boy, a veritable baby.

"Spiritually he descends almost to infancy. He constantly craves sympathy and understanding from some beloved woman. In his make-up there is a certain amount of credulity, even gullibility, which makes him desire petting and approbation from some outside source. He is always yearning for it, demanding it.

"And here is the other side of the picture: The wife, who is in daily contact with this male infant, becomes rather bored with his stupidity, and so she will not play up to it. She has her children to care for also, and cannot always spare the time to pamper and coddle this grown-up child of hers. You cannot blame her. A woman is always more mature than a man, even though not in actual years, and a woman grows more mature every day, while a man appears to grow more infantile with the passing of years. A man matures in every other particular, except in what you might call his 'sex-spirituality.'

"When he arrives at an age along in the 40s, and finds to his dismay that he is nothing more than a boresome, tired business man to his wife, and then makes the astounding discovery that he has a certain amount of attraction and even charm for another woman who possesses for him a distinct lure, he is really pretty fair game for any woman. And lost, utterly lost!

"ALL of the women who enter the lives of men at the psychological moment are not designing women—the gold-digger type. I did not attempt to portray this kind of woman, although I did employ in connection with the book a quotation from Ecclesiastes: 'And I find more bitter than death the woman whose heart is snares and nets and her hands as bands.' The male protagonist of my book deliberately set out on an adventure, after the fashion of many other men. A woman did not pursue him in this case; she was not out after him.

"Neither was she a gold-digger. All the gentleman's benevolence was showered on her, without any solicitation on her part. He had, in this impulse of the dangerous age, become suddenly endowed with the desire to give, and he got a thrill out of it. Giving interested him almost as much as the pursuit. He had plenty of money, and to present lovely things to the girl he liked inspired in him a desire to get her reaction of pleasure.

"I think that this matter of generosity, this desire to give and to make the beloved one happy, is a characteristic of the straying impulses of middle age, in which there is so much more of the spiritual than there is of the physical. The latter is much more characteristic of first love. That unselfish desire to give, instead of to take, plays a very small part in the life of youth. Perhaps this generosity, this selflessness of the middle-aged man is due to a subconscious realization that he cannot make the same appeal to his loved one that a handsome youth might, that on his part there must be more of give than take.

Pericles defending Aspasia before his political enemies. Theirs was an example of an unusual "middle age" romance which did not end disastrously

"There is, of course, a certain pathos to this realization that he has, after all, very little to offer a woman besides gifts. And it is just the manifestation of this realization that makes many people say, when they read or hear about love affairs of middle-aged men: 'There is no fool like an old fool.'

"The man, always more romantic than woman, is seeking something to satisfy a spiritual need, but whether or not he finds what he seeks depends entirely on the 'other woman.' He may, in his quest, merely be made the victim of what is known as 'the gold-digger.' On the other hand, the woman he finds may, in the end, be the victim, for a married man, despite his impulse to give, really cannot offer much, not nearly as much as a devoted woman can. In the love triangle the other woman usually has little to gain and much to lose. I did not try to build up a defence for either one of the pair, neither the errant husband nor the other woman. But I did try, in my novel, to portray the masculine reaction in attachments of this kind, from the dawn of the romance to the ultimate 'reign of terror.'

"I found it interesting to analyze and outline first his impulses in the predatory quest, his musings as to its outcome, his occasional periods of timidity, and finally the pull of the infatuation that leads him to cast discretion to the winds.

"THEN it was also interesting to describe the ultimate complications when the husband, after the fashion of all philandering married men, finds the developments of a most troublesome and worrying nature.

"The final stage in all these extramarital attachments is when the man is confronted with the reproaches and the accusations and recriminations of 'the other woman,' who has come to resent her ambiguous position in his life. She has tired of accepting leftovers, has become exasperated at the necessity of playing second fiddle to his family and his domestic obligations.

"Most men in situations of this kind make a desperate effort to keep the affair from their wives. Sometimes they succeed, but there is always that sixth sense which tells wives when there is something amiss. A man acts distrait around the house, and a wife, observing this, knows that something is very wrong indeed. He may lie out of it by telling her that he has business worries, but he cannot keep this up forever. His wife's intuitive sense will not let her be taken in by this alibi.

"Just at this point in his travail two demons appear to him, one during the day, one at night, sometimes both in the dark hours. One is Soliloquy, the other Insomnia. The first is an inner voice which talks to him of fearful consequences and fills him with terror; the other keeps him awake nights and wrecks his nervous system. The deadly combination unfits him for his daily work.

"My thesis in the whole triangle matter is that in an illicit love of this kind, no matter how deep the infatuation may be and no matter what heights it may have reached or how deeply it may have stirred the man, love cannot survive when fear enters the picture. Then the beloved woman becomes 'the dangerous woman,' some one who inspires him with fear, fear of being shot, fear of blackmail, fear of an expose. When this comes to pass he becomes highly neurotic, so does the other woman, as a rule, and the situation is terrible.

"Of course, not all romances which come to men in the 'dangerous forties' are the kind which end in terror for them. The most glorious kinds of love have come to men in their middle life. There was Petrarch and his Laura; Dante and his Beatrice, and Pericles and his Aspasia. Those were unusual romances, and their power and strength depended, as most loves depend, on the man's and woman's mutual consideration and the devotion and understanding of that 'millionth woman.' This millionth woman may make demands, but they are not threats. There is a sincerity and nobility in her attitude toward the man she loves, and this appeal goes to the very subconscious depths of the man and endears the woman to him.

"BUT I contend that the extramarital love game is not worth the effort that goes into it. Adventuring is all right for the professional stranger, but I am not referring to this kind of man. I am discussing the average married man, the one who engages in his first romance outside of marriage, the amateur in matters of this kind. The sort of man I am thinking about is the one who has always lived quietly. He hasn't gone around with other women. But he is getting a little bored with domestic life.

"Whether a man meets and becomes enamored of another woman at this dangerous period in his life depends on the man, how imaginative he is, how romantic, how aggressive and what his opportunities, financial and otherwise, are for him to indulge his yearning for a bit of romance in the drab routine of his days.

"Some woman may come along at just the psychological moment. She may attract him enormously and then his love for her may become more or less of an obsession. He endows her with qualities that place her above all other women. He has reached that point where he has embarked on an adventure that he doesn't want interrupted.

"There is a danger curve in life's highway for most men, a time when they have money and a longing that must, they believe, be satisfied. That is why, for a married man, the other woman is so dangerous. He craves a bit of spice in his life, a little adventure. There is no doubt that man is a predatory animal, and once he gets started on the trail or the quest, it is difficult to steer him off unless he gets scared.

"Romance or no, my advice to married men is to stay by the home fireside, preserve security and forget golden dreams. Better the placid domestic life, even though it may grow tiresome at times."

Connie Mack, venerable old master of baseball, who as pilot of the A's will give the youthful managers of 1933 plenty to worry about when the umpires yell, "Play ball!"

The Chief Baseball Topic for Winter Discussion Is: Will Joe Cronin, Youngest Manager in the Big Leagues, Make Good?---"Youth Versus Old Age" Is the Title of the Coming Season

The youthful Joe Cronin, newly appointed manager of the Washington Senators, as he looks on and off the baseball diamond. Regarded as the sparkplug of his team, he has been a consistent .300 hitter and is one of the best shortstops in the game

"STOVE LEAGUE" Goes Into SESSION

By C. William Duncan

CLARK GRIFFITH'S selection of 26-year-old Joe Cronin as pilot of the Washington Senators means that the battle of Youth versus Experience will be one of the most colorful and interesting sidelights of the 1933 American League campaign.

And it has also set many an old head to wondering if, after all, there is something to the saying that "Youth will be served." The National Stove League, made up of all the Mr. John Fans, will now take this question up for the winter discussion.

Cronin, who only a few years ago was just another infielder struggling to win a regular major-league job, now finds himself at the head of a perpetual pennant contender, the Washington Senators, and it will be up to him to match his wits with Experience, to be found in the persons of Connie Mack, Joe McCarthy, Roger Peckinpaugh and Bill Killefer.

If successful, Joe may be the means of inspiring further this new movement among club owners to intrust their fortunes on the ball field to young blood. He was the third young man to be named a big-league pilot in 1932. Bill Terry, of the Giants, aged 34, was the first of the trio, and Charley Grimm, of the Cubs, the second.

Terry, especially, has a tremendous assignment. He took over the leadership of the Giants in midseason from John J. McGraw, who shares with Connie Mack most of the records held by big-league pilots. McGraw gave failing health as the reason for his retirement and became vice president of the Giants and Terry the active leader of the club on the field.

The team didn't do very well. With a star infield composed of Terry, Critz, Jackson and Vergez, and a capable pitching staff, they were supposed to go places, but they went nowhere instead.

Generally selected to finish one-two-three, they floundered around in the second division during most of the season and finally came in sixth, ahead of the Cardinals, the worst flop in the league, and the Reds.

THE present winter will be Terry's chance to strengthen his club and 1933 will be his first real, full-year test as a pilot. He is depending greatly on Gus Mancuso, catcher, whom he obtained from the Cardinals in a late-autumn deal.

Charley Grimm was born in St. Louis a little more than thirty-three years ago. Thirty-three is considered young for a pilot. There are many star ball players at 33, but the fans consider them veterans and are closely watching for signs of decay.

Grimm took over the management of the Cubs in the heat of the National League pennant chase, Rogers Hornsby became involved in difficulties with the management, and it released him and named the popular Grimm as his successor.

Charley was very successful in the pennant fight, as he came in first, and you can do no better than that. Some of the luster was taken off his achievement, however, when the relentless Yankees slaughtered his club in the World Series, four games to none.

It is rather ironical that the great Walter Johnson should be succeeded by a youth who was headed for the minors a few seasons ago.

In 1930 I asked Johnson, during an interview, to tell me something about young Cronin, who, that year, was blossoming forth as a star after a few mediocre seasons with Pittsburgh and subsequent minor-league service in Johnstown, New Haven and Kansas City. Cronin received an unusual chance, it seemed to me, when he was purchased by a big-league club in 1928 when hitting only 245 for Kansas City, a double A ball club.

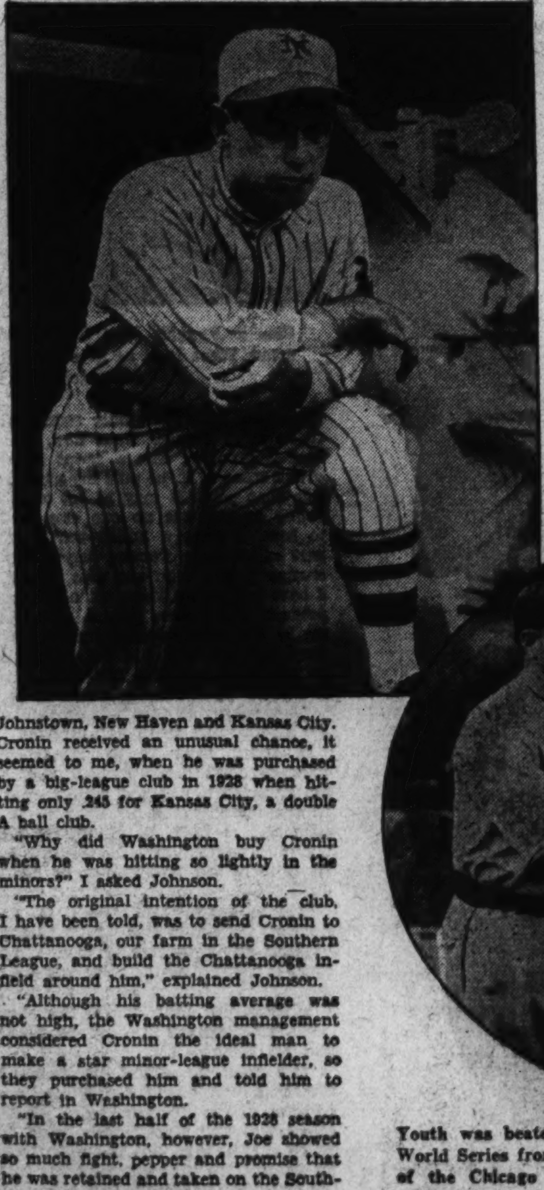
"Why did Washington buy Cronin when he was hitting so lightly in the minors?" I asked Johnson.

"The original intention of the club, I have been told, was to send Cronin to Chattanooga, our farm in the Southern League, and build the Chattanooga infield around him," explained Johnson.

"Although his batting average was not high, the Washington management considered Cronin the ideal man to make a star minor-league infielder, so they purchased him and told him to report in Washington.

"In the last half of the 1928 season with Washington, however, Joe showed so much fight, pepper and promise that he was retained and taken on the Southern training trip the following season. In 1929 he fielded spendidly and boosted his batting average to .282.

"This season Joe has really been the sparkplug of my ball club," said Johnson during our 1930 chat. "Joe Judge, Sam Rice and Sam Jones, the three veterans, were responsible for our getting off to a great start in this race and I want to give due credit to them



The news of the appointment of Bill Terry, star first baseman of the Giants, as John McGraw's successor came as a surprise to many followers of baseball, all of whom are anxious to see him make good

"But Cronin has been our real powerhouse. He is the best shortstop in baseball today and is a real inspiration to the club because of his gameness and fighting qualities. He never stops fighting, regardless of how far behind we may be. I have placed him in fourth position in the batting order and there is where he belongs, because he is at his best at the plate when men are on the bases." Cronin justified Johnson's faith in him by driving out 203 hits in 1930 and compiling the splendid average of .346.

Joe's progress at Washington will be watched intently and the fans will take delight in "second guessing" Griffith on his choice, especially if the Senators finish in the second division.

There is still another angle to the appointment of Cronin. He will find among his competitors another man who, when a youth of 27, was named manager of the Senators. Cronin may well hope for the success that followed the original boy manager, Bucky Harris, now pilot of the Detroit Tigers.

Harris has had an extremely colorful career. A good ball player, but not a star of the ability of Cronin, he was selected as manager of the Washington club in 1924 and won a pennant and a world title. He repeated his league success in 1925, but lost the World Series to Pittsburgh.

Despite the responsibility of managing his club in the big series of 1924, Harris pounded out eleven hits in the seven games, and nearly all of them, you will recall, were most timely. The "big moment" for Bucky was in the last game of the 1924 series, when he picked Walter Johnson to pitch in the pinch and Walter came through. Here is what Harris says about it:

"Loose-jointed and lumbering, he ambled to the center of the diamond. More than 35,000 persons, including the President of the United States, Mrs. Coolidge and high Government and diplomatic officials, joined in the cheers that drowned the announcer's megaphoned message: 'Johnson now pitching for Washington.'

"It was the beginning of the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series between the Washington Americans and the New York Giants in Washington. The score was 3 to 3. The game count for the series was the same. This, then, was the contest upon which the world's baseball championship hung. And I staked my hopes and, perhaps, my reputation as a manager upon Walter Johnson.

"Nearly every person in that vast crowd, from President Coolidge down to the smallest boy, wanted to see the great pitcher win. Their cheers, in one of the most spontaneous outbursts in the history of the game, showed that. But some of them, I am sure, while hoping for the best, feared the worst. I was supremely confident, however, that Walter would hold the Giants, and that if we could get him a run we would win the game and the world's championship.

"In fact, I planned the night before to use Johnson in just such a situation, should it arise. Curly Ogden was slated to start the game, make way for George Mogridge, with Fred Marberry in reserve and Johnson saved for the big emergency.

"Cold reasoning, not sentiment, dictated such a program. Johnson was our best pitcher, the leading twirler in the American League. True, the Giants had beaten him twice, but it didn't seem in the cards they could turn the trick again—if he was right. He told me he felt fine before the game. When he warmed up I knew he had all his stuff. The Giants soon realised it, too.

"JOHNSON had that vast throng in an almost continuous uproar as he mowed down the New York batters. When he fanned George Kelly, after purposely passing Young in the ninth, I felt like joining in the cheers. Again, in the eleventh, he repeated the performance. Then I knew my confidence had not been misplaced. I saw the world's championship within our grasp.

"Muddy Ruel carried the baseball title over the plate in the next inning on Earl McNeely's two-bagger. Then the Griffith Stadium became a bedlam. Cheers crashed over the field. Hats, coats and cushions rained about me when I met Ruel as he crossed the plate. We raced to the clubhouse with a jubilant pack of fans at our heels. There the boys were singing and shouting. I was so dazed I don't remember whether I joined them or not. Probably I did. Realization that I had led a club to victory in what has been called the greatest World Series in the history of the game hadn't struck home yet.

"Not once that afternoon had I thought of the prestige or money that would go to the victors. It was just a ball game to me, a contest for which to fight every inch of the way and to win if that were possible. This was the attitude of all our players while on the field in the championship series and the American League campaign, too. From the opening of the season I had preached that our job was to do each day's work to the best of our ability and to let tomorrow and yesterday take care of themselves. If we lost a game we didn't worry and hold useless post mortems. We tried to profit by our mistakes and let it go at that.

"And now the season was over and I was manager of the world's champions at 27 years of age. Even with the Washington players rejoicing, the congratulations and the shouts of the joy-maddened mob outside, I couldn't realize my good fortune. Six years before I had been working in a coal mine. Only five years previous I had come to the Washington club as a green major-league recruit.

"I LEFT the clubhouse still in a near-daze and went to my hotel. Friends dragged me to the lobby. There a seething crowd was celebrating Washington's victory. It began to dawn on me just how much the triumph meant to the people of Washington. A boy in the crowd shouted: 'Hurrah for Bucky!' When the cheer was taken up I had to blink my eyes and run the back of my hand across them. It came away wet.

"Accompanied by several friends, I got in a taxicab later to join a parade of triumph. By a coincidence, there was a sticker which read 'Bucky' pasted on the windshield. No one in the crowd recognized me by this, for there were hundreds of other taxis so labeled. Finally we were held up by a traffic policeman who declared no autos could pass. Our driver argued the matter.

"'Only the President can get by here!' the cop declared as if to wind up the argument.

"'Man, I got Bucky Harris in this bus!' the driver came back.

"'Why didn't you say so at first?' the traffic man protested. 'On your way.' And he let us through. Then I knew I had reached the top in the baseball world."

Thus endeth the story of Bucky Harris, the original boy manager of the century.

Some Actors Are Carefully Built Up by Directors, While Others Leap to Great Heights by the "Stealing" Process

"Please MAKE ME A STAR"

"My people thought I should go into the British Navy," said Charles Laughton, as he sat in his costume in the Paramount Cafe and obligingly accepted the food ordered by a departed customer

Charlie Ruggles says that whenever a producer sees a script with a drunk scene in it he gets the job and hopes some day "when producers see a sober part they'll think of me"

Onslow Stevens believes in doing one's work as vell as possible, and adds: "Let success come along when it will and surprise you"

By Alice L. Tildesley

SCREEN stars are made in various ways. Some of them come direct from triumphs on the stage and step from fame to fame, as did Ruth Chatterton and Helen Hayes.

Some are carefully built up by that process known as "grooming for stardom," smaller parts yielding to bigger ones, program films growing to featured ones. Witness Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer and Janet Gaynor.

And some there are who steal pictures by virtue of personality and take stardom from the hands of an insistent public.

Clara Bow was like that, and Marie Dressler; Greta Garbo did it with her first picture, Clark Gable with his first good part, and Wally Beery is a champion picture stealer after all these years.

THIS season we have among our most skillful film hijackers, Charles Laughton, Onslow Stevens and Charlie Ruggles. Not that Charlie Ruggles is a newcomer to the screen; he is included because he can't seem to stop walking off with pictures.

"But I don't know any rules for success, my dear," exclaimed Charles Laughton. "I wish I did and I should follow them immediately. I lie awake at night, wondering how to succeed, and when I find out I shall set about it, I promise you.

"Go away now, and don't ask silly questions."

He sat in the Paramount Cafe, a brown bathrobe over his Nero costume, a wax Roman nose over his own more interesting feature, his brown hair curled into ringlets and loops above his fine blue eyes.

"I look sinister, do I? Oh, but I'm not sinister at all! I'm unhappy. My wife's gone back to England. She sails today and I shan't see her for weeks—maybe months. I don't know why I let her go. I didn't know it would make the world so empty."

A distracted waitress appeared with a tray. Some one had ordered the food and gone out. Was it Mr. Laughton's?

"No, it's not mine, but I'll eat it. It looks very nice. Don't fret, my child. I'm sure you are doing very well, indeed. No tea. No coffee. I can't drink with this nose—it gets into the cup. Most unfortunate.

"My people thought I should go into the British Navy, but I didn't care for a sailor's life. I had my mind on the stage. But I had an idea as to how one got there.

"THE family owned hotels, so I set about learning the business. I clerked for a short time at Claridge's, but the war came and put an end to that. I joined the army.

"But I got something from my clerkship. I watched the people who registered at my desk. I learned to know men. The madman in 'Devil and the Deep' is based partly on a man I know. That hollow, hearty laugh of his is a sure sign of tragedy somewhere underneath. Whenever I hear it, I look at the man who laughs. I know that something is wrong.

"The change from sanity to insanity was not difficult. It's simply a change of thought and a change of rhythm. Everything is rhythm. You and I sit here and talk about nothing in particular and our hearts beat so-and-so-and-so-and-so"—tapping monotonously on the table to illustrate the quiet, regular stroke. "But suddenly I mention some one you like very much, or some one you do not like at all, and your rhythm changes. It begins to go like this—So-and so-so-so! So-and so-so-so! and it grows faster and more irregular and your breath changes and your eyes change.

"Acting is all done from the inside, too.

"That's why it's so interesting. You can work out any mood or any character, any reaction, any emotion, all in rhythm.

"That's enough about me. I think I shall interview you. Listen carefully and answer me:

" 'Are all actors dumb?' "

ONSLOW STEVENS, who is credited with stealing "Once in a Lifetime," is 26 years old; two inches over six feet in height; carries himself like a soldier and has dreamy golden-brown eyes.

"But you must be willing to wait for success," he protests, "to put your mind on doing your work as well as you can and finding ways of doing it better all the time. Let success come along when it will and surprise you.

"I hope it's coming to me. But if not, I'll have had the fun of working toward it.

"My people have always been artists of one kind or another. Edward Onslow Ford, of England, was a great-uncle of mine. He was a sculptor, and a statue he made of Henry Irving as Hamlet is considered very fine. My grandfather, Frederick Stevenson, was well known for years as a composer of choral music. 'A Salutation of the Dawn' is one of his better known works.

"So I began life with the artist's attitude toward it, if you know what I mean.

"Even when I signed up for the army at the age of 14—that was in 1920—I knew I would some day be an actor. But I was restless. I couldn't stand the idea of four walls of a schoolroom for years and years. I was too tall for my age. My legs and arms needed activity.

"I was first in the infantry, then in the air service, then in cavalry and machine gun corps. I was sent first to Texas, then to the Philippines and later to China.

"After my honorable discharge from the army at the end of four years, the Pasadena Community Playhouse offered me a chance at acting. I played more than 150 different roles in the five years I was with them, but it didn't take me five years to realize that acting isn't easy.

"I read plays. I studied stage technique. I talked with players. I discussed my ideas and his with Gilmore Brown, head of the Playhouse and the greatest director of this or any other age.

"I've been in pictures so short a time that I'm a bit shy about declaring that this is so and that isn't—but some day I hope to be the director of a new form of motion picture.

"It seems to me that music, the pulse of all creation, hasn't been sufficiently stressed. Reinhardt realizes that it should be the basis of drama, and some of our more modern directors of pictures are using the idea—Ernst Lubitsch and Rouben Mamoulian, for example.

"But my hope is to base the rhythm of all drama on its proper musical background. Look at the animated cartoons. No one but those who make them realize why they have such a wide appeal. It's their rhythmical background!

"Some day I shall have my own company, my own theatre, and I'll produce motion pictures with musical foundations. They won't be opera, you know, but the results will be stronger, better drama than we've ever had before."

"If you hope to be a successful comedian, beware of specializing!" warned Charlie Ruggles, blue eyes beaming under a tootsie-roll curl achieved by the studio hairdresser.

"Specializing may be a fine thing for doctors, or even for other actors, but nobody wants to see a comedian do the same thing forever. The attitude is likely to be: 'Oh, is Whoozis in that film? I've seen him. Let's go somewhere else.'

"My chief fight at the present time is against playing any more drunks. I did a drunk that they thought funny some time ago, and pretty soon I had to do more drunks. Until now, whenever a producer sees a script with a drunk scene in it, he puts my name beside that part. It may be fat or thin, young or old, but no one else occurs to him. I have a hunch that if the part called for a woman, they'd simply change it to a man and give it to me. I have just talked them out of a drunk scene in my present picture. They put me in the thing because they saw the word 'drunk,' but now we're working on the scene and I've persuaded them it will be much funnier if I'm sober.

"It may get so that when producers see a sober part they'll think of me.

"I think most people are clean-minded, don't you? Only the filthy are attracted to dirt, and since they are in the minority the best way to deal with dirt is to let it die of its own accord, not stimulate it by banning the show or calling attention to it artificially.

"I'm a native son. Born in Los Angeles. Father in the wholesale drug business and I worked for him. I was to be a doctor, but the stage got me.

"NERVOUS men make the best comedians. You can't be placid and get laughs.

"The most important possession I can think of is imagination, if you hope to be an actor. You must know people, of course, and the various ways in which they behave, but you must have an imagination that will take you into the places in their minds that you never see.

"Observation is a great aid, too. And so is memory. You play the same sort of scene many times, but each scene must differ from the ones you've done before. You think over the part given you. It says, usually, if it's meant for me, 'John picks up his glass.'

"You've picked up, as a rough estimate, sixty-nine glasses in the last six months. How can you do this in a new way? Your mind clicks back to the day at the high school banquet when Slim Doakes started to pick up a glass of water and it slid along the table and into the professor's lap. And there you are!

"Comedy keeps you alert and interested, or it ought to do so.

"I don't know how a person who begins as a screen comedian ever learns his business. I began on the stage, where you get audience reaction. I learned what laughs are all about by experimenting. You can't do that on the screen. Once the scene is in the can, you're helpless.

"It's a cinch to be funny when the situation is prepared for you, when the audience has been told that you are funny and is ready to laugh no matter what you do. They see you and begin to chuckle. 'Oh, he's funny! Ha-ha-ha!' At anything. Or nothing.

"But when you are thrown on cold into a spot in a dull show and told 'Now go on and be funny!' that's something else again.

"Getting on the screen did me one favor, though. For years I had a place on Long Island. Lived there while I was on the New York stage. Neighbors knew me. Thought no more of me than they thought of the brokers and business men and doctors who lived there, too. 'Ruggles? Yes, he lives on the hill.'

"But with my first picture, I became a celebrity. Yes, what do you think of that? The same man, the same neighborhood. 'Ruggles? Yes he's a famous picture actor.' No, I don't get it. Do you?"

And there you have three ways to become screen-famous.

"WHAT, NO PUTTER!" by Verne Wickham

J. Hannibal Morrell Followed the Advice of His Golf Pro, Almost With Fatal Results, Until His Caddie Herman Got Into the Game

IF YOU imagine that a fat man in a tuxedo with a golf club in his hand didn't upset the dignity of the Hotel Del Monte dining room, then you were not there the night that J. Hannibal Morrell stalked to his table carrying a neat silver-plated putter. Society matrons quickly adjusted lorgnettes. Children of the rich laughed out loud and adults smothered their chuckles behind menu cards.

Mrs. J. Hannibal Morrell followed at a respectable distance behind him. She was hoping that she wouldn't be identified with the man and the golf club, although it was painful but true that years ago a certain ceremony had made J. Hannibal Morrell and Jane Winsten Fuller one. Years of expensive living and rich food had made them two again.

The man bluntly thwarted the head waiter's attempt to remove the golf stick from his hand and laid the thin-bladed putter across the dining table.

Mrs. J. Hannibal sat down in a flurry.

Hannibal sat down as quickly as an oversized waistline would permit. His circumference, like the size of the official golf ball, had grown considerably during the last two years, only he couldn't blame it on the U. S. G. A.

"Ridiculous! Positively ridiculous!" she stormed. "And two years ago you flatly refused to bring Petie down to dinner at St. Andrews." Petie, of course, was her lap Pomeranian.

J. Hannibal meekly drew a crumpled telegram out of his dinner coat pocket and handed it to his wife.

His wife read the wire. It said, in effect:

"Will arrive June 15. Get ready to take a beating, you old bear." It was signed by Annabelle Morrell, the family's favorite and spoiled niece, who, as you may have guessed, was named for Hannibal.

"And how in the name of goodness does this explain your apparent lack of sanity in carrying that golf club?" inquired the woman as the amused waiter tried to get the soup plate on the table without shoving the putter across the table and jabbing Mrs. J. Hannibal Morrell amidships, an accident which his experience told him would not have been for the best.

The dessert was on the table and J. Hannibal was still trying to make his explanation sound convincing to the analytical mind of his wife.

"Do you mean to sit there and tell me that you have to carry that thing all the time?" she asked.

"Yes, Jim says that is the secret of the trick."

THE trick was really a kick-back from Jim Davis' football days in college. Football coaches had often resorted to this scheme to break their teams from fumbling. Each member of the team was given his own personal football and given instructions to carry it night and day until the big game. The continual handling of the ball under all conditions usually cured the fumbling. The lads became so used to handling the pigskin that they never dropped it. It became a part of them.

Jim also called to his aid an established fact that a man who continually carries a cane becomes very accurate in its use. He is able to swing it and point it as he would his finger. Jim's plan was to combine the theory of the football coaches with the established fact concerning a man with a cane, and J. Hannibal Morrell was to continually carry his putter until the day of his match with Annabelle.

"Your putting is bad. Good putting will beat any golfer. You'll find this stunt will improve your putting," he had explained to Hannibal when the portly gentleman had gone to the famous professional that afternoon for help.

Hannibal's confidence in Jim Davis was as well known in golf circles as his two pet aversions—namely, women or children on a golf course.

HIS aversion to kids on a golf course was because, as caddies, they made him nervous and the other kids always picked up his golf balls before they stopped rolling, which explained why virtually all his golf was played on his own private golf course. As for the women—they just didn't belong on golf courses. Hannibal took his golf seriously. Golf was a man's game. A gentleman's game and no place for women or kids.

To be beaten by a woman was his idea of the most humiliating thing that could happen to mortal man and yet it had happened to him.

Four years ago Annabelle had beaten him! They had started out on a nine-hole round over Hannibal's private course. He was so sure that nothing in skirts could beat him that he had foolishly told her she could have a year at Cedarcrest, an exclusive girls' school in the East, if she beat him.

Annabelle went to Cedarcrest four years!

Now, she was coming back for another golf game. He faintly remembered some sort of promise of a trip around the world for Annabelle any time she managed to beat him. He knew she remembered. The wire proved it.

Hannibal tried to appear as nonchalant as possible as they left the table and walked through the crowded lobby to the cardroom, where they were to take on their hated rivals, the J. Stark Simpsons, in their evening cent a point bridge game.

He spent a fitful night. The putter which lay alongside of him caused him no end of trouble. The hotel bed was too narrow. Even the extra width of the golf shaft made sleeping uncomfortable. The cold steel of the blade sent shudders up his back, but he stuck to his bargain until time for his morning bath.

He propped the stick up in the corner of the bathroom before he ducked back of the curtains for his shower. In a few moments he came blustering out from under the shower and reached for his putter.

It was gone!

It was an hour later before he finally talked his wife into giving him his club.

"All right, you can have the club, but I warn you. You'll eat and sleep alone from now on. I never married a golf stick, although I have thought at times that it might have been wiser," she told him.

ONE afternoon shortly after Annabelle's wire had disturbed the peaceful married life of the J. Hannibal Morrells, Hannibal started out for an early evening round of golf. He was becoming accustomed to the putter and at Jim's suggestion was going to play the complete nine holes with just the putter.

He found, to his surprise, that he scored a par on the first hole. His drive was almost as long as he ever hit with a wooden club. His second shot was straight and hence missed the big trap where he usually sliced his second shot. He ran his approach up to within two feet of the cup and sank the putt.

He took a 5 on the next hole. A 4 on the next. That was better than he had ever done with all his clubs. He took a 4 on the fourth hole and started back toward the ninth hole well under his usual score.

As he started to make his second shot on the fifth hole, he stopped his swing to gaze belligerently over the hedgerow that ran parallel with the fairway. Over the top of the hedge he could see the heads of a gang of boys. They were walking in the same direction that Hannibal was headed and he knew just their destination. It was that patch of tall grass to the right of the fairway. The boys knew that spot. It was always good for at least a dozen golf balls each trip, for Hannibal never missed it. His stubby slice for the green usually landed there. By actual count he had planked 1089 golf balls into the mire of grass in the last year. The boys had retrieved 1080 of them.

Judging his speed and direction far better than he ever judged mashie or niblick distance, J. Hannibal slunk along the inside of the hedge. He surprised the gang as they reached the end of the hedgerow when he thundered into their midst, grabbing first at a tow head and then a ragged coat collar. He missed, but scattered the urchins. They flew in all directions—except one ragged lad who stood still and looked quizzically at Hannibal.

"Hey there, you! What are you doing?" thundered Hannibal.

"Huntin'," meekly answered the boy, who was a tow-headed kid of about 10.

"Hunting what?" asked Hannibal.

"Aw, just huntin'," answered the boy.

Suddenly Hannibal spotted the golf ball in the lad's hand.

"Uh huh. I thought so. You're stealing golf balls just like the rest of the whelps. Give me that," he stormed.

"Sure. Here's a lot more," and the kid dumped at least a dozen of Hannibal's pet brand of golf balls out on the grass. "What are they?" he asked.

J. Hannibal sat down on a rock and wiped his brow.

"What are they? What are they? Do you mean to tell me you don't know that those things are golf balls? They cost me a dollar apiece. You're stealing when you take them away," he thundered.

"I'm not stealing. I found them in the grass. I don't want 'em. If they are yours take 'em and keep your shirt on." The boy started away.

"Here, wait a minute. Don't you play golf?"

"What?"

"I said, do you play golf?"

"What's golf?" asked the boy.

"Don't you know what golf is?"

"Naw."

THEN followed a half-hour conference between J. Hannibal Morrell, a big business executive and president of a baking company, makers of pretzels, and Herman, the urchin. The lad was an orphan who lived in a shack down below the State highway. Friendly truck drivers and the caretaker of the Lakeside Country Club helped the kid along. His trip to the Morrell estate that afternoon had been at the request of a gang of boys he had met on the highway. They told him he could pick up some extra change finding golf balls on the Morrell estate and selling them at the public course in the city.

The frank way in which the lad talked, and his honesty, appealed to J. Hannibal, who hitherto had placed all boys in the same class as Petie, his wife's dog—nuisances.

At the end of the conference a strange partnership was made.

Herman Bannon had obtained the exclusive golf ball right for the Morrell estate. His contract called for a dime apiece for all returned golf balls, in return for which he was to keep the estate clear of all other boys.

There was just one string on the deal. The boy was never to play golf.

"If I ever catch you with a golf stick in your hand I'll tan your pants good," Hannibal told him. "You just hunt the golf balls and turn them over to me. I'll do the playing."

THE day Annabelle was due to arrive from the East, Hannibal arrived at his office promptly at 8 o'clock. He was swinging the putter as if it were a part of him. He walked through the outer office. The employes had become accustomed to the sight of their boss carrying his golf club and kept busy at their work.

His trustworthy putter was on the desk in front of him as he worked.

"Of all the dirty, lowdown tricks—Annabelle—you—you——" he sputtered, as he grabbed his beloved putter

From the street below him came the fast-approaching wail of a fire siren. He rushed to the window with his club in his hand and, throwing it open, he stuck his head out of the window for a better look at the fire engine. Since childhood Hannibal had never been able to resist the thrill of a fire run and he leaned far out to watch the big red wagons come thundering up the street.

A flapping awning bothered him and he reached out to grab it. He let out a squeal of pain as his magic putter slipped out of his hands. It dropped to the awning below, slid down the canvas and landed square in the bed of a truck that was passing.

Then J. Hannibal Morrell staged a one-man riot. He howled and waved his arms frantically, yelling to high heaven and the truck driver to stop, but the truck and his golf club sailed around the corner without slackening its speed.

THE excited driver of the oncoming fire truck, however, saw his waving arms and heard his yell of pain. With a screeching of brakes he brought the big red wagon to a stop under the window.

"Where's the fire?" he yelled as a dozen firemen dropped off the truck.

"Fire—fire? Hell! I've lost my golf club," thundered Hannibal. "Stop that truck. I've lost my golf club. Hey there, copper, will you stop that truck at the corner——?" The rest of his thundering was lost in the exhaust of the truck as the fire wagon moved toward the corner, where the cop was waiting impatiently.

Hannibal broke into his outer office like a cyclone.

"Hey, Jimmy! Run down into the street and find out where that truck is going!" he yelled.

"What truck?" inquired the office boy as he reached for his cap.

"The truck that was passing the window. The red one. Any truck—but hurry. Never mind the hat. Scram!" and he grabbed the office boy and almost threw him out of the door. Then he turned and yelled at the telephone girl, the one with the plump calves. "Telephone for my car. I'll need it in a minute."

Hatless and still in his shirt sleeves, he followed the boy down the stairs and into the street.

He waddled up to the corner and found the office boy and the cop in a heated argument.

He grabbed the cop by the collar and swung him around, and when J. Hannibal Morrell grabs a cop by the collar you can bet all the balls in the water hazard that he's mad. He was as cut up as a dub's golf ball and looked it.

"Where did that truck go?" he demanded.

"Say, you two, wait a minute. That's what the kid's been jabbering. There have been a hundred trucks here today. Tell me which one."

"The red one," yelled Hannibal. "The one with a golf club in it."

"With a what? Man, I don't have time to see what's in them buggies when they slide by. Take your time and let's get this right."

Hannibal slowed down, wiped his brow and waded in again. "Did you notice a red truck go by here just when the fire department stopped down at the Plaza Building?"

"Yes, Moran came sizzling by about then and I had to highball him out of the way," replied the cop.

"Who's Moran?" demanded Hannibal.

"Driver for the Red Arrow Truck Company. Running loads between here and West Port."

Hannibal grabbed his office boy and started back to his office, after yelling something that sounded like "Thanks" to the puzzled cop, who was busy untangling the traffic that blocked his corner.

Back in the office he yelled instructions to his staff.

"Marie, phone the Red Arrow Trucking Company and find out what truck Moran is driving. Where it is going and where we can get it. Jimmy, you look up the Red Arrow Company in the business directory and find out who their president is." Hannibal never dealt with lesser officials than presidents.

Just as Marie completed her long distance call to the trucking company, Jim found who the president was and Mrs. J. Hannibal Morrell walked into the office.

Hannibal dropped the phone on the desk and dashed to the one at the switchboard. Jimmy followed with the open pages of the book stuck under the boss' nose and Mrs. Hannibal Morrell sat down suddenly.

"Well, business must be good. Hello, Hannibal, dear."

"Huh!" he snorted and then yelled over the telephone. "Hello, is this the Red Arrow Trucking Company? Where's Moran? Where's my golf club and where is the red truck?"

Evidently the man on the other end of the wire thought he had been connected with every number on the West Port exchange, for there was no reply.

"Hey, are you there? Where's my golf club——" he howled into the phone.

"Sorry, brother, but you've got the wrong number. Sorry, good-by," and the phone clicked in Hannibal's ear.

"The damn fool! Marie, get that number again. Jimmy, who is the president?"

Mrs. J. Hannibal Morrell took a hand in the proceedings at that moment.

"Hannibal, dear, Annabelle is here. She is waiting at the station——"

"That's it, pile on my troubles. What do I care about Annabelle? The car is out front. Go get her, but get out of here, I'm busy."

His wife left and Hannibal waded into the maze of telephones and city directories again.

MARIE had the Red Arrow on the wire again and at Hannibal's request inquired about the lost putter. After a little explaining, she made the man on the phone understand what had happened.

"Moran isn't due here until 8 o'clock tonight. I'll check his load when he gets here. He's got a lot of stops before he checks in and he'll probably discover the club if it is on his truck. You can call then and we may have some news for you," he said and Marie relayed the message to Hannibal.

"All right. Hang up. That's all we can do there. Jimmy, what's the president's name?"

"Mr. Sturms, of Riverside Drive. Marie has his number."

"Fine. Make a note of it and I'll call him from the house tonight. Marie, you stay here and ring me the minute that truck driver phones in," and Hannibal threw on his coat.

"Where's my car? I'm going home," and he stormed out of the office to go to the curb below, where he paced up and down for a half hour waiting for Annabelle, his wife and his car.

On the ride home Hannibal was so preoccupied with his own troubles that he didn't hear all of Annabelle's chatter. Gayly she told of her last year at school and he managed to hear enough to realize that the girl remembered the wager of a game of golf for the trip around the world, and Hannibal shuddered, for in these times the cost of a trip around the world was something—particularly with pretzels on a falling market. He heard enough more of her conversation to establish these facts: The girl had won the intercollegiate championship, she needed a new wardrobe for the trip and figured that went with the trip, she had taken a course of lessons and had been shooting in the low 80s the last few months.

Hannibal's best score was an 85 and that made just last week with the aid of the magic putter. The putter idea had cut five strokes off his score and promised to do more in time, but the match was tomorrow—and now he had lost his putter!

Dinner that evening consisted of five courses and Hannibal's many trips to the lower hall to inquire of the butler if the telephone had rung. He defied any of Annabelle's questions concerning his queer behavior and had instructed his wife to tell her nothing about the loss of the magic putter.

BY THE time they had played two holes of their match for a trip around the world, Hannibal was 2 down. Minus his magic putter and with his ears ringing with Annabelle's very business-like remarks concerning the type of stateroom she wanted, which line she intended to make her trip on and what stop-overs she wanted to make, Hannibal had blown higher than a kite on those two holes.

At the third tee he tore off his sweater, handed it to Herman, who had been trotting along back of the match, and went into action.

His second shot went into a trap!

Hannibal picked a niblick out of his golf bag and waded down into the trap. His club dug deep into the sand and what looked like a small explosion took place in the trap. Sand and ball landed on the green together and J. Hannibal came up into the light of day spitting sand and swearing.

HE WAS digging the sand out of his eyes when he stumbled over Annabelle's golf bag and sticks she had laid on the side of the green. His pudgy legs got tangled up in brassies, niblicks and putters and he went sprawling.

"Oh! Unk, I'm so sorry" said the girl, choking back a laugh.

Hannibal got slowly to his feet.

"Looks like you could have laid that bag down somewhere else on this 100 acres," he snorted.

Then he saw it!

Mixed up in that jumble of golf sticks was his magic putter!

He let out a squeal that sounded like the wail of an asthmatic coyote.

"Wh-a-a-a!" The shrill cry of exultation echoed through the trees and so startled the hens of the Sunnyside Chicken Farm, which bounded the ninth fairway, that production for the day increased 50 per cent.

"Of all the dirty, lowdown tricks—Annabelle—— You——" he sputtered as he grabbed his beloved putter.

"What are you yelling about?" said the girl.

"That putter. You hid it. You stole it. I didn't even think a woman golfer could stoop that low. No principle. Don't know what fair play or sportsmanship is. Dirty trick. I'm ashamed of you and all for a trip around the world. Well, if you get it you won't get a return ticket." J. Hannibal was well riled up.

"Unk, I don't know what you are raving about. I never noticed your putter was in my bag. I don't——"

"Now, don't try to lie out of it. You—you—— I know. You thought it was a smart trick. I ought to wrap this putter right around—around—your pleated skirt. It's my putt. Now, keep quiet."

He waggled the familiar putter with ease and hit the ball. It rolled straight into the cup. He let out a yell of delight.

"There you are, miss. That's what this putter will do and you were lowdown enough to steal it. Now try and get down in two putts."

ANNABELLE tried, but the ball refused her and she three-putted to lose the hole. J. Hannibal was just 1 down.

He stalked down the fourth fairway without a word. His drive was off the fairway and he trailed its marks through the sand at the side of the fairway and found it perched on a small mound of sand. The green was 135 yards away. He fished around in his clubs and selected a mashie.

Annabelle and Herman stood on the edge of the green. The hole was a one-shotter of about 200 yards and the girl was almost home with a brassie. Hannibal had made just sixty-five yards with his drive. He slashed at the ball with his mashie and the ball moved about two feet nearer the green. One more attempt and he would have to putt. Again the ball was perched on a mound of sand.

"Huh! I'll show you," he grunted at the ball and grabbed his magic putter. Annabelle, seeing the selection of club, held back a laugh with her hand.

He waggled the beloved club with ease, and with a smooth swing that came as the result of weeks of fondling that putter he hit the ball. It sailed low and straight for the green, hit the fairway short of the protecting trap, ran across the sand and onto the green, where it settled down for a short run to the flag. It stopped within a foot of the hole.

Then J. Hannibal Morrell did a strange thing. He stood ankle deep in the sand of his private golf club and without shame on his face or fear in his heart—kissed his putter!

Annabelle choked back her laughter and tried to putt.

After she had made three attempts to coax the ball into the hole from the edge of the green she conceded Hannibal his short putt and walked off the green. The match was square.

The two golfers moved down the fifth fairway with Herman trotting in their wake. The rest of the match was a duplicate of the fourth hole. Hannibal would miss a shot and then save his hide with his putter. He dropped a long putt on eight for a halved hole and they reached the ninth green all even. The trip around the world was to be settled on that green.

Hannibal, strangely enough, was on the green in the same number of strokes as was the girl. She putted first and the ball stopped on the very lip of the cup. Hannibal just had room to make the putt.

He petted the blade of the putter as he walked along the line of putt. He dropped the blade of the familiar club to the grass back of the ball and then with a smooth, easy stroke sent the ball kicking into the cup.

"Try to double-cross me and steal my putter, will you?" he yelled with glee as the ball dropped into the cup. "That beat you and serves you right for pulling such a lowdown trick. But how did you get that putter and who told you about it?" he stormed.

"I don't know what you are raving about, uncle. I never saw that putter until you found it in my golf bag," answered the girl.

"MR. MORRELL," said Herman as he walked onto the green. "Can I speak to you a minute?"

"Yes, yes, what is it?"

"It is about the club. Moran, the truck driver, gave it to me last night when he stopped by my shack to leave me some busted loaves of bread. He didn't know where it came from, but said it wasn't part of his load and I could have it. I brought it up here this morning but got scared when I saw you coming and so I stuck it in that golf bag there," and Herman pointed to the girl's very feminine looking golf bag.

"Well, well, why didn't you tell me that before?" yelled Hannibal.

"'Cause you chased me off the golf course the other day for talking to you while you were playing. You told me you'd kill me the next time I talked to you on the course," said the boy simply and Annabelle smiled. She was beginning to understand.

"Well, you didn't think that funny looking thing there was my golf bag? You didn't think I'd have a sissy looking golf bag like that, did you? Those kind of golf bags don't belong on a golf course any more than you——

"All right, I'm sorry. Now does that fix it up? Gee, isn't that putter a honey?" said Hannibal as he walked off the green with one arm around his niece and the other patting the tow head of Herman. "And say, Annabelle, I sure got a big kick out of beating you and I'm beginning to think I need a vacation. Maybe a trip would do me good——"

Two days later J. Hannibal Morrell walked up the gangplank of the steamship Olympia. His wife followed him—still at a respectable distance—for the president of a baking company was carrying his magic putter in his hand. Annabelle and Herman followed, for Hannibal had insisted that if they intended to play golf at St. Andrews, Moritz and Ceylon they had best take their own private caddy.

FOR THE WASHINGTON POST BOYS AND GIRLS

The Junior Post.

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., DECEMBER 11, 1932.

A REAL MERRY XMAS NEED NOT MEAN GREAT EXPENSE

Simple Remembrances Convey True Spirit of the Yuletide

Dear Post Boys and Girls: The editor of The Junior Post is very proud of the spirit displayed by the members of The Junior Post and the Knighthood of Youth in responding so quickly to the appeal of The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund.

As soon as the stories appeared in the paper telling of this fund we began to get responses from our boys and girls, who told us they were getting to work and getting other boys and girls to work, too. Of course, we want the boys and girls to gather up toys and gifts from their friends. But we do not want them to collect any money, as that must be sent directly to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, care of The Washington Post.

What a lot of fun you can have painting and mending toys and dolls. Girls, try your hands at doll dressing and knitting. It is certain you will all have a merrier Christmas if you feel that you have helped to make a Merry Christmas for some less fortunate boy or girl.

Hurry and send in your Christmas stories and poems. We want to make this Christmas number of The Junior Post the finest we have ever had.

Ding-How is very much pleased with his Christmas card—the one that won the $1 prize last Sunday and the two "Honorable Mention" ones. Ding-How is busy with his work as one of the chief aids to Santa Claus, dashing about to get the pets to match him. He says he is doing his Christmas shopping early though. It is certain that many of The Post boys and girls are doing their Christmas shopping early, too. The stores are thronged with bright, happy looking children on serious business bent.

Many will not have so much money to spend for Christmas this year, of course. That need not make our Christmas any the less merry. It is the thought and real spirit that goes with the gift that really counts.

There is a lady in this town who always gave her friends very handsome gifts. But this year she has little money so she is making the brightest, merriest Christmas she has ever had for herself and her friends. She is making tiny bits of silk, left over from dresses, and ribbons of other days into dainty little sachet bags and on every single one of them she is writing in gold ink, "Merry, Merry Christmas.". She secured her gold ink for 10 cents and her sachet from a vendor on the street for another 10 cents. Just think how pleased every one will be when they receive these fragrant, tiny gifts through the mail!

A girl who wants to remember everbody on Christmas Day is copying out the favorite poems of her friends in as pretty a hand as she can write in red ink on white paper and then drawing holly leaves with red berries about them and putting them in small red frames. What a very nice Christmas present!

Be sure to get your story, drawing or poem for the Christmas number in this week. Remember there is a prize of $1 for the best story on what "Christmas Means to Me."

Let's make Christmas very real this year to our families, our friends, our city and those who are not so well off as we are

The New Veterans' Hospital.

The new Veterans' Hospital, just outside of Columbia, S. C., has just been finished at the cost of $1,800,000. It was dedicated with appropriate exercises at the hospital on Sunday, November 27, 1932. The doctors who work at this beautiful hospital live on the grounds. The home for the nurses is also very attractive.

Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former Chief of Staff of the Army, and now president of The Citadel, in Charleston, S. C., attended the ceremony. The address of welcome was given by Dr. O. E. Hendron, chief medical officer of the hospital. Gov Blackwood of South Carolina responded.

The Origin of the Constitution.

In 1783 thirteen American States with fewer people in all of them than now make up the population of the City of New York had won their independence after seven years of war against the rule of a self-willed king. For several years more they tried to live under a loose form of government, which is known as a confederation.

This government was very weak, because each State wanted to have its own way in too many things. Therefore the States began to drift farther and farther apart.

In 1787 a number of the best and wisest men from all the States came together in a convention and drew up a stronger form of government, which is known as the Constitution of the United States. In 1789 it was put into effect with the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the Republic. Since then it has bestowed a greater amount of freedom and happiness upon a greater number of human beings than any form of government ever devised by man.

Friendship.

Friendship is a flower rare,
Blooming in a garden fair.
Tend it carefully day by day
And see what all your love will pay.

Friendship is a flower rare,
Blooming in a life so usually bare.
Tend it carefully day and night
Watch for aught it takes its flight.

Friendship is a flower rare,
In all gardens blooming there.
Water, food and sunshine give this
Before you begin this flower to miss.

The Pets' Corner

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree (Mascot of The Junior Post).

Woof, woof, woof! Bow, wow, wow, wow! What a time we are having down at the Santa Claus office of The Washington Post. Of course I have an office all to myself with only one or two other people who do not do as much work as I do in it. But I like to see that all the toys and gifts coming in for The Post Toy and Doll Fund are looked over properly. So far nothing to eat has come in. But, of course, we are specializing in toys and money.

Saturday I worked so hard that I had to rest when I got home after I ate my dinner, of course. An editor must live. I got up bright and early on Saturday morning and took my bath and put on my best overcoat and my nice new Christmas tie of red satin, because it is a good thing to get the Christmas spirit early. I was at my desk all morning Saturday telling everybody who came in about the Santa Claus lady and the toy and doll fund. I told the pets what to do about it, too. We have more toys and dolls and games and those tops go humming along. They put me in mind of some friends of mine who live near the place I visit in the country, those humming birds.

I was so busy last Saturday that I feel that I must have help on Saturday when the boys, girls and the pets are out of school and can come down to the Santa Claus room headquarters of The Post Toy and Doll Fund to gather up toys and funds for the Christmas stockings of boys and girls in Washington that busy old Santa Claus might not have time to go to see on Christmas Eve. Sandy Orken Terrier Gordon says he will come down Saturday. That is a great relief, although I hope he does not break my typewriter and make it spell wrong. Of course, Sandy does not wear glasses, so every one will know which is the editor as soon as he comes in the room.

Hop Toy is jealous because I get on the first page of the big Post all the time nowadays. Oh, well, my important position as the editor of Pets' Corner does carry honors as well as burdens. Hop Toy says he will come down and help. I will be glad to have him, but he always wants to try on my eyeglasses. I guess I will let him come, and put my eyeglasses in my vest pocket all the time he is there.

On Thursday I was so busy helping Irene Rich, that beautiful moving-picture star, receive gifts for The Post Toy and Doll Fund at the Willard. I had to inspect every one of them and see that they were all right and to say "thank you." When my voice got bad I could just wag my tail and everybody knew what I meant.

It is nice to be important. President Hoover, President-elect Roosevelt and myself know that honors carry work with them. Everybody knows the President and President-elect and everybody knows I am an editor.

Dear Ding-How: How is my old friend today? Fine I hope.

Oh, Ding-How, we have a new member at our house. It's a great big collie dog. I had a good time playing with him, yesterday. I like him very much. Mew.

BET (Charlotte Rea).
Crozet, Va.

Dear Ding-How: I would like to join your pets' corner. I see "Bet" reading The Post every Sunday. Since we have become good friends, she lets me read it too. I would have joined sooner, but I have been so busy singing that I haven't had time.

I'll try to write often from now on.
Your Canary friend,

The Pig's Dress.

Polly was a small girl in the eighteenth century. She lived on a farm with her mother and sister, Nancy. She was going away to a wedding with her mother and her sister, Nancy. Polly's mother had just made her a nice white dress. She had on a white bonnet and white shoes and stockings. She had told her to be careful and not get dirty.

In a little while Polly got tired of waiting for her mother and asked Nancy if she would take her out to see the pigs. So her sister took her out, but told her she could not stay very long. When they got there Polly climbed upon the fence looking down into the pig pen.

Her sister told her to get down before she fell. But Polly didn't want to get down and her sister was afraid she would cry and get her dress all spotted up, so she let her stay upon the fence.

All at once a pig grunted and started to run toward her She was so frightened that she fell right into the pig pen She cried for a long time after she got out.

When she got in the house her mother only laughed at her. Her mother asked her why she was crying and she said because her dress was a pig's dress and not hers at all. In a little while Nancy stopped her from crying and changed her dress. Polly said that she was not to have another pig's dress. Her mother was ready now, and so she forgot about the dress and was quite happy again.

Land or Sea.

Oh! say can it be land or sea?
That wanders on and on from me,
From boyhood days to manhood,
The little ship that carries wood.

With trees surrounding all around,
It makes the shadow o'er ground;
It brings us happy cheer to all!
It must be sea, without a crawl.

The bright waters creep between us.
I know some days it's only a discuss;
We stop to think about it all.
I want to listen and not to fall.

I know it's the sea moving onward,
Without shelter or reward.
I've wondered whether it's land or sea;
It's only sea in front of trees.

My Pet Cat.

As I was going for The Morning Post at the store I heard a little kitten crying.

I picked it up and took it home. As I went in the house I saw mother and I said, "I found a poor little kitten, but I know I can not keep it."

Mother saw how happy I was to do something for the little kitten so she let me keep it, and it has a good home, plenty of milk to drink and a nice place to sleep. Now she is a year old and catches big rats and all the mice.

She plays with me every night until bedtime. I don't think we ever lose anything by doing kind deeds to animals. He is the best cat we ever had.

Ten years ago a thought came to me and I wrote it down. I read it to my relatives and friends and today it is rapidly developing. This thing I am talking about is a vehicle which will go on land, like an automobile, on water, like a boat, and in the air, like an airplane.

If you will buy a copy of the December Science and Mechanics you will see illustrated on the front cover the very thing I thought of years ago. Inside the magazine you can read about the way this vehicle operates.

Although the operation of this vehicle is practical, my thought was to have the vehicle operated electrically by push buttons. When you want to change your traveling from land to air all you would have to do is press a button marked "Air" and the operation is accomplished automatically by electricity. This is my idea of a perfect land, water and air vehicle. You can easily attach an apparatus to the back of it and travel by rocket, propelling if you wish to make more speed. For sightseeing and touring this vehicle is ideal. I think that in time to come these vehicles will be used by everybody.

A Great Knight of Today.

Members of the Knighthood of Youth and the George Washington Junior Citizens would do well, in my opinion, to set Walter Johnson as an example for them to follow.

The knights of long ago were lovers of fair play and true sportsmanship. In this respect Walter Johnson has always seemed to be a perfect knight. Of course, we don't picture him as a hero clad in bright armor, but rather as a hero dressed in a neat baseball uniform as the former leader of our own Washington team. Baseball is his business, and in his business he has become well known as one who gave and expected fair play and true sportsmanship. He has earned the admiration and respect of all his team mates through his fair dealings.

Mr. Johnson has become known as "Sir Walter" because of his sportsmanship, honesty and nobility of character.

Nobility of character! How much lies in those three words! A gentle, kind manner, a pleasant voice, clean living habits, friendliness, a love of fair play, love of the truth—these are what I think make up nobility of character. We have all seen Walter Johnson, whether in person or in pictures. Let us recall his face. How kind and gentle it is! Doesn't it just seem to say, "I want to be your friend?" Doesn't it look honest and truthful? The word "noble" seems to me to be ideal in describing him. His features are those that I would expect to see on a real knight of King Arthur's court.

Walter Johnson always gives his task the best he can. He sees each job through to the finish, and feels no conceit in a triumph and no shame in a defeat. Why should he? He gave his best, and no one could ask for more.

I know that I will always uphold Walter Johnson as my "guiding star." He was and is a good, just and noble man—one worthy of being called a real knight.

Roosevelt High School

Occupying practically two whole blocks on Thirteenth street between Upshur and Allison streets, the new Roosevelt High School stands, carrying with it the old traditions of good old Business High. This new school is beautiful, both from the architectural viewpoint and from the hearts of millions of school children who together plan improvements in making this school the most desired one in the District. This three-story building is named after Theodore Roosevelt, whose remarkable, fine character is an aim for every child.

As you enter the friendly doors you are greeted by graceful archways and gleaming marble succeeded by spacious halls, in which rooms are so situated as to make it easy to locate them. The stairways are divided in two by an iron railing, left side to come down, right to go up. In this way traffic is faster and safer. Equipment for the rooms is all new except a few, which will later be replaced. In the armory dancing goes on every day during both lunch periods, and later on we hope to have moving pictures in the assembly for the amusement of the students. Just at present the school orchestra entertains them. The gym is in the right wing, while the auditorium is in the left. The lunchroom occupies quite a large space in the basement under the main building, where hot lunches can be had for a small sum of money. We hope to have a stadium before long.

Many interesting clubs are in motion. Some of interest are Amikeco Club, Girls' Auxiliary, Hilarodes, Girls' Glee and Boys' Glee Clubs, Literary, Kodak Club, Rifle team, Spanish Club and Science Club. Loads of interest for every one in any of these clubs.

Lessons in Spanish, French, office training, salesmanship, plus many others, can be obtained here. Diplomas are given at the end of a two-year course and a four-year course.

The school is conveniently located in the Northwest section of the city and can be reached easily by the Fourteenth street cars, Georgia avenue cars or by bus.

We hope to have the new Roosevelt High School loved by every one, just as old Business High has been for many years. ANNA YADGI (age 16).

The Minuet.

The minuet was danced so dainty,
Grandma told me that—
Men and women danced so dainty,
Grandma dressed in dress and hat.

Grandma looked so very pretty,
Dressed in flowered gown,
Pretty hat with feathers red,
Ribbons fluttering down.

Men and women with wigs of white,
Dancing dainty and gay;
They danced the graceful minuet
In my grandma's day.

Recruiting Members Are Hailed for Their Achievements

THE JUNIOR POST AIRSHIP

"There they are," said the editor, as they swung over the Capitol building on the first lap of their weekly tour of the world in The Junior Post airship with the pilot in the pilot's seat. "Congress is in session again and Washington becomes once more the legislative high spot of the Nation."

"Yes," said the pilot, "I took my sister's children to the opening for I think it is nice for boys and girls who live in Washington to get a real idea of the way the legislative wheels of the Nation go 'round."

"Well," said the editor, "there will be a very interesting time there this short session. Lame ducks and all.

"I had to laugh at my sister's little girl," declared the pilot. "She heard so much about lame ducks before we went to the opening of Congress that she expected to see a real duck hobbling about. I had to explain to her that a lame duck is simply a member of Congress who was defeated at the last election, but still has a seat in Congress until the 4th of March."

"I think the District of Columbia police handled that group of people who came from other States in trucks and with plenty of food and called themselves 'hunger marchers' very well," said the editor. "Of course, every citizen should have their rights, but marching and singing to the tunes of a 'red anthem' and waving a red flag is very un-American. The right of petition is one of the rights of the people of this great and glorious republic who enjoy privileges under the flag of the United States of America and whose marching song is the 'Star-Spangled Banner' and favorite anthems, 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee,' 'Hail Columbia,' 'The Stars and Stripes Forever,' and such glorious songs which stir all our hearts."

"Right you are," agreed the pilot as he turned his airship over the White House. "In times like these we must all stand four square for the country, the flag of the United States of America and the institutions which make this country great. There are no party lines and no dividing issues in straight patriotism for the good of the Nation; all for one and one for all for the good of all. No good will ever come of attempting to tear down government or lower our high standards."

"Hear, hear," said the editor, turning to look admiringly at the young man beside him. "We will have to send you on a speaking trip."

"There is President Hoover receiving some Boy Scouts," said the pilot, changing the subject. "They are fine young Americans and the country is safe in their hands."

"They are always on the job, these Boy Scouts," said the editor. "I hear they are going to help with the inauguration festivities in keeping the enthusiastic boys and girls in order and to help the police handle the crowds."

"Yes," said the pilot. "I have promised my sister's children to take them out on the 4th of March. I think it will be very interesting. Of course, President-elect Roosevelt has asked for a simple inauguration, but the parade of governors of States and their staffs, the parade of regiments and bands and distinguished people will make it a colorful occasion. I am glad, too, that there is to be an inaugural ball, although it will be unofficial in character and the proceeds will be given to charity. It will give the people who come to Washington a chance to see the distinguished men and women and to help worthy causes as well."

Then they flew about New York to see the sights of that busy city, out over New York Harbor at the Statue of Liberty, on over the Atlantic Ocean to London, where they saw the king and queen again shopping with their grandchildren, tiny Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, in the toy department of one of the London shops. The king was very much interested in the manner in which a toy automobile ran and put his tiny granddaughter, Princess Margaret Rose, in it. Perhaps he will tell Santa Claus that it is just the little girl's size.

Then they went on to Sweden to look down on the palace of the king at Stockholm to see the 72-year-old monarch, King Gustav, exercising in his private gymnasium and splashing about in his indoor swimming pool. This hearty and hale king walks very erect with a spring in his steps and beats much younger men at tennis, walking, swimming and horseback riding and hunting. He is a hard-working king, too, and beloved of his subjects.

"I think that is one of the most wonderful things that has been done in Italy," said the editor as they flew over Rome and looked down on the restoration of the ancient Roman Senate, after nine years of work." Just think, the Roman Senate that was rebuilt by Caesar in 52 B. C."

Junior Post Scribe.

On November 1, 1932, the Gordon Junior High School celebrated its fifth anniversary. Mrs. Herbert Hoover was our guest. Gifts were presented to her by different art classes. To remember this day, an oak tree was planted. The spade was presented to Mrs. Hoover by a Girl Scout. Many parents attended. In years to come we shall look back to this tree, bigger and better, remembering the day it was planted.

Deeds Well Done May Be Marked On Reminder Card

Hail to all the members of the Knighthood of Youth, especially to the members who have been so busy recruiting during the past few weeks. Those who have gone on a quest to enlarge the membership of this organization of boys and girls up to 12 years of age under the sponsorship of The Washington Post can put down many deeds well done on their reminder cards, and in their records for the year.

Write in to the Knighthood of Youth headquarters in The Washington Post and ask for a pin as a member of the Knighthood of Youth, thus join the procession of those who do a knightly deed daily to make a round on the knighthood ladder. Keep a careful record of the rounds. When you have performed 50 knightly deeds you will have completed the ladder that leads to the Castle of Achievement.

When you do this, write into the Knighthood of Youth headquarters of The Washington Post and tell of your experiences in reaching this goal. We will print the letter in the Knighthood page of The Washington Post. Just think how proud you will be when you accomplish this!

Christmas Time Emphasizes Giving Over Receiving

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" is a knightly sentiment many of us hear in church. It is particularly timely at this time of year, when all those who want to have the real Christmas spirit are thinking about the real spirit of giving.

Generosity is one of the greatest of human virtues. It should be emblazoned on the shield of every true member of the Knighthood of Youth.

To be generous is not only in going down street and buying Christmas presents or presents for other holidays, but to have the real spirit of giving. Giving up something you want yourself is a very generous thing to do.

But generosity is not only in giving things, but in having kind thoughts and performing kind deeds. Generous people are never too hasty to blame others either. Generous people always make an excuse, even for wrongdoers, and try to help them to do right.

Generous people always try not to misjudge other people. Even when things look pretty black against your playmates, when they are accused of wrongdoing, be sure to find out if the accusation is just. Never take advantage of weakness in another. That is not generous.

Fallen Leaves.

Fallen leaves—so shriveled up, so brown,
Cheerless and dead—
Like air castles that have fallen down,
Hearts that have bled.

Like fallen hopes, tears and broken dreams,
Sad, dreary things;
Oh! I'd best look at the sun that beams,
A bird that sings.

For my heart is full of joy and light,
Blue skies and cheer;
Hopes that are high as stars of the night,
Memories dear.

And so I would not watch or think of gloom,
As one who grieves,
For in my heart, thanks be, there is no room
For fallen leaves.

THE STORY BOOK LADY

"Mother says she wants to find out the latest editions of old favorites to have us put on our Christmas lists for our friends—books, of course, I mean," said Hazel as she and Sydney hurried along through the flying snow to meet the Story Book Lady and the members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and the Knighthood of Youth for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land. "She says she wants us to be sure to give a number of copies of 'Alice in Wonderland' and Louisa May Alcott's books, especially 'Little Women.' She says that all girls miss something if they have not read those books."

"I feel like that, too," said Susan. "Mother bought a half dozen copies of 'A Child's Garden of Verses,' by Robert Louis Stevenson's and 'Christmas Verses,' by Eugene Field. We have had such a good time."

"I want a book 'Christmas Carols' myself. I borrowed one last year, and we did have such a good time playing and singing them on Christmas Eve," said Margaret. "The ones I see in the shops, and I guess Santa Claus has seen them, too, are so prettily illustrated."

"Well, I think that is a very good idea," said the Story Book Lady, as the girls told them about their intention of putting old favorites on their Christmas book lists. "Old favorites and new ones, too! We can never tell which of the books we gather up one Christmas will last many, many Christmases and become traditions in the list of books for boys and girls."

"That is what I tell my grandsons," agreed Mr. Gnome, who keeps the gate of the Fairy Tale bridge that leads to Story Book Land. "I have made a list of the old favorites, of course, but we want to add some new ones to our list this Christmas. A goodly part of our Christmas budget will go for books, any way."

"That is a good idea, indeed," said the Story Book Lady, as she hurried through the gate which Mr. Gnome and his three grandsons, Blick, Flick and Little Mick, held open for her and the members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and the Knighthood of Youth.

"Oh! The Story Book Fairy is riding in an airplane made out of a sheet of golden Christmas carols," shouted Little Lilian, as the Story Book Fairy followed by Merry and Jolly, the Story Book fairy children, flew out of the Fairy Tale forest in airplanes sure enough made of golden paper on which was printed the words and music of Christmas carols.

"Of course," said the Story Book Fairy, flying about. "The queen always has us ride in this kind of plane before Christmas so that we will be familiar with Christmas carols on Christmas eve. We all sing carols in Fairy Story Land."

"Well, well, talking of Christmas," said a boy standing at the end of a book street, "come right in and see what I have to offer in the way of a Christmas book any boy, or girl, for that matter, would like."

"Of course, we will," said the Story Book Lady as she led the way. "Let me see. This is Dick in this nice book called 'Buddies of the Sea,' by Dillon Wallace. (Fleming Reveil, New York.) This is a great sea yarn, every one will acknowledge, and I hear that Santa Claus approves of it very highly."

"Well, if you want a book full of adventure, come down this book street. I am Jim Davis, and John Masefield, the poet laureate of England, has written all about me."

"So he has," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "Let me see. It is called 'Jim Davis,' by John Masefield. It is a tale of adventure that finds its way straight into the heart of any boy. It is a tale of the nineteenth century, when England was overrun by smugglers. This is written in a manner that only a master writer, such as Masefield, could write, and it will, without doubt, become a classic which will endure for many generations of boys and girls and men and women, too."

"Oh," said little Tommie, "Indians; I just love Indians. Can we go down this book street, dear Story Book Lady?"

"Of course we can," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "Let me see. It is called 'Takamere and Tonhon, Two Little Red Children,' by Anna Williams Arnett. (Beckley-Cardy & Co., Chicago.) It is a story of the Indians in the days before the coming of the white man, and it tells all the adventures the two children have on the prairies."

Winter.

Winter is coming fast;
I see it day by day.
Wind and snow are here at last,
Blowing, snowing, night and day.

The grass has all turned brown.
Jack Frost painted the leaves
Which have fallen to the ground.
Leaving the lonesome trees.

The flowers have drooped in sleep
Against the cold brown grass.
The snow and frost will keep
While the wind blows past.

They folded their hands in rest
'Till comes the warm, warm spring,
And the birds in their nest
Again begin to sing.

The birds have all gone away
To find a land that is warm.
The crow and sparrow will stay
To keep the insects from the farm.

The snow is falling, falling,
Covering field and tree;
And all the children are calling,
"Come out and play with me."

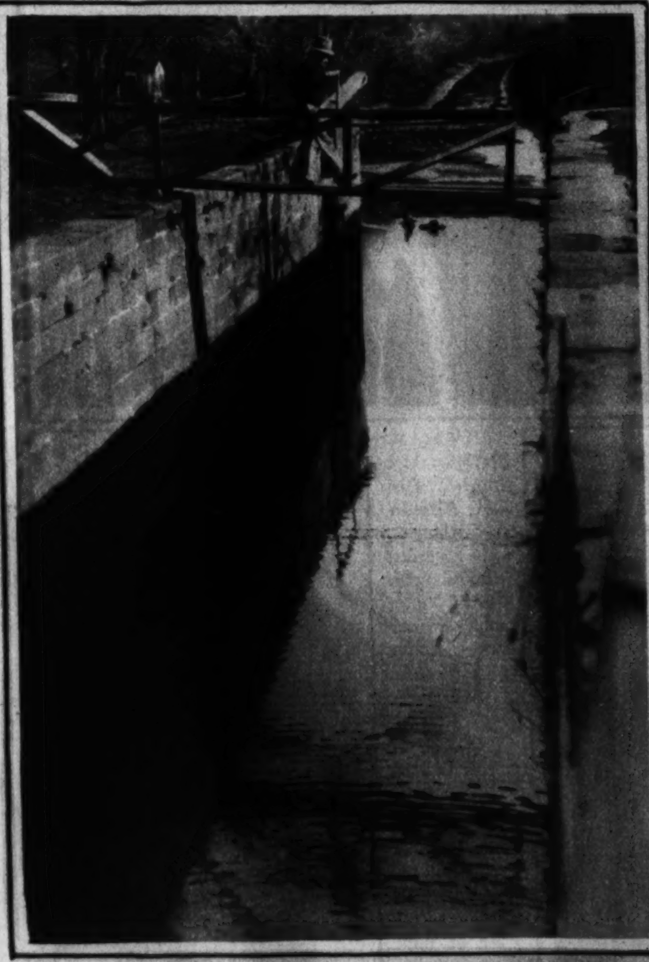
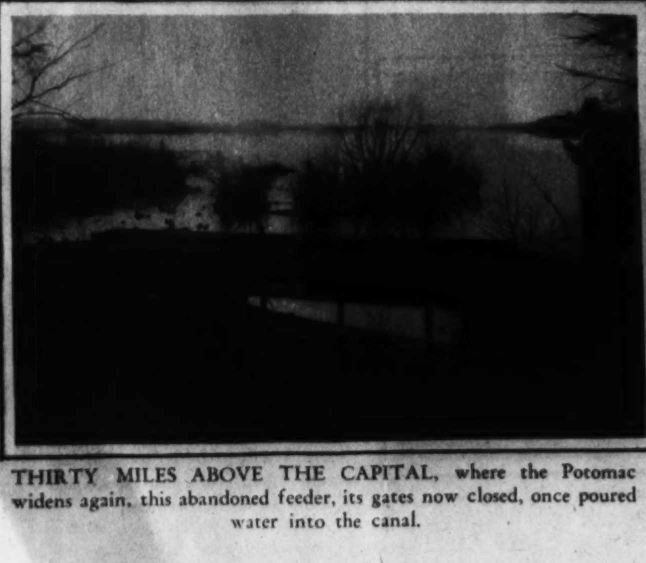
PROGRESS OVERTAKES A FAMOUS WATERWAY

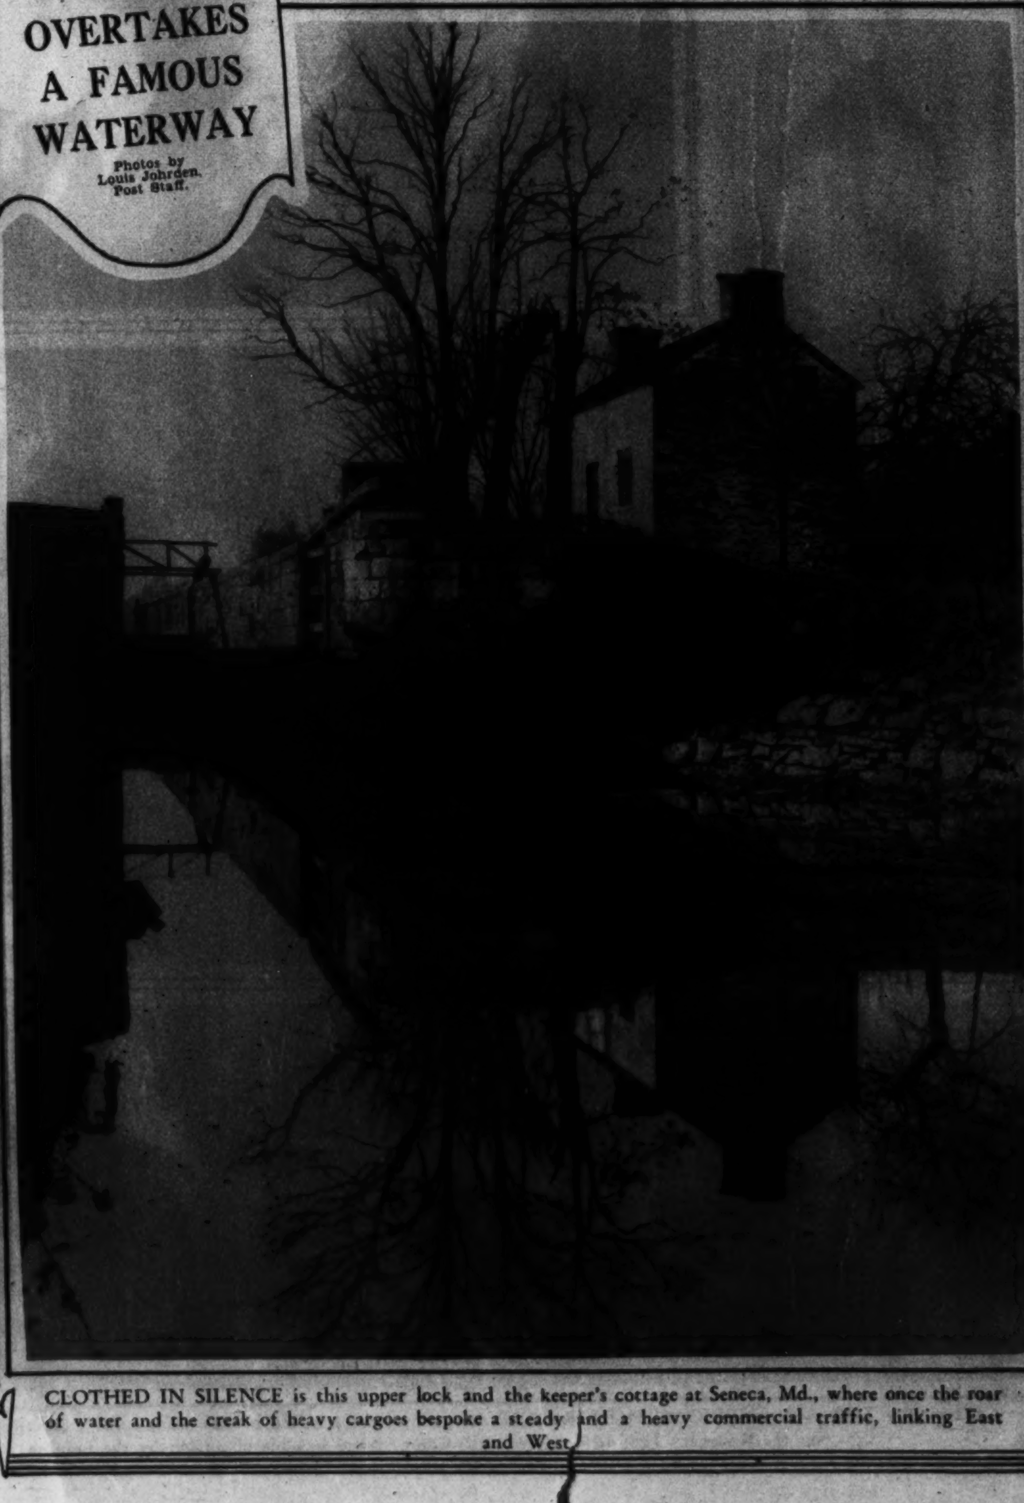
Photos by Louis Johrden, Post Staff.



A RUSTIC OLD GANGWAY, counterbalanced with rocks, still spans the once important Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.



THIRTY MILES ABOVE THE CAPITAL, where the Potomac widens again, this abandoned feeder, its gates now closed, once poured water into the canal.



CLOTHED IN SILENCE is this upper lock and the keeper's cottage at Seneca, Md., where once the roar of water and the creak of heavy cargoes bespoke a steady and a heavy commercial traffic, linking East and West.

CRUMBLING INTO DECAY is a once gayly painted canal boat, peeping through the underbrush at the edge of the canal, in which hardly enough water still flows to reflect surrounding foliage.

WHEELS STILLED FOREVER, this historic mill, located between the locks at Seneca, stands in ruins, only vaguely reminiscent of the days when long wagon trains hauled their heavy loads to its door.

DICK TRACY
Ooooo
TODAY'S STAMP IS A SKETCH OF TESS TRUEHEART, TRACY'S FIANCEE
(HERE'S A TIP KEEP YOUR EYE ON HER IN THE FUTURE)
AFTER RUNNING AWAY FROM THE DETENTION HOME JUNIOR SECRETED HIMSELF IN WHAT HE BELIEVED WAS AN ABANDONED HOUSE-BUT STRANGE NOISES AND HUSHED VOICES SOON CONVINCED HIM OTHERS WERE THERE BESIDES HIMSELF. HOWEVER BELIEVING THAT HE HAS KEPT HIS OWN PRESENCE UNKNOWN, HE DECIDES TO FURTHER EXPLORE THE HOUSE . . .
MANAGING TO STEAL UP THE RICKETY STAIRWAY, HE APPROACHES THE SECOND FLOOR.
WHOEVER WAS HERE MUSTA GONE, 'CAUSE I HEARD A CAR LEAVE A WHILE AGO AN' EVERYT'ING IS QUIET.
I LOOKED THROUGH DE KEYHOLE OF ONE OF DE DOORS DOWNSTAIRS AN' SAW A LOT OF AUTOMOBILE TIRES AN' HEADLAMPS AN' TIRE CHAINS IN D' ROOM - BUT I CAN'T FIGURE DIS PLACE OUT.
CHEE WHILIKERS!! MORE AUTOMOBILE TIRES- WELL FER ——
SUDDENLY, HEARING A NOISE BEHIND HIM, JUNIOR TURNS IN TIME TO SEE A FINGER CROOKED AROUND THE DOOR SLOWLY DRAWING IT OPEN. . . . .
QUICKLY GRABBING THE KNOB — HE SLAMS THE DOOR SHUT WITH ALL HIS MIGHT . . . .
OUCH
WHOEVER DAT WAS I SURE SQUASHED HIS FINGER IN DAT DOOR I GOTTA GIT OUTTA HERE NOW—
IT'S LUCKY DERE'S A DRAIN PIPE HERE — CHEE-ALL DAT STUFF MUSTA BEEN STOLEN AN DE THIEVES MUST BE USING DAT HOUSE FOR A STORE ROOM.
MEANWHILE, TRACY STILL BLAMES THE CHIEF FOR THE BOY'S DISAPPEARANCE. . .
DICK, THE CHIEF'S BEEN CALLING ME OVER THE PHONE AND TRYING TO GET IN TOUCH WITH YOU. BETTER GIVE HIM A RING.
LISTEN, TESS, I CAN'T REST TILL I FIND THAT BOY - I'LL CALL THE CHIEF LATER.
I'VE SCOURED THE TOWN FOR THE BOY, BUT HE'S EVIDENTLY LEFT THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY. IF I WERE ONLY SURE THAT THAT GUY, STEVE, WOULDN'T GET HOLD OF HIM AGAIN I'D FEEL BETTER.

Port Royal, once characterized as the "wickedest city" has a peaceful, though desolate existence now under the waves off the coast of Jamaica. The once bustling city of vice, where pirates gathered to enjoy the profits of their profession, was sunk beneath the sea by an earthquake.

By some strange quirk of nature the buildings were not shaken down, nor was the town badly wrecked—it was just gently lowered to the floor of the ocean, where today its buildings still stand beneath the waves. On a calm day one may see the buried city as his ship enters the harbor of Kingston.

The old Port Royal cathedral tower was not damaged by the quake, and its bell still swings to and fro with the movement of the water, its dim and deadened sound sometimes reaching the surface.

Fed mysteriously from the sky, yet without rain or snow, the dew ponds of Sussex Downs, somehow are always replenished with their water, even though stock drink freely from them during the rainless seasons.

An extraordinary hole-in-one, which experts say cannot be duplicated was made by Willie Low, then assistant pro at the Rancho Golf Club, Los Angeles, when he drove 285 yards all up hill to ace the 15th. The turf was new at the time giving the ball a much greater roll than it would have now.

Mont Blanc, one of the most noted of Alpine mountains, is not in the land of the Alps, Switzerland, except that part of its base spreads into that country. The peak of Mont Blanc is located in France.
